OUT OF THE ROYAL TOUR OF CANADA MANY PEOPLE WILL EMERGE as nationally known characters, perhaps internationally, for their contribution to the success of the tour, the pleasure of Their Majesties and the satisfaction of the Canadian people. Just to cite one, Gerald Richardson, of Toronto, press photographer, whose photographs of the Royal Family have been praised far and wide and eagerly printed by many newspapers, including even the blase New York dailies, who up to now would cynically sneer at the possibility of anything out of the ordinary coming out of Canada. Even that picture paper, The New York Mirror, fell in line May 15, with a large picture of the Royal Family at Windsor, taken by Gerald Richardson, the Toronto boy, whose pictures have won him fame and a place among the big shots of press and camera men of the world. Gerald Richardson had the distinction of being received at Windsor Castle, by Royal Command, and being privileged to produce some of the finest pictures of the Royal Family that have been taken, which have been reproduced in hundreds of newspapers in Canada, the United States and across the sea. THE S.S. EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA will certainly have a claim to fame as having carried the King and Queen of Great Britain safely across the sea to visit Their Dominion of Canada and also the United States. This noble steamship was built in Germany and came into British ownership as one of the spoils of war. Although built in Germany, the engines were built in Glasgow, Scotland, providing a rare combination of strength, skill, speed, safety and comfort, with British ownership, German construction and Scotch machinery. It is interesting to note that a Belleville citizen and his wife are passengers on the return trip to England, after landing the Royal party at Quebec. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Payne booked passage on the Empress of Australia sailing Thursday, May 18. Sunday evening a farewell service was held in St Thomas Church when the congregation said goodbye and God-speed to Rev. Mr. Payne and Mrs. Payne. They will spend four months in England, where Mr. Payne will attend a reunion of his family, meeting seevral brothers who have been separated years in foreign countries. Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne served in Western Canada as a missionary, enduring the hardships of life in the frontier settlements and serving with credit to himself and distinction to his church in the Western field. There he met his wife. After service in the World War and returning to the East, this popular clergyman has served several parishes with success and since taking charge of St. Thomas' Parish has made many friends and conducted a very successful ministry. Belleville citizens generally wish Rev. and Mrs. Payne bon voyage, a happy holiday and a safe return.

Electrolysis by a Skilled Operator Best Method of Removing Superfluous Hair

One of the distressing ailments that often causes an inferiority complex and may lead to actual mental trouble is superfluous hair. A girl or woman with an otherwise clear complexion may have a light growth of hair on her lip, and if she is a brunette, this hair is very noticeable. Superfluous hair may occur anywhere on the body.

For years dermatologists have advised patients to undergo electrolysis by which the electric current destroys or removes these hairs one at a time. Unfortunately, the results obtained by some patients have been disappointing in that they have lost time and money and in a number of cases their appearance is worse than before undergoing treatment. These results are usually due to the operator lacking the proper skill.

In an endeavour to show that electrolysis is still the best form of treatment and to prevent loss and disappointment to many of these individuals, Dr. Anthony C. Cipollaro, New York, in The Journal of the American Medical Association says —

"Electrolysis is far from being a safe procedure in unskilled hands. Carelessness and ignorance applied to electrolysis may cause injuries to the skin which are objectionable, disfiguring, painful, and even, at times, dangerous."

On the other hand, electrolysis is the only method for permanent and safe removal of unwanted hairs on various parts of the body.

After outlining the type of apparatus to use, the method of preparing the skin to remove fat or other substances, the method of inserting the 'electric needle' to the full depth of the follicle or hair canal, the strength of the current and length of time needle is left in the follicle before hair is removed by the special forceps, the following advice is given

1.—Hairs should not be removed from inflamed areas.

2—A test treatment should be given to learn how much the skin (of other parts of the body) can stand.

3—One should always use the smallest amount of current that will effectively and permanently remove hair. A mild current suffices for upper lip.

4—A hair adjoining one that is being removed should not be removed at the same time as this may cause inflammation

5—Needle should not be left in follicle longer than is absolutely necessary.

6—Only about three or four hairs are removed from an area about the size of a dime.

Treatments last about thirty minutes and are given once a week.

HANDBILL NUISANCE

A correspondent writes to the Spectator complaining about the practice of distributing "unwelcome handbills to private homes and apartment houses". In his letter he protests especially against the habit of pucking advertising bills in private letter boxes. That is, certainly, objectional enough, but perhaps it is still worse to have these sheets thrown carelessly on verandas, to be blown about by the wind, disfiguring the lawns and cluttering up the premises generally. A few days' absence will bring the most untidy conditions, to the annoyance of the householder, who is entitled to better protection.

It is to be strongly doubted whether, under such circumstances, these "dodgers" can bring much business. They are apt to antagonize potential customers, especially when, as complained in the letter, no notice is taken of telephoned protests.

The public is expected to keep the streets free from litter, and makes an effort to co-operate with the authorities in doing so. They should not be asked to engage in an involuntary paper-chase or have their letter-boxes loaded with a mass of unwanted material. —Hamilton Spectator.

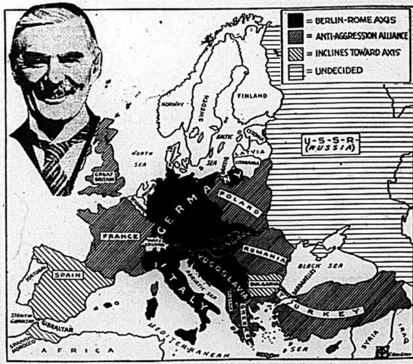
Anglo-Turkish Pact Aids Non-Aggression Bloc



Map ABOVE shows how the addition of Turkey to the British-French inspired non-aggression bloc in eastern Europe gives the democratic nations important strategic advantages over the Rome-Berlin axis countries. Under the British-Turkish pact Turkey agrees to come to Great Britain's aid in event of an attack on Egypt and Palestine and to permit British warships to have access to the Black Sea via the Dardanelles to aid Rumania in event of an attack. In turn the British will aid Turkey against any attack in the eastern Mediterranean sea. French and Soviet Russian treaties with Turkey are now in discussion. Photo shows Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain in a prophetically happy mood— the Anglo-Turkish pact being a diplomatic victory for him.

a land blessed with the noblest political heritage ever handed down, a land with infinite resources, a land of infinite appeal from the standpoint of scenery and climate and a land inhabited by a people whose inspiration is British ideals and in the opportunities this Dominion offers.

This tour has been auspiciously begun and it will henceforth be the chief thought of the Canadian people, of the peoples of the Empire and of the Homeland as well as of nations outside the Empire. Canadians trust that it will be an inspiration to the Rulers to whom they now pay tribute and homage.

Mr. Hugh Simmons is the guest of his brother, Mr. R. R. Simmons, Perth, Ont.

Miss Eva Harrison of Bancroft, visited Mrs. B. Chase on Sunday.

Special Mother's Day Services were held in the local churches on Sunday. Large congregations attended and the floral decorations presented a colorful and pleasing appearance. At the United Church four children were baptized by the Rev. J. P. Lane during the evening service.

Mrs. Blanche Reid, who has spent the past year with Miss M. Gay returned to her home near Stirling last week.

Mrs. E. Osterhout spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Osterhour, Murray Township.

A delightful party was held in Trinity Church Parish Hall on Friday evening, May 12th., when the Anglican Young People's Association sponsored a shower for Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Niveson who were recently married. Mr. Niveson was a member of Trinity Church choir and President of the A.Y.P.A.

During the evening several tables of cards were enjoyed after which the presentations were made.

On behalf of the A.Y.P.A. Miss Helen Wallace, treasurer of the Association, read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Niveson and Mr. Roy Chapman, vice-president, presented them with a beautiful pair of crystal candlesticks.

On behalf of the congregation of Trinity Church, Rev. A. S. McConnell in his usual witty vein, gave an appropriate address and Miss Eleanor MacRostie made the presentation of a handsome walnut coffee table.

Mr. Niveson on behalf of his bride and himself expressed sincere thanks for the lovely gifts and extended a cordial invitation to all to visit them in their new home in Glen Miller.

Delicious refreshments were then served by the Young People and one of the most enjoyable parties ever held in the Parish Hall came to a close.

The Frankford division of the Upper Canada Bible Society will meet in the Parish Hall on Friday evening. A speaker from Toronto will address the gathering.

Plainfield

Plainfield—Two interesting services were held in Plainfield United Church on Mother's Day with 71 present at the Sunday School in the morning and 121 attending the evening service. The church was nicely decorated with ferns, pussy willows, geraniums and cut flowers.

In the Sunday School the program provided by the Ontario Religious Educational Council was followed throughout The superintendent, Mr. Arthur F. Hall, was assited by Mr. Joseph Gow and Mr. Frank Hicks.

The drama entitled "The Glory of a Nation" was given by Carl Flatt (teacher), and Keith Dunning, Irvine Moore, Garth McCreary and Walter Elliott (scholars). The aim of the drama was to show that there are many people, mothers for example, who are worthy of medals who do not receive one but this neglect does not subtract from the value of their service. The tory, "The Room of Gold" was attractively told by Mrs. Harry Harrison. The theme of this revealed that all the good deeds done are kept on record. During the service Mrs. Willie Sills sang "That Little Boy of Mine" with Mrs. Ralph Wilder at the piano. The offering which amounted to $3.02 was received by Misses Margery Creeper and Irene Hall.

A choir composed of the following mothers, Mrs. A. F. Hall (pianist), Mrs. Bernice Moore, Mrs. Walter Hall, Mrs. Fred Hall, Mrs. Fred Prindle, Mrs. Willie Sills, Mrs. Erle S. Denyes, Mrs. J. F. Everson, Mrs. Wilbur Elliot, Mrs. James W. Hamilton. Mrs. Earl Outwater, Mrs. Harry McCreary and Mrs. Robert Dunning contributed three very appropriate selections during the evening service. In "The Sweet Old Songs I Heard My Mother Sing" Mrs. Harry McCreary and Mrs. Bernice Moore took the duet. Mrs. Willie Sills sang "My Task", the third selection was entitled "If I Could Hear My Mother Pray." The minister spoke on "The Greatest Heroine Since the World Began."

At Bethel United Church service on Sunday morning a choir of mothers led the singing and contributed a number with Miss Mae Stevenson assisting with a beautiful solo. Miss Mildred Ketcheson presided at the piano.

Mr. Harold Martin of Stirling made some busines calls through here on Thursday.

Miss Minnie Shepherd of Kingston visited friends here on Sunday.

Mrs. Jack Gow is a present a patient in the Belleville General Hospital. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Master Jack Dison and Miss June Mason of Belleville spent the week-end with their grandparents, Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Everson.

During the service in the United Church on Sunday evening, Evert John Douglas Rollins, infant son of Mr and Mrs. Orval Rollins was baptized.

Little Maxine Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Hall is in Belleville General Hospital suffering with an eye infection.

Mrs. Wilbur Elliott and family and Mrs. Gerald Swan and family spent Sunday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hall.

Mr. Kenneth Kleinsteuber spent Sunday with his parents at Sulphide.

Linemen on the Frontier fight desperately against wind and weather, freezing sleet and blinding storms. Aiding them to keep the lines clear, because your call must go through, is our whole organization of operators, technicians, plant engineers, service men and general staff. Every day five million telephone calls travel over the voice-ways of Ontario and Quebec.

Every Call is URGENT!

A fire alarm means action: instant action! To the firemen, as to the telephone people, each day "relentlessly chops out its grist of accidents and emergencies".

Only a few of the 5,600,000 telephone calls handled daily in Ontario and Quebec come from people in desperate danger.

But all calls must go through at split-second speed. This requires the highest standard of telephone plant, a highly-trained personnel and never-ending research.

Your Telephone organization, like your fire department, is prepared for anything—anytime. It mobilizes men and resources for emergencies like blizzards, storms and floods. Special technicians quickly arrange telephone conferences, traffic surveys, international hook-ups.

And no matter what the situation, there is always instant attention from "the voice with a smile."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The wedding procession)t,dgk'p

Today's smart, perfectly-managed wedding follows a certain pattern in the formation of the procession and the recessional. This basic pattern is adhered to whether the wedding is formal or informal, elaborate or simple, large or small, a church wedding or a house wedding.

This is the order of the procession—

Ushers, walking together, two by two, the shortest leading.

Bridesmaids, walking together, two by two, the shortest leading

Maid of honor (or matron of honor), walking alone.

Bride, with her father. Bride walks at right of her father.

And here are the answers to some questions that may be in your mind—

First, in the well-planned wedding of today, the bridesmaids are not 'paired off' with the ushers, in either the procession or the recessional. And, in the recessional, the maid of honor does not walk with the best man.

There should be an even number of ushers—two, four, six, eight—and an even number of bridesmaids. But it is not necessary to have the same number of bridesmaids and ushers. That is, you may have, for example, four bridesmaids, and six ushers, or two bridesmaids and eight ushers.

Usually, there is only one "honor" attendant, the maid of honor, who walks alone. If the bride decides to have both a maid of honor and a matron of honor, or two maids of honor, they may be dressed alike and walk together. Or they may wear contrasting costumes and walk alone, the one closer to the bride in relationship or friendship (the actual witness) directly preceeding the bride and her father.

If there is a flower girl, she walks between the chief honor attendant and the bride. If there are two flower girls, they walk together. If there are pages (seldom seen now), they walk after the bride, holding up her train.

Nowadays attendants of either the bride or bridegroom may be either married or unmarried. If an attendant of the bridegroom—his best man, for instance—is married, it is not necessary for the bride to invite his wife to be one of her attendants. And, if the same way, it is not necessary for the bridegroom to invite as one of his attendants the husband of the bride's matron of honor or any other attendant.

In the procession each pair follows the pair directly in front by four paces. (These beats of time are carefully determined in the rehearsal). But in order to make the entrance of the bride dramatic, there is an interval of eight beats between the maid of honor (or whoever directly precedes the bride) and the bride and her father. (Each member of the procession should begin with left foot forward.)

Whether the ceremony is performed in church or at home, the procession is exactly the same. In a house wedding there is no recessional.

At the first note of the wedding march, the clergyman comes into the chancel from the vestry. In a house or hotel wedding he enters by a door specified for convenience. In either case, he is followed by the bridegroom, and a pace or two behind the bridegroom comes the best man.

The Recessional

At a church wedding the recessional is the reverse of the processional. In the smart wedding, only one couple, the bride and bridegroom, walk together. In the pageantry of the recessional, there is dramatic value in having the highlight concentrated on only one couple.

There is the order of the recessional—

Bride and bridegroom, the bride on her husband's right arm

Maid of honor (or matron of honor) walking alone

Bridesmaids, walking together, two by two

Ushers, walking together, two by two.

If there are flower girls, they walk directly after the bride and bridegroom.

As the recessional starts down the aisle, the best man usually goes to the vestry to perform the duties that have been assigned to him—to hand to the clergyman the fee, and if other arrangements have not been made ,to take the bridegroom's hat and coat to the happy couple's car at the front of the church.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Too Serious For Sixteen

Dear Miss Fairfax

My daughter, who is almost 16, is rather tall and very attractive looking. We've allowed her to have boys and girls come to the house over week-ends, since she was 12, and even allowed her to go to an occasional movie with one of the boys. I always thought it better to have them come to the house, rather than meet outside on the sly, as so many do.

Now she is becoming too much interested in a boy, who will soon be 20. He comes over every Saturday and takes her to the movies. She's very good about coming home early though, and gets in around 11.30. Her dad is beginning to find fault with her because she goes with the same boy all the time, as he doesn't think she's old enough to go "steady". I thought it was better to go with one than half a dozen. Do you think I'm right in this?

Anxious

My dear lady, have you forgotten the rule "There's safety in numbers?" If you don't want your daughter to become serious over one boy, the better plan is to try and lead her attention elsewhere.

Why don't you try breaking up the Saturday night "date" by suggesting that she give a party for her friends on that night? You might get someone else to ask her out for that evening. But you will have to use tact, and yet more tact in dealing with Sweet Sixteen.

In Love With a Rich Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 25 years old, a college graduate, and am starting my law practice. I am very much in love with a young lady, whose father is one of the richest men in our town. Her mother left her quite a bit at her death, so the girl is well off in her own right. But alas ,I am poor, and right now my prospects for the immediate future are not very bright.

I hesitate about asking her to marry me, because I couldn't support her in the manner to which she's been accustomed, but I'm almost sure she wouldn't turn me down on this account. The only thing is that she would insist on living on her own money, or beyond my means. I don't want this to happen, and would like you to help me solve this problem, please.

Hal

Very often, marrying a rich girl and living on her money tends to ruin a man's character, unless he's made of real stuff. It all depends on the man and how much ambition he possesses. If he's really ambitious, his wife's wealth may help him achieve success. Sometimes a father-in-law's influence can do great things, but if you think it's going to make you soft and parasitical —better not marry.

Engaged to One But Thinks of the Other

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 20 years old and have a very fine position. For the past eight months I've been engaged to a wonderful man. We planned to be married twice, but I keep putting it off because I believe I love somebody else. I feel sure the other man loves me too, but he won't say so because I'm engaged to be married.

I think of this second man very often, and sometimes when my fiance speaks to me I don't even hear what he is saying. I really don't want to hurt him, and believe I love him, but somehow I feel I care more for the other boy. Do you think it's wise to marry under these circumstances, and would I be happy?

In Doubt

Perhaps these doubts that assail you are the result of great conscientiousness, and that is an asset in every life. It would be the greatest mistake in the world to find, after you marry one man, that you wish you had married another I am rather disposed to think that you are not sure of yourself, and ought to wait a while longer. Would it be possible to take a vacation for about a month, away from the city, having no communication with either of these men during that time? Perhaps this will help you to make the final decision. I hope so.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the W.M.S. of the United Church of Shannonville met at the home of Mrs. A. MacDonald on Thursday afternoon, May 4th with twenty ladies in attendance. Mrs. Claude Clarke, group leader in charge opened the meeting with a call to worship. After the opening hymn, Mrs. (Rev.) Craig offered proyer. Mrs. Claude Clarke gave a short reading on "Stewardship" and led in the responsive reading of Psalm 33. The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. S. Boltstridge. Mrs. Orval Stratton gave a reading "The Parable of the Selfishman" from the Missionary Monthly. Roll was called by the secretary and brought forth a good response of verses containing the word "Mother". Minutes of the last meeting were given by the Secretary and approved. The President, Mrs .Everett Stratton read a letter of thanks from Mrs. George Lazier for sympathy and flowers sent at the time of her bereavement. Mrs. Stratton expressed thanks for the card received when she was ill and Mrs. Robertson also thanked the members for the same. Mrs. Claude Clarke read a poem entitled "Bring Thy Gifts to the Altar". Mrs. Everett Stratton led in prayer. Mrs. H. Shetler gave a Mother's Day reading and Mrs. W. D. Craig gave one in poetry on the same subject. Papers prepared by Mrs. W. S. Dies on the next chapter of the Study Book were given by Mrs. F. MacFarlane, Mrs. Robertson, Mrs. Saul MacFarlane, Mrs. Sam Elliott, Mrs. A. Houston, Mrs. Orval Stratton and Mrs. Claude Clarke. After the closing hymn the benediction was read by Mrs. C. Clarke. Collection was $3.00; for flower fund $1.03. The Easter offering was also received at this meeting. A delicious lunch was served by the committee in charge and a pleasant social time was enjoyed by all present.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES SEE McFEE

Exercise to Beauty

JO ANN SAYERS. . . gets much of her activity on the tennis court

By HELEN FOLLETT

LITTLE Sit-in-the-house might as well stop hoping to make the beauty grade. No girl can be fair to the eye without vitality; to possess that element of health and good looks it is necessary to scamper around out-of-doors, lap up the ozone, take plenty of exercise. Why coddle oneself, look like blanched celery when one can be as fresh and radiant as a summer rose?

Activity is a law of life, my paper children. Too many women spend their lives indoors, have no interest in hoofing off a brisk walk, enjoying a game of golf or tennis. The bridge table claims them and that's all right if they take proper care of their bodies which they can't do without a certain amount of muscular exertion.

Get out-of-doors every day, rain or shine. A brisk walk on a rainy day will do wonders for an uncertain complexion. Blood streams go at a gallop, the flesh becomes warm, the skin functions normally, pink carnations bloom in the cheeks.

Exercise chugs up a good appetite, leads to restful sleep.

Sit around all day and by the time you're 40 you'll look like 60. Your only hope then will be in daily visits to the rejuvenating department of some beauty shop.

In case an eyebrow is destroyed because of burns or wounds, the plastic surgeon can make repairs. A tiny strip of the scalp with its hirsute foliage is cut out and transplanted. This makeshift eyebrow has to have a hair cut now and then, but it serves.

It was believed some years ago that permanent blushes could be achieved with the tattoo needle, but nothing came of it. Deformed noses can be remodeled, the double chin can be deleted, wrinkles around the eyes corrected.

These treatments are expensive. Only a surgeon of good standing in the medical profession should be consulted. If you fancy you'd like to have your portrait remodeled, ask your family doctor to direct you to a reputable specialist.

Nominate Officers For Women of Moose

Last evening in the Moose Auditorium the regular meeting of the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 435 took place. Senior Regent York presiding.

Nomination of officers took place for the fiscal year 1939-1940 election to take place at the next meeting.

Ladies-in-Waiting Eager to See Styles Of Canadian Women

By R. K. Carnegie

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 17— (CP)—Lady Katharine Seymour and Lady Nunburnholme, the two charming and gracious Ladies-in-Waiting to Queen Elizabeth, are looking forward to seeing the "many smart dresses" worn by Canadian and United States women.

"I imagine", said Lady Nunburnholme, "the reason one finds women on this side of the Atlantic turning out so smartly clothed is that they are able to buy charming frocks at such low prices. Clothes at corresponding prices in England would not have as much style."

Lady Nunburnholme has been described as the most beautiful woman in England. She laughed when told this aboard the liner Empress of Australia, as the ship was bearing the King and Queen to Quebec, and remarked —"Well, I guess I should be very pleased."

Lady Katharine could "hardly wait to see Canada" for it is her first trip, although Lady Nunburnholme has been to the Dominion once before.

"I am sure I am going to enjoy every moment of our stay", said Lady Katharine. "Isn't it a pity our stay in Ottawa is being cut so short? It would have been so much nicer to have been in Ottawa than out in the fog and ice of the Atlantic".

Lady Katharine was Lady-in-Waiting to Queen Mary for some years and is reputed to have introduced the use of the typewriter by Royal Ladies-in-Waiting. Her husband, Sir Reginald Seymour died last October.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Complications Attending Mumps Bring Grave Danger

Mumps is not an important disease because it makes a child's face swell up, because it makes him very uncomfortable or even because it makes it difficult for him to eat. Like the other infectious diseases we have studied, its dangers lie in the complications which may occur in its wake.

Most common of these complications, and one which occurs only too often when proper care hasn't been taken to keep the child in bed, is when the disease "goes down" as they say, and settles in the glands connected with the reproductive organs. Not only does this cause prolongation of the illness, but frequently it also causes a permanent loss of function of these glands.

A child developing such a complication will be sick, sore and miserable for a few days, and then the pain and swelling will disappear. The unfortunate part of it is that these glands sometimes begin to grow smaller, gradually, so that eventually sterility may result. This complication is very serious with adults when they contract the disease.

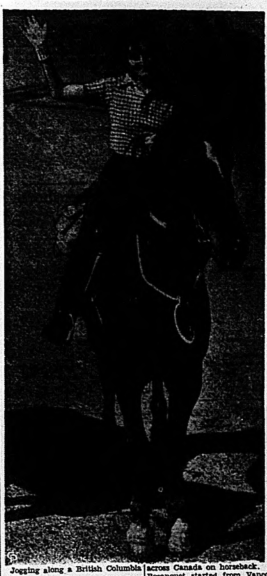
A second but rather rare complication is mumps meningitis, a symptom of which is convulsions. For a few days the child is gravely ill, and for a while it seems certain the patient will die. Fortunately, however, these patients do very well. I have often read about this complication but, frankly, in all my practice, which has included a good many mumps cases, I've never seen one.

The most important part of the treatment for mumps is to keep the child in bed for several days after all signs of the swelling have gone. The child should be fed warm, smooth fluids, such as warm milk, and foods of a like nature, for it is important to keep up the strength of the patient.

The disease is usually contracted by direct contact with someone who has it. The germs are in the salivary glands. It isn't very often that a person carries the disease from an ill to a well person, but when there is an epidemic in your neighborhood, it is wise to be careful

Sometimes a child will have mumps on one side only. I know it is an old belief that when this happens, this child is likely to catch the disease again, perhaps years later, in the side that has escaped infection. I have never found this belief to be based on fact. Whether you have the disease on on side or both, you build up an immunity against future attacks of the ailment.

Across Canada on Horseback



Jogging along a British Columbia road is Mary Bosanquet, 25-year-old English girl, now on her way across Canada on horseback. Miss Bosanquet started from Vancouver and the 3,600 mile trip to Montreal will occupy four months.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men
Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"I wonder shall we ever see it all again," Chrissie said under her breath.

"I wonder!" Hall echoed.

At the sound of a voice, utterly unexpected, which spoke behind them, Chrissie and Hall turned simultaneously—cried out almost in one breath:

"Leonie!"

She stood there, hands in the pockets of her grey coat, the black, three-cornered hat tilted forward to shade her eyes, looking so precisely as she had upon the Gloriana that Hall glanced involuntarily up at the main-mast, as though seeking the familiar house-flag of the Atlantic ferry. It was as though time itself had taken a great stride backwards, of eighteen months or more.

"Leonie, how amazing that you should be here!" Chrissie gasped.

"Why? Was I not, until lately, one of the household of an officer in the Indian Army?" Her tones were so level, so unstressed, that it was perhaps only Hall's ultra-keen ear which caught the faint inflection of biting scorn.

"Yes.... of course, yes—only.." Chrissie stammered confusedly, and Leonie smiled.

"Not, that I asked for a passage as the Maharajah's ex-governess. I merely used his name and my experience at Khotalghar to get another post of the same kind with a Colonel's wife, since money alone would not do it. I intended to come by this boat if it was in any way possible in order to be with you two...." Her eyes softened slightly, then resumed their former alert watchfulness. "That is, if neither of you has an overwhelming objection to my company," she added abruptly.

"You know me better than that" Hall answered, while Chrissie added earnestly:

"Oh, Leonie, I'm so glad you're here!"

"That's well, then. I should have been extremely bored with the exclusive company of my colonel's wife and her progeny. There's nothing to do, really; They've got an ayah, whose passage I paid, by the way, so as to secure the privilege of travelling to Marseilles as one of Colonel Belman's party. A queer, topsy-turvy business, if you come to think of it!"

"You're going to France then — not England?"

"Certainly not England."

"And—you're not coming back to India?"

"No. I failed there, or I shouldn't be here. And if I hadn't failed, you might not be here either."

"Oh, she's talking like the Sphinx again!" Chrissie looked across at Hall. "That always means she doesn't mean to tell anything."

"There's nothing to tell," Leonie said.

She turned away abruptly and for the moment no more was said. It was weeks later, indeed, not until they were nearing Marseilles, on a black and windless night in the Mediterranean, that Hall questioned her further. Constantly as they were all three together during the voyage, there had been curiously little intimate conversation between them.

The steamer was forging steadily through the darkness, one of a convoy of dim, lightless shapes, part of the very night itself. That sense of stealth, of the presence of an unseen enemy, marked the difference between these nights at sea, and those of peace-time voyagers. It was as though the ship herself were groping, blindfold, communicating her own feeling of helplessness to all those on board.

Hall, standing with Leonie near the bows, overlooking the forecastle head, made a little restless movement.

"I'm glad we're near the end of the voyage—although there is still time—"

"But nothing will happen." He could just make out the pale blur of Leonie's profile beside him as she spoke. "Oh! don't ask me how I know! I do—that's all."

"And when we reach France — have you still no plans? You're definitely landing at Marseilles, aren't you?"

"Yes. I have some business to put through in Paris. After that—I don't know—since I can't enlist in the Foreign Legion. Something has come to an end—and I don't see a fresh beginning. More and more I find myself holding on to something he said: 'Nothing is done, until there is nothing to be done!' And I believe I have something more to do yet—why I don't know. Perhaps it is because my Star is still leading me, although it is hidden in this blackness of war, like all the rest of us—"

"I had thought, myself, perhaps, of joining a French ambulance, after I've seen Chrissie safely back to England, according to my promise," Hall told her.

"Ah!—yes, that might be a way." Leonie spoke as though more to herself than him. "The way? Possibly—I don't know."

"Anyhow, we shall probably meet again—in France."

"Yes, we shall, I know that too—and it's about the limit of my knowledge at present. Ah!—listen!"

From the engine-room came the tinkle of six bells, 11 o'clock. It was followed by the sing-song voice of the lascar from the crow's-nest, telling the silent ship, the silent night, that 'All ees well!"

"All's well!" Leonie echoed the words under her breath. "Ah!—if one could say that—"

CHAPTER XXII

"A Merry Christmas"

Hall sighed, thrust his hands deep down into his pockets and set off to trudge back to the ruined factory where his ambulance unit was temporarily stationed, through the wet blackness of the winter afternoon.

Only along the eastern horizon was there an intermittent glare to the accompaniment of a ceaseless thud and rattle. There was no truce on the Western front this Christmas.

This was especially true of the French front, where indeed a grimmer spirit had always prevailed. No truces there: they rather despised their Allies for yielding to such sentimentality, these men who remembered Sedan, whose fathers fought there.

Now, too, there was a feeling of growing tension in the atmosphere which already foreboded a new enemy offensive, to be launched, so it was believed, against the French Front.

Exactly where the main attack would be rammed home was the only really open question, according to the reports of the Intelligence Department and opinion in general.

In the section where Hall was stationed, some kilometres south of the junction between the French and British, there had been a particularly bad spell of weather and fighting.

The tenacious, chalky mud of the district made movements of troops and transport of all kinds peculiarly difficult and an ugly local attack had developed a day or two before the actual festival itself, the enemy bombarding the French from heights held by them in comparative dryness and comfort, then storming the waterlogged, wretchedly situated trenches on the lower ground.

Casualties had been heavy and the difficulties in the way of removing and tending the wounded very great, ambulances were busy night and day bringing the injured to aid posts and casualty clearing stations before removing them further down the line. The conditions had been hideously bad for drivers and stretcher-bearers alike, with roads swept by artillery fire, shell-pitted, slippery with mud, sleet and half-melting snow.

Hall had tramped the mile and a half into the half-demolished village to make inquiries concerning a family who had been left marooned there, with the mother and two of the nine children injured by the shell which had destroyed their house. He heard the story from one of the ambulance orderlies, told with a shrug, for what could be done? The hospital was over-crowded already—the doctors over-busy.

Filling his pockets with bandages, lint, iodine and all the food he could collect, Hall spent the afternoon playing the Good Samaritan to this forlorn family. They were moderately safe in the cellars of the old village inn, moderately warm with fires made from the broken furniture collected by the two eldest, boys of eleven and ten.

Roslin

Roslin—The May meeting of St. Paul's Church Ladies' Guild was held at the Rectory (which was gaily decorated with flags and streamers in honor of the coming visit to Canada of the King and Queen), on Wednesday evening, May 10th with a large attendance. Members of the W.A. were guests of the Guild at this meeting.

In the absence of the President, the Vice-President, Mrs. R. Copeland presided and the meeting opened with the singing of a hymn. Following this Rev. Mr. Beazer led the devotional period. Roll Call was answered with a verse of Scripture, containing the word 'Peace'. A short business meeting was held after which Mrs. Fred Coulter took charge of the remainder of the meeting and the following program was enjoyed. Instrumental selection "Star of the East" by Miss Audrey Hall. Mr. John Hart gave an instrumental selection. Vocal duet, Misses Georgina and Helen Goodfellow. Mrs. E. Bates who spent the past winter in St. Petersburg, Florida, gave a very interesting and instructive talk on her trip which was thoroughly enjoyed by all those present. Mrs. Beazer expressed the thanks of the ladies to Mrs. Bates for her delightful talk.

Rev. Mr. Beazer sang a solo 'The Veterans Song'. Miss Joyce Goodfellow sang 'There's a Gold Mine in the Sky' playing her own accompaniment. An instrumental duet was given by Miss Audrey and Olive Hall and a recitation "When Ma Upped Her Hair". Helen Goodfellow. Miss Vincent sang and played several numbers on her accordeon. The program closed with singing a verse of a hymn "For Those in Peril on the Sea", and the National Anthem.

Mrs. W. Gillespie, president of the W.A. on behalf of the members thanked the ladies of the Guild for the invitation to their meeting. Mrs. Coulter thanked all who had assisted with the program. At the close a delicious lunch was served.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Annie Brown whose death occurred on Monday, May 1st at the home of her daughter, Mrs. H. E. Welsh, was held in Roseneath on Wednesday afternoon, May 3rd. The service was conducted by Rev. H. B. Herrington assisted by Rev. F. C. Beazer. During the service solos were sung by Miss Lucille Herrington and Rev. F. C. Beazer. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Interment was made in Roseneath Cemetery.

Rev. F. C. Beazer and Mrs. Beazer, Mr. and Mrs. M. Fargey, Mrs. W. Clapsaddle and Mr. Albert Wilson, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Brown in Roseneath on Wednesday.

Mrs. E. Bates of Belleville, who has recently returned home after spending the winter months in Florida, spent the past week with Mr. and Mrs. A. Bates and Mr. and Mrs. W. Bates.

Mr. Norman White spent the week-end in Toronto.

The Roslin Cheese Factory opened on Tuesday for the season with the same cheesemaker as last year, Mr. Hogle.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White attended the funeral of the late Alice Hume of Seymour on Tuesday afternoon.

The St. Andrew's Helpers entertained members of the Stirling Young People's Association, at a crokinole party at the manse on Tuesday evening, May 2nd.

The May meeting of the Women's Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, May 3rd at the home of Mrs. Howes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Thursday evening, May 4th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. Sills with an attendance of thirteen.

With the President, Mrs. W. Gillespie in charge the meeting was opened by the singing of a hymn after which Rev. Mr. Beazer conducted the devotional period and read the Scripture Lesson.

An invitation from the ladies of the Guild was extended to the ladies of the W.A. to attend their next meeting.

After the business period Miss L. Wilson leader for the evening took charge of the following program.

All joined in singing another hymn. Mrs. W. Clapsaddle gave a very interesting report from the W.A. annual which she had attended in Kingston on April 27th and 28th.

Mrs. Beazer told of some incidents of the annual meeting and gave some humorous poetry.

Rev. F. C. Beazer closed the meeting with the Benediction. After which a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and a social half-hour enjoyed.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg—The C. G. I. T. of Thomasburg United Church held their meeting at the home of Marion and Laura Grills on the evening of May 9th.

After singing group songs the meeting opened with a hymn. The Scripture lesson was read by Irene Walker. Prayer was offered by the President. The offering was taken by Bessie Calberry followed by the offertory prayer. A reading entitled "Revelation" was given by Ruth Coulson. A hymn was sung.

The secretary, Helen McTaggart, gave her report which was adopted as read and also the treasurer's report by Bessie Calberry.

The roll call was answered with a proverb.

Group songs were again sung. A piano solo was given by Evelyn Bateman. Ana Morton sang a solo "I Came to the Garden Alone." A solo "God's Hand May Be Seen in the Dewdrops", was sung by Lucille Herrington. Laura Grills gave a piano solo, "The Dance of the Fairies." Piano solos were given by Betty Vance "Yankee Doodle" and "Home, Sweet Home." Some riddles were enjoyed and the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem" after which everyone enjoyed a delicious lunch.

Sidney Crossing

Sidney Crossing—Miss Edith Wright, Reg. N., of Belleville, attended the service at Aikins Church on Sunday morning and was the guest of Miss Irene Grills.

Mrs. Kingston, who has been in failing health for several months is now confined to her bed.

Mrs. Bruce Hogle took dinner on Saturday with Mrs. Ethel Page and Miss Eva Hogle, Belleville.

A number from here attended church services in Belleville on Sunday evening.

Mother's Day was observed in Aikins United Church on Sunday morning. A special Mother's Day proogramme was followed and the superintendent, Mr. Stanley Spafford, took charge of the service. The guest speaker was Rev. Mr. Dunlop of the Ottawa District. He gave a very helpful message taking his text from Matthew 16:26. For what is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Mrs. Perry Hamilton favoured with a solo and Miss Jewel Bailey a piano solo. "My Mother' Bible" was played by Mr. Donald McMullen on the trombone, Mr. Gordon Spafford, cornet, and Mrs. Lee Grills at the piano. A story entitled "The Room of Gold" was given by Mrs. Fred Moon. The church was prettily decorated with flowers and the service was enjoyed by all.

The Aikins W. A. held a rummage sale at the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, on Saturday evening and the proceeds were most gratifying.

A joint meeting of the Aikins W. A. and W.M.S. was held on Wednesday last at the home of Mrs. Wilmott Bailey.

Ol' Diz Back in Ball Game As Five-Inning Relief Trick Showed Arm in Grand Shape

Allowed Only 3 Hits, Fanned Five and Did Not Walk a Batter

NO FAST BALL

Cardinals Increase Lead in National to One and One-Half Games

(By Sid Feder Associated Press Sports Writer).

Dizzy Dean is back—and the din is terrific.

Ol' Diz showed he is definitely back in the ball game yesterday with a five-inning relief trick during which Brooklyn Dodgers were lucky to get more than a loud foul off him. He allowed only three hits and no runs, fanned five and walked none.

Brooklyn won the ball game 12-2, but the daffiness boys did all their scoring before Diz ambled in for his first National League appearance of the year.

It's not the same Diz now, though. His motion yesterday was lots more natural than it has been recently, but his fast ball had no more zip than a hangover. However, he has taken a page from Carl Hubbell's book and is pitching with his head as much as that famous right arm.

So Phil Wrigley may yet realize something on that $185,000 investment. And, with Hubbell on the road back, too, one of these fine Sundays the umpire will announce a pair of batteries headed by old squarepants and old Diz again.

Came From Behind

St. Louis Cardinals came from behind to top the Giants 7-6 and boost their first-place edge to 1 1-2 games, and sink the New Yorkers into seventh place. Bill Terry's run-of-the-mine tossers gave John Mize, Ducky Medwick and Pepper Martin a home-run ball apiece.

Another home run trio turned up for New York Yankees, but that's to be expected. Babe Dahlgren, George Selkirk of Huntsville, Ont., and Joe Gordon accounted for six runs as the Yanks topped St. Louis Browns for their sixth straight win. The Yanks needed the victory to keep 1 1-2 games in front in the American League, for Boston's second-place Red Sox collected 18 hits to jar Chicago White Sox 18-4.

Bucs in Sixth Place

Cincinnati Reds, largely through Ernie Lombardi's bat and Lee Grissom's arm, climbed into a second-place tie in the National League by drubbing Boston Bees 4-1. Joe Bowman pitched a nine-hitter and drove in four runs himself in pacing Pittsburgh to a 8-5 decision over Phillies, which boosted the Bucs to sixth place.

The first night game of the year, featuring Connie Mack's Athletics in an evening "at home," went into overtime before Cleveland Indians paraded five runs across in the 10th to top the A's 8-3. Tommy Bridges turned in his fifth straight flinging triumph as Detroit Tigers whacked Washington's slipping Senators 6-2.

Ernie Broderich Has Good Chance To Whip Armstrong

(By Drew Middleton Associated Press Sports Writer).

London, May 17 (AP)— The welterweight championship of the world, which has taken some tossing around in its time, is liable to descend on the flushed brow of Ernie Roderick, an amiable rat breeder from Liverpool, a week from tomorrow night.

Roderick, the British welter czar, fights Henry Armstrong for the world crown at Harringay arena and, if the British critics are to be believed, he has a good chance of whipping the little man from St. Louis.

Armstrong is far from top shape. He has an ugly looking left hand, souvenir of his last American fight against Davey Day, and his timing is off. Roderick is a difficult man to fight with a bad hand. Henry is liable to re-break the bones he fractured against Day the first time he shoots a stiff one at the Roderick chin.

Another factor in Ernie's favor is the British foul rule whereby the first low blow disqualifies a fighter. To Armstrong, who often loses two and three rounds a fight on low punches, this is a real threat. Roderick rather fancies his chances himself. He is familiar with the ceaseless energy and dynamite-laden fists of Armstrong, but he says:

"Oi've got a chance, oi'ave. Oi've not been knocked out in 150 fights and oi don't mean to let 'em do it."

BILLY WEIR OF TORONTO ENTERS HALL OF FAME

Hurls No-Hit, No-Run Game Against the Baltimore Orioles

GAVE FOUR WALKS

Jersey City Have Lead Cut to Margin Half Game by Loss to Wings

(By The Associated Press)

Billy Weir, the sore-armed southpaw, is heading back toward the big baseball leagues.

The 26-year-old flinger who never has fulfilled the promise that led Boston Bees to sign him up a few years back, took a flying start yesterday with the first no-hit, no-run game of the International League season.

Playing for the last-place Toronto Maple Leafs, who drew only 250 paying fans to the home park, Weir went to work on Baltimore Orioles. He did it so convincingly that the Leafs were encouraged to bang out 10 hits on top of 11 walks and win 8-0.

Billy faced only 31 batsmen, fanned six and walked four. Another got on base through interference by catcher Sam Harshany.

Yesterday's game was his fifth start and his second shutout victory. He blanked Newark Bears for his only other triumph.

Wings Win 4 Straight

Rochester hung up its fourth straight on the expert elbowing of the veteran Si Johnson, whipping Jersey City 4-1. The Jersey Giants, incidentally, had their league lead cut to a half game over Newark Bears, whose game at Buffalo was postponed because of threatening weather.

The day's other game was a comedy that included practically every known kind of error as Syracuse Chiefs beat the Montreal Royals 12-10 on two ninth-inning runs. The Royals, leading 6-0 in the second, kicked away the game with seven misplays, 10 passes and 14 Syracuse hits. The Chiefs made two errors and their three moundsmen gave 12 hits and seven walks. Montreal's Don Ross was the best hitter, connecting four times to drive in five runs.

CORNWALL BISONS STILL WINLESS

Art Calhoun, However, Does a Fine Job of Relief Hurling

(By The Canadian Press)

The unfruitful efforts of Toronto Maple Leafs in the current International League campaign have found an answering cry from their baseball farmhands in a class "C" circuit, Cornwall Bisons of the Canadian-American loop.

To the last error, Bisons have been echoing Leafs in the manner of holding down last place in an eight-team league. The only difference has been in Toronto's ability to break into the win column —Cornwall has yet to do it in five starts.

That matters will improve, though, as the season ages they both showed yesterday. As Bill Weir pitched himself into the mythical hall of fame with a no-hit, no-run victory for the Leafs, so did Cornwall's Art Calhoun still the bats of Gloversville Glovers — for 4 1-3 innings.

The first 4 2-3 innings weren't as good for Toronto's farm team, however, and Glovers pounded Lefty Carr for enough bingles to coast to a 4-1 decision. Bob Merriam, on option from Montreal Royals of the International League, hurled the Gloversville triumph.

Meanwhile, the league-leading Oswego Netherlands stretched their unbeaten streak to five with a 7-6 home victory over Rome Colonels. Amsterdam Rugmakers fell into second place when they lost 6-5 to the Senators at Ottawa.

At Ogdensburg, Leo Pukas turned in his second triumph of the season by pitching the Colts to a 9-4 win over the visiting Utica Braves.

Mickey Walker Going Prospecting In a Big Way

Chicago May 17 (AP)—Search for a "white hope" to knock Joe Louis' ears off is under way with a gold strike rush.

The situation is a duplicate of the big push of 29 years ago, the first of the white hope years, brought about when Jack Johnson battered the hulk of James J. Jeffries to defeat in their world's heavyweight battle at Reno, Nev., July 4, 1910. Jess Willard dethroned Johnston in their 26-round bout at Havana, Cuba, in 1915 to restore the championship to the white race.

Mickey Walker, the "toy bulldog" of middleweight fame, is going prospecting in a big way. Walker will tour the country, he said today, giving exhibitions with sparring partners and local fighters. Walker figures he can inspire the old Walker fighting spirit into his find and get him ready for a Louis campaign.

SEAGRAM STABLE TO HAVE STARTER IN KING'S PLATE

Brilliant Colors Will be Carried in Classic for 50th Consecutive Time

FIRST WIN IN 1891

Last Year Member of Seagram Family Bought a Horse to Keep up Record

(By Foster Barclay Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Steeped in Canadian turf history, the storied black and yellow colors of the once pretentious Seagram stable of Waterloo, Ont., will again be seen in the 80th running of the King's Plate here May 22.

The brilliant colors will be carried in the classic for the 50th consecutive time when Saragossa parades to the post before the King and Queen at Woodbine Park to battle over a mile-and-a-furlong for 50 guineas, donated by the King and the major portion of a $10,000 added purse. The stable has captured the guineas 20 times, a record expected to stand for years to come.

There were times when the stable appeared near disruption. But it always came back to take an honored place in racing battles. Power of the stable was not confined to Canada, but stretched to the United States where the colors are known on every major track.

First Win in 1891

The first triumph was recorded in 1891 when Victorious won for J. E. Seagram, then owner of the stable. Until 1917 he practically monopolized the guineas, winning them 15 times.

After his death the stable appeared doomed. His sons banded together, however, and the stable emerged as strong as ever. They won the classic four times before they broke up and left one of them, Edward, to continue. He died early in 1937 and that ended the reign of the yellow and black.

J. E. Frowde Seagram, a son of Edward, nominated five horses for the 1937 running of the Plate, but only Gold Guard, a rank outsider, started. He finished far in the ruck to record one of the poorest showings of a Seagram-owned horse in the classic.

Representation last year seemed dim when young Seagram did not have a horse to name. Rather than see the colors go unrepresented, Philip Seagram "bought" Tabmark from J. G. Fair of Brantford. Tabmark finished far behind Bunty Lawless, the winner, and after the race was returned to Fair's stable.

Baseball officials usually are sticklers for the playing rules, but occasionally there are exceptions and sometimes an umpire has the privilege of abrogating them. A Piedmont League game at Durham, N.C., the past month, furnished one of the exceptions, when an umpire forced a violation of the rules he is supposed to uphold.

The situation was like this: Durham started a rally against Pitcher Sherer of Asheville, who was relieved by Pitcher Lee Sherrill, with a Durham runner on third base. During the act of making his first pitch, Sherrill balked, throwing to third, instead of to the plate. The runner was trapped off the bag, but Umpire Dan Tehan waved him home. Sherrill protested so violently that he was ordered from the game.

Section 4 of Rule 17 states a hurler who relieves another must continue to pitch until the man at bat has either been put out or reached first base, or the side has been retired. Sherrill did not finish pitching to the batter; in fact, he did not deliver a ball to the plate, yet he left the game. It was a violation of the rule, but there was no way out and, of course, there was no protest.

It is such above cases that make the diamond games popular, however, but nevertheless President Lorne McDougall is going to see to it that his umpires in the Bay of Quinte League are at least versed in the rules of the game before the league opens with Napanee at Belleville next Monday. President McDougall has invited all of the Bay of Quinte League umpires to attend a meeting or school at the Y.M.C.A. this evening. The idea is to go over the rules and regulations of the game and whenever any point of misunderstanding arises the question in doubt will be thoroughly discussed according to the rules, as laid down by the National Commission. The league umpires include "Mag" Loucks, Ernie Gibbard and Les Richardson, of Napanee; Davey Young and Welch of Picton; Alex Weir and Cronje Adams of Brighton and Don Thomas and your correspondent from Belleville. The success of any league depends upon the thoroughness of the umpires, their knowledge of the rules and general umpiring ability to speed up the game and make it more attractive to the paying public. These final instructions will be given by President McDougall tonight. Incidentally we would suggest the local softball loop adopt a similar conclave and give their officials a lesson in the rules before softball swings into action next week.

One of the gratifying promises of major league ball this year is the number of rookies whose performances have indicated they will make good. Of course, every spring sees many newcomers scintillating for a brief period and then wilting under the hot summer sun, but the recruits this year seem to be built of sterner stuff and a majority is likely to stick.

This is a healthy condition, for one of the needs of the game, since the war days, has been a greater supply of new blood. However, another generation has grown up since then and is beginning to make itself felt.

Efforts to organize a four-teamed softball loop, composed of teams from the Rotary, Kiwanis, Y's Men and Kinsmen clubs of this city will be made tonight. The suggestion came through Kiwanian Ted Hughes, who seems to be in the driver's seat in the matter of organization. The idea is to limit the teams to bonafide service club members only, organize a league and play out a regular schedule. Such a league should prove popular and provide recreation for those who otherwise don't play summer games such as tennis or golf. From this corner the suggestion sounds splendid, insofar as the Kiwanis, Y'smen and Kinsmen are concerned, but with the Rotary Club, whose members are much older we doubt the possibilities of a entry from that club.

We journeyed to take a gander at the local intermediate ballsters at practice last twilight and found the diamond still in a deplorable condition. (Parks Board please note). However, Bud Wilkins seems to have three fairly good apple knockers in the outfield in Jack Empson, who led the team in batting last year, Shiner Sinfield, a veteran of many years and Bill Jarrell, who comes up from the junior ranks. All of these seem to wield potent bats, but there seem to be several vacancies in and around the inner works. The pitching staff is far in advace to the remainder of the squad. Weeks, Ellis, Noakes, Kelleher and one other lad seen laboring off the mound, all appear to be ready for the opening on Monday. There seems to be a sinister silence down around Napanee, but we can trust that Walt Gerow will show up with a strong team, many of whom played with his good junior squad last year. We talked to Sqd.-Ldr. Van Vielt last evening and he informs us the Air Force team is slowly rounding into shape, while Picton reports the return of pitcher "Shrimp" Phillips, brother of the famed "Warpy" Phillips.

Billy Weir, who was farmed out by the Bees to Toronto, narrowly missed baseball's hall of fame yesterday when he hurled a no-hit, no-run game, blanking the Baltimore Orioles 8-0. However, Weir walked four batsmen during the nine innings, thereby marring a perfect day's mound effort. Incidentally the no hitter was the first registered in the Maple Leaf Park in nearly three years, for it was on June 3, 1936 that Billy Harris hurled a no hitter for Buffalo over the Leafs. Yesterday's effort wasn't Weir's initial effort at stinginess, because the records show he pitched a no run, no hit game while hurling for the University of New Hampshire over Northwestern back in 1936.

We're Telling You that Krakaskas was chalked up with another loss for Washington yesterday; he walked five and hit one and was nicked for 13 hits....Goody Rosen, hitting third for the Dodgers now, got his hit as did Selkirk to account for Canada's major league efforts yesterday....Dizzy Dean returned to the game yesterday in a relief role and stopped the rampaging Daffiness men......The 1944 Olympic will be held in either London, England or Detroit, Mich..... Woody English was traded to the Cards by the Cubs yesterday which is equivalent to being kicked upstairs.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Whitey Wyatt, Dodgers: Wyatt pitched four-hitter, fanning eight, to top Cubs 12-2.

Atley Donald, Yankees: Came in cold as relief pitcher in ninth inning when Browns had tying runs on bases and retired two men in row to save 7-5 victory.

Pepper Martin and Lynn Myers, Cardinals: Martin's three-run homer enabled Cards to come from behind to tie score and Myers' pinch-single in seventh sent winning run across to whip Giants 7-6.

Joe Vosmik and Jim Tabor, Red Sox: Each collected three hits and drove in five runs in 8-4 win over White Sox.

Tommy Bridges, Tigers: Fanned six and stopped Senators with nine hits, and drove three runs across with double and single for 6-2 triumph.

Women's Hospital Auxiliary Given Fine Report of 16th Annual Meeting Of Hospital Assoc. by Mrs. Mikel

Activities of Other Hospital Associations Reported — as Well as Means of Raising Funds

TO PURCHASE X-RAY

At yesterday's regular meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, members had the pleasure of hearing an excellent report by Mrs. W. C. Mikel, Belleville delegate to the 16th annual convention of the Ontario Hospital Association held in Toronto the first week in May at which time was also held the annual meeting of the Women's Hospital Aids' Association of Ontario, the Association of Record Librarians of Ontario and the Ontario Association of Medical Social Workers.

Aims of Auxiliaries

President of the Women's Hospital Aids' Association, Mrs. Margaret Rhynas, who visited Belleville recently, gave the address of welcome and it was one of beauty and clearness. In the past twenty-five years the Associations throughout Ontario have raised two million dollars to aid hospitals. The first individual aid was organised in 1865 and the Association in 1910. There are now 76 affiliated groups in the province. It is the purpose of the Aids to keep in constant and close touch with the governing boards and administration as well as to see the hospital through the eyes of the patient. It is the duty of every hospital worker to make their community hospital-conscious and to present to every citizen the true picture of hospital needs as well as deeds. Mrs. Rhynas discussed the Flower Memorial Fund and Life Memberships.

An enlightening address on the cancer situation in Canada was heard by the delegates, when Dr. T. C. Routley, general secretary of the Canadian Medical Association gave the report of the control of cancer. About fifty thousand dollars a year is spent in research work on this subject in Canada.

Provincial Activities

Of special interest to local members were the reports of the activities of other hospital associations and their means of raising funds. Among the novel methods were Brantford's "calendar"; Chatham's penny sale, St. Catharines' ton of coppers. Mrs. Mikel was asked to address the delegates during this session and the convention was astonished and gratified to learn that Belleville Hospital had been built and was owned by the women of the community.

A great honor was accorded the Ontario Hospital Aids' Association when it was asked to affiliate with the American Hospital Association and with the International Hospital Association which is, incidentally, meeting in Toronto this summer.

Dr. Agnew, president of the American Hospital Association brought interesting glimpses of plans for the International Association meeting; forty-four countries will be represented and all the delegates, excepting those from Germany, will come over on the one boat. Mrs. Rhynas is chairman for the section for Hospital Aids and Auxiliaries, for the Ontario work in this line has gone abroad. Ontario is the only state or province that is organized. Mrs. Rhynas has lectured in many cities in the States on this subject and her literature is reprinted by the American Hospital Association and sent to many American hospitals.

Other speakers who gave very interesting addresses were Dr. Holbrook of Hamilton, who discussed social service problems under the new sanatoria act; Dr. Agnew on "The Well Trained Administrator" and Mr. V. C. Newman "Hospital Exemption from Sales Tax."

Col. George Drew

Col. George Drew was the special speaker at the banquet and stressed the importance of providing the child with physical training from the very minute it enters kindergarten. From other countries there is much to learn regarding the physical training of youth. The moral and physical training of such organizations as Boy Scouts shows in the habits, health and morals of these young people all through life. A sound mind in a sound body is the most effective disinfectant, said the speaker.

Prepaid hospital care was discussed at length by Mr. R. Fraser Armstrong Superintendent of Kingston General Hospital. This system is in use in three other centres and it has been found that five per cent of the poulation must participate if the venture is to be a success.

There are 840 general hospitals in Canada, with a deficit of one million dollars. Mrs. Rhynas was elected vice-president of the Ontario Hospital Association.

Mrs. Mikel was greatly interested in the many exhibits displayed, particularly in the portable X-ray machine which the Auxiliary hopes to buy for the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. G. H. Stobie, president, who was in the chair for yesterday's meeting expressed the sincere appreciation of the members to Mrs. Mikel for her splendid report and for her graciousness in representing the Association at the convention upon such a short notice.

To Purchase X-ray Machine

The members of the Auxiliary have been asked to purchase for the hospital greatly needed pieces of equipment, a mobile X-ray unit, which will cost fifteen hundred dollars and which, being portable, will be of service to the patients in their rooms, when fracture cases make any movement very painful. Members promised to co-operate and will make the purchase of the machine the new project of the Auxiliary.

Miss Ruth Thompson, superintendent of nurses, told the meeting of the plans for the graduation exercises of the hospital and the Auxiliary decided to honor the graduates at a tea. Arrangements were also made for a tea and bridge to raise funds for the Auxiliary.

Following the conclusion of business, tea was served the members.

OBITUARY

MRS. EDNA (LUSK) LUFFMAN

A respected resident of this city for over a half a century, Mrs. Edna (Lusk) Luffman passed away at the family residence, 213 Dundas Street East, late yesterday following a lengthy illness. Mrs. Luffman was the wife of William Henry Luffman, well known Belleville contractor and had been ill for a considerable time.

Mrs. Luffman was born in Bogart, Ont., 72 years ago, being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lusk. Upon her marriage to her husband Mrs. Luffman took up residence in Belleville, 50 years ago and has resided here ever since. She was a member of the Bridge Street United Church. The sympathy of many friends is extended to the bereaved family.

Besides her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Alice MacDonald, Belleville, Mrs. (Dr.) A. W. Brown, Cornwall, and Miss Merle Luffman at home and two sons, Morley of Trenton and Ward of Cornwall, live to survive the loss of one so dear.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in today's issue.

LATE MRS. MARGARET BOYLE

The funeral of the late Mrs. Margaret Boyle, widow of Robert J. Boyle, who passed away at her late residence, 31 Dunbar St., last Sunday afternoon, was held from the Thos. C. Thompson Funeral Home, Everett St., yesterday afternoon.

Rev. G. G. Wright, of Christ Church conducted the funeral service in the Chapel and at the graveside. Interment was made in the Belleville Cemetery. The funeral was largely attended the floral tributes many.

The bearers were Messrs Glencoe Thompson, George Glover, James Hudgins, O. P. Lowry and A. R. Symons.

MRS. BERTHA McWILLIAMS
(Belleville)

Taken suddenly ill at the home of her son, Claude McWilliams, Peterborough, Mrs. Bertha McWilliams, widow of the late Norman McWilliams, passed away suddenly on Monday. The late Mrs. McWilliams had gone from Belleville to pay a visit to her son's family in Peterborough, when she was suddenly stricken.

A daughter of the late Benjamin and Catherine [illegible] late Mrs. McWilliams was a resident of this vicinity for practically all of her life. She was an Anglican by faith and for many years attended Christ Church in this city and was well known throughout the community.

The late Mrs. McWilliams left to survive her death one son Claude, of Peterborough, one brother Wilbur Clapp of Corbyville and three grandchildren. Her husband predeceased her last February.

Coming down in front and exploding the Johnstown invincibility myth is Challedon, seen as he won the 49th renewal of the Preakness Stakes at Baltimore's Pimlico track. Johnstown, the horse that couldn't be beaten, and backed, as an entry with Gilded Knight, down to the lowest odds in the history of the race, led for the first three-quarters of the mile and 3-16 event and then all the horses in the race except one rushed past him, leaving him fifth place in a field of six as consolation. The victory earned $53,710 for the winner, ridden by George Seabo. Challedon had finished a distant second to Johnstown in the Kentucky Derby the Saturday before the running of the Freakness. Shown here as they finished, the horses back of Challedon are Gilded Knight, second; Volitant, third; Impound, fourth; Johnstown (you can see him at the extreme RIGHT), fifth. Ciencia, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, and not in the picture, was sixth and last.

Lady Luck Smiled Broadly On This Youngster, as He Missed Supper Only To Get Part in Pictures

By Frederick Failes

OPPORTUNITY, we are told, only knocks once. Sometimes when Madam Opportunity does her rapping she does it at the most unexpected moments, as one Montreal youngster will joyfully assert, for this boy found himself before the cameras, making a movie, just five minutes after he had had the first inkling that he was to become a movie personality.

It was a hot day at the Associated Screen News studios in Notre Dame de Grace, a suburb of Montreal, one day recently. The studio had just started "shooting" on a production that was to contain several fire scenes.

The script had been written, the sets had been built, and the cast had been chosen. The production crew took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and prepared to go to work. As is frequently the custom in making movies, they prepared to "shoot" one of the big scenes first.

A Thrilling Scene

This scene required action showing two children being rescued from a burning building. It was a thrilling scene. The youngsters were to be huddled at a window. Smoke and flames enveloped them. Even the curtains are ablaze as a fireman dashes up a ladder to snatch the kiddies from a fiery death.

Two boys were chosen to enact this scene, one a bit of a lad of four years, and the other about eleven years of age. The scene was rehearsed with all the dramatic effects. The younger boy was a little scared. A second rehearsal was tried. The four-year-old became a little panicky.

When time for actual shooting of the scene arrived the tot steadfastly refused to be lured to the window from which Fireman Edward LaFleur was to rescue him. The production crew had struck a snag.

With the crew standing idle, and production costs going ahead, there was nothing that could be done but production camp. Someone remem-to replace the youngster, and replace him as rapidly as possible. A hurried call was issued for a new boy, but where could a youngster be found in a hurry who could play the part.

There was consternation in the bered the young son of a friend of Gerald Lefebvre and Bobby Stone await Fireman Edward LaFleur as they are about to be rescued from the window of a "burning building" on the set of "Fire Wise," in production at Associated Screen News Studios in Montreal.

Pair of Pyjamas are First "Work Clothes" as Cameras and Microphones Call to Montreal Studios

a friend of his who lived nearby. The boy was intelligent, had attractive appearance, and while he had no previous stage or movie experience, could be taught quickly. Yes, he was home.

A hurried telephone call was put in for the boy. He would tackle the part and would be ready immediately. A car was sent for him.

Gerald Lefebvre, thirteen years old, was just preparing for his supper when someone said over the telephone that he was wanted, to appear in a movie. At first young Gerald didn't believe it. When he heard that a car would be at his front door in two minutes the reality of the dream broke upon him.

Five minutes later, garbed in pyjamas and with flames all around him, he waited at a "set" window for a fireman to come up a ladder and rescue him. Gerald's protective arm was around Bobbie Stone, the eleven-year-old, who had now become the "younger brother." One rehearsal, and the scene was shot.

Youngster Definitely "In"

Gerald was now definitely "in." He was to appear throughout the rest of the picture, with his new found friend, Bobbie Stone. It was a fortunate break for the studio, also, for both boys could also work through the French version of the film which was to be made.

The boy will probably remember all his life the first time he went to work, and that the first work clothes required of him were — of all things, a pair of pyjamas.

The film, which has been titled "Fire Wise" will be released all across Canada within the very near future.

Associated Screen News Studios which produces the popular "Canadian Cameos" series is quite busy these days as the demand for educational and commercial films increases.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, May 18

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EVENTFUL and intriguing state of affairs is presaged from the lunar and solar configurations. Major activities should be served by strategy, tact or diplomacy rather than high-handed measures, even though devastating situations demand definite action. Sudden upsets or quite unforeseen disturbances make prudence and caution encessayr necessary to bring about favorable adjustments. With proper direction there is an opportunity for clearing up involved or dubious circumstances, both business and personal.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which prudence and precaution may direct disturbing and threatening conditions into lucrative and constructive channels. There are excellent opportunities for clearing up involved or chaotic situations, although the adjustments may have radical consequences. affecting business as well as the private life. Employ tact and strategy to bring about harmonious results.

A child born on this day may be excellently endowed for accomplishment in out-of-the-ordinary lines. It may be scientific and inventive, although intellectually unorthodox and socially unconventional. Its success may be sensational.

WRITER THINKS CHANCES OF WAR ARE REMOTE

New York, May 17 (AP)—Andrew Maurois, French writer, believes there will be no immediate European war because "none of them over there will start a war without the certainty of winning—and none have that."

IN MEMORIAM

SIMPKINS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Delia Canniff Simpkins, who passed away May 17, 1938, and of our father, Samuel Simpkins, who departed this life May 21, 1923.

One by one they go before us
They are fading like the dew
But we know they're watching o'er us
They the good, the fair, the true
They are waiting for us only
Where no pain can ever mar
Dear ones who left us lonely
Watch us through the gates ajar
There a father, there a mother
Gone within those gates ajar.

—Sadly missed by daughters. m17-1t

DAY — Cherished memories of a wonderful husband and father, Frank B. Day, who passed away on May 17, 1938.

The midnight stars are shining
Upon your silent grave
Beneath it sleeps the one we love
And the one we could not save
We think of him in silence
His name we oft recall
There is nothing left to answer
But the picture on the wall
Our lips cannot tell how we miss him
Our hearts cannot tell what to say
God alone knows how we miss him
In a home that is lonesome today.

—Always lovingly remembered and sadly missed by his wife and children. m17-1t

SINE — In loving memory of Gerald Vivian Sine, who died May 17.

When shades of night are falling
And we are all alone
There always comes a longing
If you could just come home.
So suddenly you were taken,
The blow was hard to bear
But still we know you're sleeping
In God's own loving care.

—Ever remembered by wife and children, father and sisters. m17-1t

Rawdon

Rawdon — Wellman's Young People's Union opened with quiet music and a hymn. The president, Miss Mary E. Sharp gave the introduction. Mrs. Carl Clancy read an appropriate number and Miss Carlyn Johnson played different hymns softly.

Rev. J. E. Bockel based his discussion group on "Jesus' attitude to life's problems." The roll call was answered with "Whom You Should Pray For?"

The Christian Fellowship Convener Miss C. Johnson then presided and Mr. Lorne Watson read the Bible lesson. The convener outlined the topic on "Daily Meditation." Readings were given by Miss Bernice Dunham and the president.

Thomasburg G. G. I. T. visited Springbrook C. G. I. T. on Friday evening and gave a splendid programme. At the close an appetizing lunch was served by Springbrook.

Mrs. Paul Damon and sons of Davenport Iowa, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Dunham.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Heath attended the funeral of their aunt, Miss Alice Hume, at Burnbrae last Tuesday.

Springbrook Young People presented their play "Whittlin'" at Zion on Wednesday evening and were well received.

Mrs. W. H. Hicks, Tweed, was a guest of Mrs. S. McComb this week.

Mr. Will Maynes is recuperating in Belleville Hospital following a recent operation.

Mr. Fred Hubble, Windsor, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Burton Bateman.

A large number of Rawdonians attended the funeral of the late Mr. Leslie Maybee in Wellman's United Church on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Sharp recently entertained Mrs. Edith Sharp and Jack.

"CATCH 'EM YOUNG AND TREAT 'EM GENTLY"

Omaha, Neb., May 17 (AP) — John Pyle, 87, speaks with experience when he tells you the way to keep a wife 65 years is "to catch 'em young, treat 'em gently and never let it enter anybody's head that the marriage isn't for life." He and Mrs. Pyle celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary this week.

AT THE McCARTHY

"PACIFIC LINER"

Two determined men pitted against each other in a deadly struggle of brawn against brains, within a steel-walled world surrounded by treacherous high seas —that's RKO Radio's "Pacific Liner," gripping drama of unleashed passions which is coming to the McCarthy Theatre next.

Virile Victor McLeaglen as a two-fisted chief engineer, swaggering dictator of an ocean liner's murky stokehold and Chester Morris as a rugged ship's-doctor are co-starred.

Crammed with adventure, romance and conflict, the story unfolds during an ill-fated voyage from Shanghai to San Francisco. Morris ships aboard the S.S. Arcturus as physician in order to be near nurse Wendy Barrie, although his skill with tropical diseases has brought him more lucrative offers. McLaglen accepts the post as chief engineer on the liner because the captain, looking forward to a record-breaking run, wants the only man who holds the throbs of a ship's engine more important than the pulse beats of his motley crew.

It is inevitable that the two strong-willed men should clash, especially when the hard-boiled engineer takes too great an interest in the pretty nurse. The conflict becomes further aggravated when a strange epidemic breaks out, concentrating itself below deck grimy members of the engine and fire rooms where the chief engineer rules so tyrannically.

From this point on the drama and suspense of the 'story reach spectacular heights, with the doctor and nurse striving desperately to halt the spread of the malady, and the chief engineer struggling to keep the engines running in the face of hysteria among the fast-diminishing survivors. How the stoke-hold tyrant finally succumbs to the disease himself, thus precipitating a near mutiny among his men, and how the physician saves his life and wins the girl are events leading to the film's smashing climax.

In addition to the principals, other important roles are played by Barry Fitzgerald, as a good natured "wiper;" Alan Hale as a pugnacious fireman and Allan Lane.

"They Wanted to Marry"

Crammed with thrills, comedy, excitement, glamor, romance, beauty, fashion and action—every constituent of good solid entertainment to please every type of audience—the second feature on the program "They Wanted To Marry" which will be presented in addition to "Pacific Liner," promises to be one of the most delightful hits of the current season. Lovely Betty Furness, Gordon Jones, E. E. Clive, Henry Kolker and Diana Gibson, head the cast of funmakers in the production and you can be assured of outstanding characterizations by this talented group of Hollywood top rated stars.

"Super-Sleuth"
"Everybody's Doing It"

The two comedy hits "Super-Sleuth", with Jack Oakie and Ann Sothern in the co-starring roles and Sally Eilers, Preston Foster and Arthur Lake in "Everybody's Doing It", which are now the current attractions at the McCarthy Theatre are now being presented for the last times, and for an evening of clean wholesome screen entertainment the whole family should see these two swell laugh-hits.

AT THE BELLE

"FAST AND LOOSE"
"HOTEL IMPERIAL"

By popular demand, Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell are co-starred for the fourth time in "Fast and Loose," rib-tickling and fast-moving sequel to last season's exciting comedy-mystery, "Fast Company." The new picture opens next at the Belle Theatre.

As a direct contrast to their earlier performances in "Night Must Fall," in which Montgomery portrayed a maniacal murderer, both he and Miss Russell now step out of serious character to play comedy roles, he as an adventurous book dealer who dabbles in crime solutions and Miss Russell as his fun-loving wife.

The picture describes the exciting adventures of Joel and Garda Sloane, who, in search for a rare home for one of their clients, are led into a mansion of mystery that reeks with unforetold events and a series of murders before Joel finds the answer to them.

The cast includes Reginald Owen, Ralph Morgan, Etienne Girardot, Alan Dinehart, Jo Ann Sayers and Joen Marsh.

"Hotel Imperial"

All the thrills of warfare, romance and international intrigue on the Eastern Front in the crucial campaign of 1916 fill the plot of "Hotel Imperial," Paramount's exciting new war picture, which, is announced as the companion feature attraction at the Belle Theatre, introduces to local filmgoers Isa Miranda, the studio's new importation from abroad.

Co-starring with handsome Ray Milland, Miranda makes her bow in a new grand-scale romance set against the dramatic background of a clash between nations on a battlefield of central Europe. Miranda will be seen as a young beauty who sets out to murder the man who has betrayed her sister and falls in love with the very man she has made up her mind to hate. Milland plays a dashing young Austrian cavalry officer.

"Hotel Imperial," as the name suggests, takes place almost entirely in a central European hostelry, located in a small town on the edge of the Russian-Austrian no-man's-land. To it, in the guise of a maid, comes Miranda, intent on finding the betrayer of her sister, whom she knows to be staying there. Instead, she discovers Milland, an officer who has become separated from his army.

Miranda's romance with the young officer begins when she learns he is not really her quarry and saves him from being executed by the Russians. Their tremendous danger increases the pace of their love affair, and when the real criminal arrives, in the person of an international spy, they unite in a successful campaign to even up all scores with him. Robert Florey directed.

An unusually interesting all new edition of the "March of Time", will be presented on the same program.

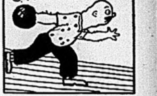
Wendy Barrie who is featured with Victor McLaglen and Chester Morris in "Pacific Liner" with Betty Furness in "They Wanted to Marry," next at the McCarthy Theatre.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper the telephone rang and ma answered it, saying, Hello, O hello, Maud.

Meaning Mrs. Hews, and pop said, Yee gods she's angling for a bridge game, what a life, what a world, nothing but wars and bridge games.

Ma keeping on talking on the telephone saying, Well I dont know



Maud, I'll ask him, he seemed pretty tired this evening, if you dont hear anything further you'll know he's not in the mood.

And she hung up, pop saying. Did I hear you inform somebody or other that you thought I was tired? Well your intuition didn't deceive you. I'm dog tired, and when I say dog I refer to a dog that's been working like a horse, he said.

Well(it did strike me that you seemed a trifle played out, but it may of been the weather, there's no use exaggerating, ma said, and pop said, It's impossible to exaggerate the way I feel, I feel like an overworked horse that's been treated like a dog. I feel like 7 Checko Slovack laborers that have just put in an 18 hour day working for a German boss.

O well dont worry, I made your excuses for you, ma said. I cant think of any less appetizing prospect than to go out of your way to watch a lot of straining perspiring strangers when you're already tired out yourself, she said, and pop. What the dooce is all this, I didn't hear anything about any straining strangers'

O, it seems Yewstace Hews has a couple of tickets for some bowling contest, ma said, and pop said. Yee gods it's the finals of the state champeenship, I'll say it's some bowling contest. By gollies that's just what I need to set me up, a buntch of other men heaving massive missles while I loll idly around with nothing heavier to lift than a good cigar, he said.

And he hurry up telephoned Mr. Hews to meet him at the bowling alleys and ma shook her head to herself saying it must be wonderful to be a man and not know your own mind 5 minutes in a row

SHANNONVILLE W. A.

The W. A. of the United Church of Shannonville met at the home of Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, on Thursday May 11th. A delicious pot luck dinner was served at noon to forty-four members and visitors. In the afternoon a meeting was held with the president, Mrs. Sam Elliott in charge. After singing the theme song all joined in repeating the Lord's Prayer. Prayer was offered by Mrs. W. D. Craig. Mrs. H. R. Vivian read the scripture lesson. A very helpful religious reading was given by Mrs Everett Stratton. Minutes of the last meeting were given by the secretary, Mrs. Orval Stratton and adopted as read. Mrs. Elliott welcomed visitors from the Aiken's W. A. Their president, Mrs. Fred Westover, very graciously responded. Mrs. W. D. Robertson was appointed delegate to the convention to be held at Tweed on May 30th. Mrs. Orval Stratton read a letter of thanks for birthday card received from Mrs. Westcott. Mrs. Everett Stratton expressed thanks for the card sent to Mr. Stratton and herself when they were ill. Mrs. Grace Asselstine also sent her thanks for the card she received when she was sick. A beautiful reading on Mother's Day was given by Mrs. Craig.

A few minutes silence was observed in memory of Mrs. Ross Shetler, the first member we have lost, and Mrs. Elliott read the following tribute to her memory, "We wish to pay honor and tribute to the life of a valued and at this time much loved member, Mrs. Ross Shetler, who has been recently called away to higher service. She always gave her best in devotion and service to all church work and in our Woman's Association we will miss her and all deeply regret her passing. We all mourn her loss and sympathize deeply with those bereaved but Heaven is richer since she has reached that haven of rest, which our Heavenly Father has promised to all who love and serve Him. The meeting was closed with the W. A. benediction. Proceeds of the dinner amounted to nine dollars and twenty cents.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 17.—(CP) — The Toronto Stock Market attracted only a small company of buyers today and volume tapered down to around 280,000 shares while prices were a bit heavy throughout the session. The Golds improved a little in the afternoon to close with only a minor loss for the day but the Base Metals and the Industrials were down a half to a full point in the indices and the Western Oils posted a set-back of about a quarter-point.

Utility, Steel, Food and Building shares were off and in the Base Metal group losses ranged up to a point. Smelters hit a new low for the year at 39 1-4. Losses were limited to about 5 cents among the medium-price gold stocks.

Minor recessions were noted in the Western Oil group for Calgary-Edmonton, Home, Anglo-Canadian and Foothills and Royalite were a fraction higher.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 17 (AP)—Slow but persistent selling depressed stock prices today.

Leading issues were a point or more lower near the final hour and trading, never active during the sesison, became even thinner. Transfers were about 600,000 shares.

DRAMATIC TALE

father years ago.

He said he burrowed through the wall of the Wellington Village branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in March, 1935, and stole $1,190 in silver. Vault bricks were replaced and the robbery was not discovered until two weeks afterwards.

Admitted Attempt

St. Pierre admitted attempting to enter the Canadian Bank of Commerce branch in Wellington, but said an attempted robberd there in 1933 by two men armed with shotguns thwarted his plans. (The men later were caught and sentenced to seven years each in penitentiary.)

It was while working at odd jobs in the bank that St. Pierre studied the possibilities of the break-in. "It was a shock when the Canadian Bank of Commerce closed its Wellington office, so I transferred my plans to the Bank of Nova Scotia office.

"After the crime had been committed, I would have liked to confess the crime," the accused stated, but I was afraid of the effect it would have on the future of my children." The accused is the father of three sons and a daughter.

The pool room charge came during St. Pierre's testimony today when he said he entered the pool room in company with Cecil Bovay, one of his employees, and robbed slot machines of $26. Crown Attorney G. Walmsley halted the hearing and aid charges of breaking, entering and theft from the pool hall against both St. Pierre and Bovay. Bovay pleaded guilty and was remanded for sentence.

A banker urged him to put his money in the bank, and he lost it all.

"I've been deeply ingrained with a spirit of revenge," St. Pierre said, in telling of how his father lost $2,600—his life savings—through failure of an United States bank.

"I was determined someone would pay the bill. All banks are alike. After my father died I decided to get even. I thought the holdup game was good, I studied it and figured on that. But I realized I was not a good shot and would not like to shoot an innocent man. I read mechanical magazines and decided to disable the man but not kill.

A Former Preacher

"I designed a pressure gun and container for ammonia fumes. It would not work."

"Then I got a water pistol, but never used it."

The contrivance, a plater-of-paris

The contrivance, a paster-of-Paris mask to protect his face from the fumes, and a device for extracting bolts, also made by St. Pierre, were produced as exhibits. At this part of the testimony St. Pierre said he had been a former preacher in Edmonton, Alta.

The elderly farmer said that in breaking into the Bank of Nova Scotia vault he worked on the bricks at the rear of the vault from 11 p.m. to two a.m. nightly for two weeks. He admitted placing $740 of the money in a vacant office across the street. The office had been part of the Bank of Commerce branch there but had been closed. He intended to return for it the next night.

The money was found in the former branch a month after the robbery. It was discovered also that bricks had been loosened in the wall leading to the vault there.

St. Pierre said he kept the robbery a secret for a year, "then I told Cecil BoBvay gradually about the affair."

Criminals Must Talk

"Every criminal must talk," he said. "In my case it was bearing on my mind. Bovay bled me for the next two years and he got money from me and never paid it back. At last I could stand it no longer. I told Bovay and his wife they could blackmail me no longer."

He said he told them that "If you do, I'll kill you."

(Four witnesses said they overheard the threat.)

A witness to the threat reported the affair to police and St. Pierre was arrested May 12.

In court today St. Pierre said that his threat to kill was "just an expression".

Magistrate J. Shea asked St. Pierre if he read much.

"Yes," he replied. "I read the Bible every day and detective magazines."

"Did you ever read about the perfect crime?" the magistrate asked.

"Lots of them," St. Pierre replied. "Every crime is perfect until you're caught."

Proud of Job.

St. Pierre replied "sure" when asked by his counsel, R. E. Nourse, Picton, if he "was proud you did such a good job (of the bank robbery)." At conclusion of the trial Magistrate Shea recommended that St. Pierre undergo a psychiatric examination.

"This is a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde case," stated Crown Attorney Gordon Walmsley. "Several witnesses have testified to the unblemished character and fine reputation this man had in his community. It beats any moving picture or detective story for plot, plans and development."

The charges against St. Pierre and Bovay culminated four years of police investigation of the robbery of the Bank of Nova Scotia branch at Wellington.

Called to investigate threats said to have been made by St. Pierre against Bovay Sergt Harry Thompson and members of the Belleville detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police "broke" the case after rigid investigation of the circumstances surrounding the threats, St. Pierre confessed in a statement given to police by him. Today's startling developments were the climax of a dramatic story, that baffles description.

County Crown Attorney Gordon Walmaley outlined the facts of the case to Magistrate Shea before the principal figure in the sensational hearing was placed on the witness stand. He told of the discovery of coins in the tank of St. Pierre's car and how he had secreted the American silver in a rubber tube and placed it in the tank before going to the United States.

"He made one slip. He did not take into consideration the fact that gasoline will destroy rubber. Consequently the coins were found in the tank," he said. Other salient features of the four-year-old drama were told the court by the Crown.

Radio Carries Sound of Salute In Old Quebec

LONDON, May 17 — (CP)—The British radio audience today heard a step-by-step description of the Sovereigns' arrival in Canada in a British Broadcasting Corporation program broadcast over Empire wavelengths.

Reception of the descriptions sent by various announcers, including an English observer sent to Quebec by the B.B.C. was good, apart from occasional atmospheric interference.

Announcement that the King and Queen had gone ashore after their prolonged voyage reached here at 3.37 p.m. The roar of guns saluting the King and Queen as they set foot on Canadian soil was followed by a detailed description of the royal procession through the streets of Quebec.

St. Jean, Island of Orleans, Que., May 17.—(CP)—Hundreds of automobiles remained parked during the night along the banks of the St. Lawrence River, as their occupants slept in the vehicles to gain a daylight view of the liner Empress of Australia.

Toronto, May 17.— (CP)—Majestic musical accompaniment to the visit of Their Majesties here May 22 will be provided by J. Leland Richardson on the University of Toronto's Soldiers' Tower Bells.

The 32-year-old Toronto-born carilloneur counts it a high point in his career, which began in 1924 when he will be able to play within hearing of the King and Queen. He says his program will consist largely of patriotic numbers and Scottish and English melodies.

"I always try to play things people know," he explains.

Calgary, May 17.—(CP)—A time-honored relic, a glass loving cup, made during the coronation of Queen Victoria in 1837, will be on display at the Calgary Armouries during the visit of the King and Queen, May 26.

Quebec, May 17.—(CP) —Brenda Flynn, four, daughter of Lt.-Col. Percy Flynn, got up early today to put the finishing touches on the curtsy she will make this afternoon in presenting a nosegay to the Queen.

Washington, May 17. —(AP) — Stamp collectors who want envelopes bearing the postmark of King George's royal train in the United States next month will get their wish. "The Post Office department has arranged to apply a special postmark to such mail June 9, although the letters actually won't be carried on the special train. Prepaid covers should be sent to the Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Quebec, May 17.—(CP)—Evidence of the King's consideration for his subjects was given last night in a message from His Majesty to Dominion government officials in charge of the royal tour.

They were told that while it was customary for everyone to remain standing while the King was speaking, he desired that everyone attending the Dominion government luncheon here today should sit entirely at ease throughout his speech.

Queen Appears In Pearl-Grey Ensemble

Quebec, May 17 (CP)—Canadians' first glimpse of their Queen today was of a gracious lady attired in simple pearl-grey ensemble of light wool, with long fox fur from the shoulders to the end of the hip-length jacket.

An off-the-face model hat of grey felt pinned at one side with a perky bow, grey shoes and stockings and white gloves completed her ensemble.

The King was dressed in the uniform of an Admiral.

MAKES TRIP JUST THE SAME

North Bay, Ont., May 17—(CP)—Danny Dionne, seven, will carry his right arm in a sling when the Dionne family meet the King and Queen, May 22 at Queen's Park, Toronto. He fractured his arm playing Saturday, but will not miss the Toronto visit along with his five sisters and other members of the family.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Ontario May 17—(Special)—More than fifty officers and men of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment paraded to St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday morning, leaving the Armoury and proceeding along Dundas St., to the church, while scores of churchgoers and strollers lined the streets to watch. The church parade was the first of its kind held in Trenton in some years, and was headed by Major H. D. Graham, officer commanding 'A' Company. The signal section and the anti-aircraft section of the Headquarters Company were also represented in the parade, and officers who marched with the troops were Captain A. A. Mutton, Lieut. F. W. Sherbert, Lieut. A. H. Norrington, and Lieut. H. S. Campbell.

Capt. the Rev. F. Arthur Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican Church, honorary padre of the unit, welcomed the men to the congregation and paid a tribute to the members of the non-permanent militia units all over Canada. All too seldom is their sacrifice recognized, he pointed out, making reference to the fact that they voluntarily and often without pay of any kind give of their time and effort. Should war develop the whole country would depend on their prowess and would acclaim them heroes, he said, but for the present they received little recognition.

Taking as his text a verse from Samuel I., Rev. Mr. Smith used the words "Behold, your king walketh before you" to bring to the hearts and minds of his congregation the thought of the royal visit to Canada. He made a plea that instead of trying to see hidden diplomatic and commercial and military reasons underlying the visit the Canadian public should accept the visit for what it really is—just a goodwill visit on the part of two friendly and interested people who are King and Queen of Canada. "It is a great thing to be a Canadian", he said, and expressed the hope that Canadian and British democracy may always flourish.

Reforming outside the church after the service the parade followed the same route back to the Armoury. Unfortunately no band was available, and three high school drummers accompanied the unit. The H. & P.E. regimental band is centred at Picton, of course, and is too far afield to make it worthwhile bringing them to Trenton for a small parade, and the R.C.A.F. band is absent in Ottawa awaiting the royal visit.

Yourex Wins

Yourex Billiards softballers pried the lid off the current softball season down at Bayshore Park on Monday evening when they took on the R.C.A.F. nine, their traditional enemies, and seemed to have them handily beaten until the Flyers rallied at the end to present the fans with an 11-11 score. Some discussion followed as to whether it was wise to play off the tie, but evidently both teams were content to split the glory, if any; and the game was called after seven innings of rather haphazard ball.

Perhaps due to the chilly breezes blowing off the bay, perhaps to stage fright at the first game of the season, or probably due to general lack of conditioning both teams were guilty of a pile of errors; and Yourex should have taken the Airmen handily. Minus the services of "Tiny" Davis who is absent in Ottawa with the R.C.A.F. band the Flyers were weak in the pitching department and used two hurlers, neither one of whom presented any baffling mysteries. Joe Stevenson of the birdmen took the heavy hitting honours when he pounded out the longest homer of the night in the sixth with two aboard, while other homers were credited to Cain, Vic Burtt, and Cottrell.

His Worship Mayor Cory pitched the first ball to catcher-councillor Henry LaFleur, while batter-councillor Ken Couch stood his ground and waited for seven or eight pitches until he found one to his liking, then slapped out a neat Texas leaguer.

The crowd, for a first night, was surprisingly large and this season's executive are to be congratulated on their organization of the loop. On Wednesday night Wooler will meet Graham's Garage in another scheduled fixture.

Perhaps the only unfavourable feature of the game, apart from errors and cool breezes, was the presence of squadrons and squadrons of uninvited small flies that swarmed into the eyes and mouths of players and fans alike. These rather took the keen edge off the night's enjoyment and were most unwelcome.

Score by innings

Yourex Billiards	203	006	0—11
R.C.A.F.	000	215	3—11

Umpires—Carswell, plate; Kennedy, bases.

School was dismissed rather suddenly on Monday afternoon for pupils of one room of Dufferin school when the teacher, H. S. Campbell, vice-principal, received word of a motor accident in which his wife and parents had been slightly injured near Port Hope. Details of the accident are lacking but from first reports it appeared that the car, driven by Mrs. Campbell, and carrying as passengers Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Campbell, parents of Mr. Campbell in some manner overturned, shaking up the occupants.

Reports from the R.C.A.F. station say that recently a large Oxford twin-motored bomber was delivered here, to be used for training purposes, and will be followed shortly by a dozen more of the same type of craft. Further than that it is expected that nearly a dozen of the fast Hawker Hurricanes will be brought here for advanced training, and pilots will be sent here after preliminary training at other R.C.A.F. bases.

ROYAL VISIT HAS 'SYMBOLIC VALUE'

French Paper Speaks of Naval Unity of British Empire

Paris, May 17. — (CP-Havas) — The significance of the visit of the King and Queen to Canada was stressed by Le Temps (Independent) in an editorial today.

In an article entitled "The Dominions and the British Empire", the newspaper said the royal visit "assumes for all peoples of the Commonwealth a symbolic value, illustrating the moral unity of an empire whose coasts are bathed by all the seas of the world."

"Proofs of the grandeur and power of empire are clearly evident," the paper said. "The links between the United Kingdom and the Dominions are thus strikingly affirmed. Nothing is more impressive in the political domain than demonstrations of the permanent and full solidarity of the British autonomous nations, master of their own destinies, and the mother country; and their loyalty to the Crown which constitutes the most supple and solid link between all parts of this community.".

BRITISH

Procession Starts.

Then the King returned to the dais, and at the same time the specially-built car slipped from out of the shed. Their departure was a signal for another burst of spontaneous cheering, their Majesties smiling and waving to the hundreds jammed into every small corner of the big shed that nestles at the foot of Wolfe's Cove.

The car, accompanied by an impressive escort moved slowly through the narrow avenues that lead to the Plains of Abraham and Upper Town, high on the great cliffs overlooking the St. Lawrence River. Through the streets the short procession moved slowly until finally at 11:10 a.m. it reached the Provincial Legislature building where their Majesties were greeted officially by Premier Maurice Duplessis and Lieutenant Governor E. L. Patenaude. To Premier's welcome in French, the King handed his reply, also in French.

Receives Cardinal Villeneuve.

The King also received Cardinal Villeneuve, Canada's only Prince of the Roman Catholic Church. The ceremony lasted only twelve minutes and their Majesties left the building to the accompaniment of more cheering from crowds who covered the spacious lawns, climbed trees and otherwise occupied every point from which the Royal entourage could be seen.

After another short, triumphal drive through more streets the Royal car sped to the citadel, where Boy Scouts, Sea Scouts, Girl Guides and members of other juvenile organizations formed a cordon along the winding, stone road.

At the Citadel.

The Royal procession reached the Citadel, surrounded by rambling fortress walls atop the city's highest peak at 11.45 a.m. There the Royal couple, 45 minutes ahead of their scheduled time, rested until 1 p.m., when they left again for a luncheon given by the Dominion Government at the Chateau Frontenac.

The Arrival

Quebec, May 17. — (CP)—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth stepped on to Canadian soil at 10.34 a.m. today in the shadow of the giant cliff that General Wolfe scaled 180 years ago to win "New France" for the British crown.

The King made his way down the flag-decked gangway, just a step in front of his smiling Consort. A tremendous welcome rose—cheering, tolling bells, screeching tug whistles, the roar of airplanes.

It was an impressive and awesome moment as Their Majesties stepped onto the silk carpet covering their pathway and it marked the first time in history that a King of England set foot in the new world".

Bugles Herald Approach

From within the ship came the shrill notes of two bugles that heralded the royal approach. Then appeared Their Majesties, framed in the exit. There they could be seen shaking hands with ships' officers.

A moment later they walked slowly, smiling, down the gangway. The bugles still were sounding when the King, just a fraction of a second ahead of the Queen, set his foot on the banner that stretched from the gangplank.

At the same moment the guns on Quebec's historic citadel began booming a royal salute, and a wild spontaneous cheer rose from the throats of hundreds upon hundreds of Quebecers assembled about the wharf and lining the historic cliff-side above which lie the Plains of Abraham.

King Inspects Guard

Canadians obtained their first fine view of the King as he left the welcoming dais. The Royal 22nd Canadian regiment, dressed in scarlet coats and busbies, was lined up on the wharf. With one officer, the King strode across the hollow square to inspect his guard of honor.

The King moved quickly down the front rank, then the rear. The specially-designed automobile for the royal party swung into position before the dais.

Their Majesties entered the long, open, car which flew the Royal Standard. A grey robe was thrown over their laps and the sleek machine moved off toward the province's legislature buildings.

Couple Rode Alone

The King and Queen rode alone in the car.

The royal procession consisted of two open cars and several closed cars carrying officials.

Cheering came in great waves, then there would be momentary silence. But the tolling of bells, the cheering of children and French-Canadian parents continued to echo back to the waterfront as the Royal car climbed the narrow, winding cobble - stone streets that lead to "Upper Town."

His Majesty wore the uniform of an Admiral. Its blue color blended with the grey ensemble of his consort.

At 11.10 a.m. the Royal procession had reached the rambling legislature Buildings for their formal welcome to the province by Premier Maurice Duplessis. Their Majesties were greeted at the main entrance by the Premier and Lieutenant-Governor Patenaude who previously had greeted the King and Queen at the dock, in company with Canada's Privy Councillors and Cabinet Ministers.

Thousands Throng Lawns

Slowly, Their Majesties mounted the short flight of stone steps that led to the doorway, through which could be seen the palm-dotted hallway. Through the hall they made their way to the spacious dressing room, into which the Legislature restaurant had been converted.

Thousands of persons thronged the spacious lawns of the Legislature Park, cheered in unison as the Royal couple entered the building, and retained their positions to await the next glimpse of the noted visitors.

STEVENS ASSAILS PACKING INDUSTRY DURING DEBATE

Claims Producers Will Never Get Square Deal as Long as Domination Continues

CADET TRAINING

Ottawa, May 17 (CP)—Canadian livestock producers will never get a square deal so long as the packing industry "dominates" the livestock branch of the Department of Agriculture the way it has for the past 15 years, according to Hon. H. H. Stevens (Con. Kootenay East).

Not even a minor regulation has been passed by the livestock branch that was not referred to the Packers' Association office in Toronto, he said.

The former Minister of Trade and Commerce last night in the Commons vigorously assailed the government's new bill regulating stockyards and livestock marketing as a "further domination of the producers' rights and interests by the most interested party of all, namely the party who buys his goods."

Agriculture Minister Gardiner asserted the intention of the legislation was the very opposite of that assumed by Mr. Stevens.

Lots of Criticism

"There is a great deal of criticism of the packers all across the country," he said, "some of it justified and some is probably not justified. In any case this legislation is intended to regulate the trade in a manner which will give less control to the packer than he has had under the legislation which exists at the present time."

More stringent control over the quality and quantity of exports of farm products was advocated by Mark Senn (Cons-Haldimand).

Mr. Senn complained especially against lack of uniform grading of export cheese and bacon. Because of that lack, Canadian bacon was selling in the United Kingdom at 10 shillings per 100 pounds less than Danish bacon. A higher price for bacon there would benefit the whole livestock industry, he contended.

Producers Should Organize

Joseph Harris (Cons.-Toronto-Danforth) contended the livestock producers themselves should organize themselves more effectively, as the packers had done. Organization was desirable but a better balance of organization between branches of the industry was essential.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner felt appointment of an advisory committee of various interests, possibly including the packing houses, would largely remedy that situation.

The Stockyards Bill proposes greater administrative power in the management of stockyards. Most important, it proposes to place with the government the power to regulate the construction, equipment, maintenance and operation of yards of packers and stockyards.

An advisory committee representing the producers and possibly the processors would be set up under the act to assist in the regulation of the industry. Just how the personnel of that committee would be selected occupied the House for some time last night, several contending it should not include packer representatives since they were already highly organized.

Bill Talked Out

The House spent most of yesterday on estimates of the National Defence Department. Third reading was given a bill incorporating the Prescott and Ogdensburg Bridge Company. The long-controverted issue of salmon traps at Sooke, B.C., was "talked out."

Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie announced his intention of acting on the suggestion of Conservative Leader Manion in sponsoring a joint defence committee of Senate and Commons to thresh out detailed defence matters which were better considered privately.

While he intended having such a committee set up next session, he stated he was prepared to bring staff officers and technical defence experts before such a special committee if the House were so inclined.

Cadet Training

More than half the school cadets in Canada are enrolled in the Province of Quebec, Mr. MacKenzie said.

At the same time he regretted that the number of cadets in militia services was diminishing every year, although there are now a few units of air and sea cadets.

Grant MacNeil (C.C.F.-Vancouver North) submitted that the "present unpopularity" of cadets corps was due to the "useless" training given which, he claimed, merely exploited and built up a militaristic spirit which had proven objectionable.

The training given was obsolete from the military point of view, he said. The main need was for more physical training along the lines of the work being carried out in British Columbia. The kind of training being given in recreational centres there would be more valuable in national emergency than the cadet training given.

Of 73,163 cadets, 42,290 were from Quebec and 22,288 from Ontario, the Minister said. From other provinces: British Columbia, 1,066; Alberta 1,104; Saskatchewan 1,004; Prince Edward Island 986.

Increase of $5,000

The appropriation approved for cadet services was $144,500, an increase of $5,000 from last year.

Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., was given $402,544, an increase of $21, 044 of which about $16,000 was merely transferred from the general engineering services appropriation.

Mr. MacKenzie explained that students were selected by a board of Defence Department headquarters, on a provincial quota basis.

With a capacity of 200 students, the annual cost for each student was $1,894,of which the student paid $100 in fees.

Mr. MacNeil said there was an impression abroad that enrolement at R.M.C. was reserved for an exclusive group, that it was "sort of a snob outfit." The Minister assured him that was a mistaken impression and claimed that even the Minister could not interfere with selection of students.

Mr. MacNeil felt some provision should be made for selection on a purely competitive basis when the institution was almost completely state supported.

Canada A 'Land Of Plenty, Wealth And Happiness'

London, May 17—(CP)—Arrival of the King and Queen in Canada today was used by the Daily Express (Independent) as an occasion to praise the Dominion as a "land of plenty," happiness and wealth."

The editorial said:

"Every boy born in Canada is like a soldier of Napoleon. He has the business equivalent of a Field Marshal's baton, which all Napoleon's soldiers were said to carry in their knapsacks.

"Canada has no class system in education, no Eton and Winchester. It has no oligarchy in politics, and there are no ecclesiastics who usurp the responsibilities of government."

The Right Thing

By KARIN SUNDELOF

For two weeks Anne Marie had been managing a house and family with one hand and the exacting position of stenographer to his Honor, the Mayor of Laboria, with the other. With her mother away visiting a sick relative, she rose to the brazen clamor of the alarm every morning at six, built a fire in the kitchen stove, started breakfast, called or hauled (as the case required) the family from their respective beds, dressed herself for work, and served breakfast at a rate of speed that left her breathless upon her arirval at the mayoralty office.

On arriving 20 minutes late, she felt more abused than ever to find that his Honor had already been there and had gone out after first inquiring for her. "And I haven't been late for months," she grumbled. "Isn't that just my luck?"

She attacked the mails furiously and was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone.

"Hello, this you, Anne dear?" It was Bob, her soon-to-be fiance, and the cause of her being out late the evening before and thus, indirectly, the source of this day's train of minor catastrophes. From its hidden lair, Anne's femnline perversity arose, and she sniffed.

"Oh, it's you."

"Sure it's me. Who'd you suppose? You sound awfully disappointed."

"Oh, do I?"

"You certainly do. Say, what's the matter with you? Tired?"

"No, nothing's the matter."

"Well, I'm glad of that. Listen—I called you up to tell you that Tom McNair wants me to run down to Boston with him to see the game, Saturday, and he wants me to stay over Sunday. Do you mind?"

He had promised to take her riding Sunday and she had been looking forward to it all week as a heavenly relaxation from the everlasting grind. She was so disappointed she could have cried then and there, but anger and pride prevented, so instead she snapped:

"No, I don't. Why should I?" She slammed the receiver on its hook and, her anger vented, flung her arms on the desk and, burying her face in them, wept the tears of the tired the nervous and distrait.

At home she prepared the evening meal like an automaton and served it to her father sister and brother, eating none of it herself. Leaving the dishes for Sissy to do, or not to do, as she happened to see fit, Anne Marie sought the refuge of her bedroom and flung herself on the bed.

A horn honked out front and by a purely reflex action Anne Marie sprang up, then she lay down again. Let him honk. He needn't think she would let him in. He knew she didn't like him to blow his horn like that, and she was through putting up with things just because she was used to them. Then the door bell rang, but she paid no heed.

The next day was Saturday, and a half holiday. When Anne Marie finished at noon there was the familiar buff and blue car parked out front. Some one was in it, some one who saw her the minute she left the building and who, springing to meet her, caught her arm.

"Well, Miss Sulks, I had to stay home from the game to see you, but I'm going to make it worth it." He made her get into the car and, without giving her a chance to say anything, chattered incessantly and inconsequetly while he started the motor.

They drove through the traffic in complete silence, however. When they drove past her street thorough indignation compelled Anne Marie to ask in as icy a tone as she was capable:

"May I ask where you are taking me?"

"You may." Calm, so maddeningly calm Bob could be.

"Well, where?" decidedly belligerent.

"To be married, dear."

"Wh-a-a-t?"

Bob put an arm around her and she struggled to get away.

"Will you please stop this silly joke and take me home? I have an appointment at two."

"I know you have, sweetheart. Didn't I make it for you?" Bob had stopped the car, and now had both arms around her, in spite of her none too desperate resistance.

"Now, I'll tell you all about it. In the first place this is no joke; I'm in deadly earnest. Secondly: you are temperamental, accent on the temper. Thirdly, you are working yourself to death. Fourthly, and most important, I love you."

Just to show her, he kissed her and while she was thus rendered helpless, slipped a ring on the third finger of her left hand.

"Now, my lady, you're engaged. In less than an hour, you'll be married."

And so they were.

WANTED—A WORD

Pursuit of a milder synonym for "depression" has been even more prolonged and intensive than the search for a word to replace "business appeasement."

The expressive monosyllable, "slump", has long ago been outlawed by those who hope to restore confidence through psychological suggestion. "Recession" has been a favorite in recent months, but its sound, suggestive of "recessional," is a bit too melancholy for the purpose. "Relapse" was once in vogue, and was frowned upon when its clinical, even funereal, connotations were realized.

Now all the helpful word-sleuths can quit thumbing the dictionary and the thesaurus, for the long-sought verbal evasion has been found. Its discoverer is Secretary Morgenthau, who announced to the world recently, in testifying before the House ways and means committee, when he said, "In periods of incomplete business recovery like the present . . ."

That blue ribbon Mr. Morgenthau wears today symbolizes his runaway victory in the Euphemism Sweepstakes.—St. Louis Post-Despatch.

The Right Thing

By KARIN SUNDELOF

For two weeks Anne Marie had been managing a house and family with one hand and the exacting position of stenographer to his Honor, the Mayor of Laboria, with the other. With her mother away visiting a sick relative, she rose to the brazen clamor of the alarm every morning at six, built a fire in the kitchen stove, started breakfast, called or hauled (as the case required) the family from their respective beds, dressed herself for work, and served breakfast at a rate of speed that left her breathless upon her arrival at the mayorality office.

On arriving 20 minutes late, she felt more abused than ever to find that his Honor had already been there and had gone out after first inquiring for her. "And I haven't been late for months," she grumbled. "Isn't that just my luck?"

She attacked the mails furiously and was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone.

"Hello, this you, Anne dear?" It was Bob, her soon-to-be fiance, and the cause of her being out late the evening before and thus, indirectly, the source of this day's train of minor catastrophes. From its hidden lair, Anne's feminine perversity arose, and she sniffed.

"Oh, it's you."

"Sure it's me. Who'd you suppose? You sound awfully disappointed."

"Oh, do I?"

"You certainly do. Say, what's the matter with you? Tired?"

"No, nothing's the matter."

"Well, I'm glad of that. Listen—I called you up to tell you that Tom McNair wants me to run down to Boston with him to see the game, Saturday, and he wants me to stay over Sunday. Do you mind?"

He had promised to take her riding Sunday and she had been looking forward to it all week as a heavenly relaxation from the everlasting grind. She was so disappointed she could have cried then and there, but anger and pride prevented; so instead she snapped:

"No, I don't. Why should I?" She slammed the receiver on its hook and, her anger vented, flung her arms on the desk and, burying her face in them, wept the tears of the tired the nervous and distrait.

At home she prepared the evening meal like an automaton and served it to her father sister and brother, eating none of it herself. Leaving the dishes for Sissy to do, or not to do, as she happened to see fit, Anne Marie sought the refuge of her bedroom and flung herself on the bed.

A horn honked out front and by a purely reflex action Anne Marie sprang up, then she lay down again. Let him honk. He needn't think she would let him in. He knew she didn't like him to blow his horn like that, and she was through putting up with things just because she was used to them. Then the door bell rang, but she paid no heed.

The next day was Saturday, and a half holiday. When Anne Marie finished at noon there was the familiar buff and blue car parked out front. Some one was in it, some one who saw her the minute she left the building and who, springing to meet her, caught her arm.

"Well Miss Sulks, I had to stay home from the game to see you, but I'm going to make it worth it." He made her get into the car and, without giving her a chance to say anything, chattered incessantly and inconsequently while he started the motor.

They drove through the traffic in complete silence, however. When they drove past her street thorough indignation compelled Anne Marie to ask in as icy a tone as she was capable:

"May I ask where you are taking me?"

"You may." Calm, so maddeningly calm Bob could be.

"Well, where?" decidedly belligerent.

"To be married, dear."

"Wh-a-a-t?"

Bob put an arm around her and she struggled to get away.

"Will you please stop this silly joke and take me home? I have an appointment at two."

"I know you have, sweetheart. Didn't I make it for you?" Bob had stopped the car, and now had both arms around her, in spite of her none too desperate resistance.

"Now, I'll tell you all about it. In the first place this is no joke; I'm in deadly earnest. Secondly: you are temperamental, accent on the temper. Thirdly, you are working yourself to death. Fourthly, and most important, I love you."

Just to show her, he kissed her and while she was thus rendered helpless, slipped a ring on the third finger of her left hand.

"Now, my lady, you're engaged. In less than an hour, you'll be married."

And so they were.

WANTED—A WORD

Pursuit of a milder synonym for "depression" has been even more prolonged and intensive than the search for a word to replace "business appeasement."

The expressive monosyllable, "slump", has long ago been outlawed by those who hope to restore confidence through psychological suggestion. "Recession" has been a favorite in recent months, but its sound, suggestive of "recessional," is a bit too melancholy for the purpose. "Relapse" was once in vogue, and was frowned upon when its clinical, even funereal, connotations were realized.

Now all the helpful word-sleuths can quit thumbing the dictionary and the thesaurus, for the long-sought verbal evasion has been found. Its discoverer is Secretary Morgenthau, who announced to the world recently, in testifying before the House ways and means committee, when he said, "In periods of incomplete business recovery like the present . . ."

That blue ribbon Mr. Morgenthau wears today symbolizes his runaway victory in the Euphemism Sweepstakes.—St. Louis Post-Despatch.

Axis Commanders in Italian Colony

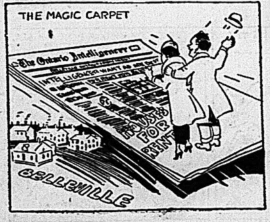
Axis commanders in Italian colony Coinciding with the announcement that Italy and Germany had concluded an out-and-out military pact, General Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German army, arrived in Libya, Italian north African colony, to confer with Marshal Italo Balbo, its governor. The German general is seen saluting the guard of honor drawn up by Balbo with whom he is walking, on his arrival in Tripoli, capital of the Italian possession.

Out after his second straight British amateur golf championship is Charley Yates, ABOVE, personable young man from Georgia, whose win last year was so popular. Charley has a hard task on his hands, and should he turn the trick again he will be only the fourth person to have done so, the last one being another American, Lawson Little, in 1934 and 1935. Yates' opponent in the first round will be Bruce Thompson.

CONNY SMYTHE

RED DUTTON

This pair of hockey masterminds, seen in something less than their usual ebullient spirits, have cooked up a deal between their teams, but they "ain't sayin' nothin'." Not for the moment anyway. Mr. Smythe, acts in a similar capacity for New York Americans, and their teams frequently met in National Hockey League battles, the most recent meeting having been somewhat of a headache to Mervyn the Red (remember the playoffs?). But the hatchet, if any, has been buried since then, and a big transaction, involving possibly three or four players on each team will be announced "sometime".

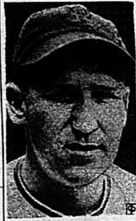


Famed Surgeon in U. S.

Famous for his work in the 'monkey-gland' rejuvenation field, Dr. Serge Voronoff, now 70 years old is seen as he arrived in New York on his way to South America. Dr. Voronoff holds the position of director of surgery at Station Physiologique de College de France in Paris.

When the pucks start flying next November, Frank Calder, ABOVE, will be heading the National League for the 23rd time, but again, as was the case last year, he will have but a seven club league to look after. Montreal Maroons' franchise, suspended last year, underwent the same treatment again at the most recent league meeting and no other city was ready to jump in and make the N.H.L. the eight-club loop so much desired.

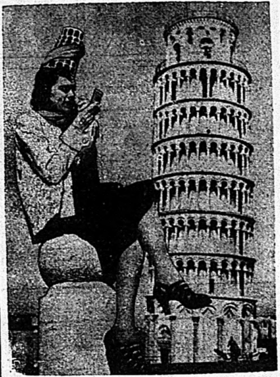
Best individual batting performance so far this season in the majors was turned in by Ben Chapman, ABOVE, outfielder with Cleveland Indians, who banged out two home runs and a triple in his first three turns at bat in a recent game. His blows batted in seven runs, more than enough to give Bob Feller his sixth win of the season.



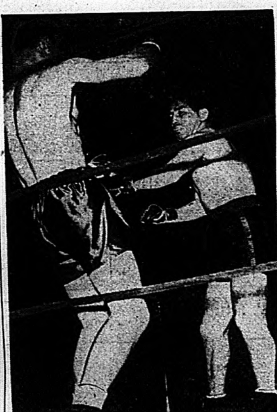
Life against Chicago Cubs, whom they must play 22 times every year, would be sad indeed for Pittsburgh Pirates were it not for pitcher Jim Tobin, ABOVE. Last August 22, the Pirates beat the Cubs with Tobin on the mound and after that went down to nine straight defeats, including the skin that lost them last year's pennant, until recently they turned on their tormenters and again had a Chicago win to their credit . . . .with Tobin on the mound.

Crown Prince in Bad Books of Il Duce

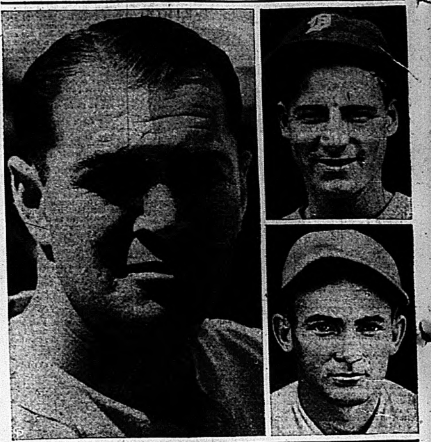
Because he has consistently opposed the policies of Mussolini, particularly collaboration with Nazi Germany, Crown Prince Humbert, of Italy, direct heir to the Italian throne, has been ordered to make "an extended visit" to Brussels, Belgian capital, according to a London story. The "visit" of the crown prince, who first incurred the dislike of Il Duce by his refusal to participate in the Ethiopian campaign, amounts to virtual exile, into which he will be accompanied by his wife, the former Princess Maria Jose of Belgium, shown ABOVE with her husband.



There appears to be no limit as to what the designers of milady's hats will use for an inspiration. Italian hat designers have just produced this epic—a copy of the Leaning Tower of Pisa. Elizabeth Boyce, an American visitor to the Tower, is shown wearing the latest creation.

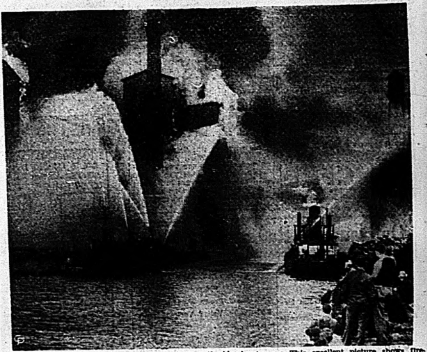


Even the winner takes punishment and Solly Krieger world's middleweight champion (N.B.A. species), who lost a decision to Billy Conn, was getting in a real socko when the camera clicked on this. His round-house left has sent William reeling back against the ropes, but wasn't enough to stop the Pittsburgh Irishman from coming back to take most of the rounds and the fight. That Solly was really putting his all into it can be seen by his feet—both clear of the canvas.



Biggest baseball trade this season was engineered between St. Louis Browns and Detroit Tigers, a deal that involved ten players, the Brownies sending four to Detroit in exchange for six. Central figure in the deal was Buck Newsom, LEFT, ace righthander of the Browns, and winner of 20 games last year as his team finished last. The Tigers had been after Newsom for some time. To make up for the loss of their ace the Browns secured Roxie Lawson, TOP RIGHT; Vernon Kennedy, BOTTOM RIGHT; George Gill and Bob Harris in the way of pitching. Lawson won 18 for Detroit two years ago, but hasn't struck that stride since. Kennedy was the ace of the Chicago White Sox staff until he went to Detroit last year and once pitched a no-hitter. In addition to Newsom, Detroit got pitcher Jim Walkup, infielder Red Kress and outfielder Bean Bell, while the Browns also got outfielder Chet Laabs and third baseman Mark Christman, as well as the four pitchers.

$2,000,000 Fire Roars Through Chicago Elevators



Eight persons were known to have died and more than 20 others were injured in a spectacular blaze that gutted five Chicago grain elevators in that city's greatest conflagration since the stock yard fire of five years ago. Flames followed an explosion in a south side elevator and quickly spread to nearby elevators, warehouses, box cars and automobiles, covering the city with a pall of dense smoke. Spontaneous combustion was believed to be the cause of the original explosion. This excellent picture shows fireboats of the most modern kind pouring water into the blazing elevators from the Calumet river, the only place from which the fire could be successfully fought for the first couple of hours.

Bill McKechnie who guides the destinies of the highly-fancied Cincinnati Reds in the National League, points out something to Johnny Vander Meer when the Reds were playing St. Louis Cardinals. It looks as if Bill won't have to point out many things to Johnny from here in as the double no-hit performer of last year, counted on as one of the team's mainstays this year, appears to be back at the peak. After being well-battered by the opposition in his first four starts, he tossed a four-hitter against the Cards for his first win of the season. During the game he struck out nine, including the formidable Medwick and Mize in succession twice, once with the bases full.

Britain Likely to Accept Soviet Plans for Alliance

Modifications in The British Plan Are Not Known

Believed Drafted to Meet Russian Complaint That Original Suggestion Not Sufficiently Reciprocal

NOT LEFT ALONE

Russia's Proposals Are Understood to Involve Outright Military Pact Between Three Countries

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 18 (CP Cable)—Great Britain has so modified her suggestions for Russian collaboration in Europe's anti-aggression front it would not surprise observers here if eventually she accepted the Soviet's original plan for a triple military alliance.

Extent of the modifications in the British plan are not known, but it is reported they were drafted to meet the Russian complaint that Britain's original suggestion was not sufficiently reciprocal.

Russia's proposals are understood to involve an outright military pact among the Soviet, Great Britain, France and possibly Poland.

When the British plan first was communicated to the Russian Government by Sir William Seeds, the Ambassador in Moscow, the Russians said it would leave them, in certain eventualities to fight unaided. This contention has been denied all along by the British Government.

Campers and water supply! Campers may get pure water by catching rain from the sky but even when available this source is not convenient. Lake water and mountain streams are generally potable but river water is not, because of the refuse thrown into the rivers and to some extent of the run-off water picking up impurities from the soil. Shallow wells may be vitiated but deep wells and springs generally furnish good water that has been purified by filtration through several feet of earth. The camper, if in doubt, can always make water good by boiling it a few minutes. In times of flood, when water is most plentiful, the order is to boil all water for drinking.

130,000 Troops To March in Victory Parade

Madrid, May 18 (AP)—One hundred and thirty thousand troops, including German and Italian Legionnaires, will march in the Madrid Victory Parade tomorrow, General Andres Saliquet, Commander of the Central Military Zone, announced today. Naval units may boost the number to 140,000.

High officials of Italy and Germany and members of the Diplomatic Corps are to watch the review, after which General Francisco Franco is expected in a speech to define Spanish foreign policy.

Board Palace Train for First Rail Journey in Canada on Royal Tour

CHEERS AT DEPOT

By WILLIAM STEWART

Quebec, May 18 (CP) — King George and Queen Elizabeth departed today from this old French-Canadian capital, where they had landed 23 hours previously to start their history-making tour of Canada.

The sleek Royal train, carrying their Majesties to Three Rivers, Que., and Montreal, pulled out of Palais Station at 9.32 a.m. E.D.T. It was due to stop at Three Rivers for fifteen minutes, arriving there at 11.45 a.m. From there it will continue to Montreal, reaching the metropolis at 2.15 p.m.

The King and Queen were accompanied by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Premier Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, and George Leveille, the Quebec Premier's Secretary. Before boarding the train, the Royal couple were bade farewell by Lieutenant-Governor E. L. Patenaude of Quebec.

First Use of Train.

It was the first time that their Majesties had seen the luxurious blue and silver train that will be their "home" for almost a month, and will carry them over more than 6,000 miles of Canadian and United States territory.

Two Youths Rescued As Canoe Capsizes In the Trent River

Trenton, Ont., May 18 (Special)—Plunged into the cold waters of the mouth of the Trent River when their canoe suddenly overturned, Tom Scaletti, and Walter Hodge, 'teen-age youths of this town were rescued from their watery predicament by passing canoeists, yesterday.

Noticing the plight of the young men as they struggled in the water in an effort to reach their capsized craft, Bob Young and Sam McNeill, paddling a canoe nearby, rushed to their aid and hauled Scaletti into their boat.

PURPOSE OF VISIT OF KING TO U. S. IS NOT POLITICAL

Naturally, Says Sir Ronald, Part of Purpose is to Improve Friendship

NO PRESS CONFERENCE

Washington, May 18 (AP)—Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to the United States, held today the first press conference in his life to tell correspondents the sole political purpose of the visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to the United States was "to improve the ties of friendship with your country."

Sir Ronald, facing about 30 reporters, said the Royal visit had primarily been arranged as a visit to Canada and "the visit to the United States was not at the fore at that time in the minds of the King and Queen. But once the visit was arranged to Canada, its extension to the United States was the most natural thing in the world.

'Not Primarily Political'

"The purpose of the visit here is not primarily political although it is perfectly obvious that when the King visits a foreign country part of his purpose is to improve the ties of friendship as far as he possibly can. There is no more political purpose in the visit than that."

Answering a question, he said it was "inconceivable that the King would not have conversations with Secretary (of State) Hull during his visit."

It was assumed the Ambassador meant that in the natural course of events his Majesty would have an informal chat with the Secretary of

Humans Forced to 'Hibernate' Like Bears Cured of Many Ills

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE

St. Louis, May 18 (AP) — Like wildfire a new medical idea, human hibernation, is spreading among the thousands of doctors here for the annual meeting of the American Medical Association.

They want to try it on heart disease, insanity, tuberculosis and ills representing the whole gamut from degenerative to infectious diseases. All week they have been standing three deep, on tiptoe, in little rings around a motion picture in a small scientific exhibition booth seeing something that never before was done to human beings

The pictures show women being put to "sleep" like hibernating bears, by refrigeration. The hibernation exhibit is by Doctors Temple Fay and Lawrence Smith of Philadelphia.

The women are stripped and covered with cracked ice like frozen fish. An electric fan is turned on. In three hours their internal temperatures are forced down below 90, usually to a rectal temperature of 89. They go to sleep.

Skeptical Jean-Baptiste Takes Royal Pair to Heart

Quebec, May 18 (CP)—Skeptical Jean-Baptiste, who always wants to be shown, has taken the King and Queen to his heart.

Yesterday morning at Wolfe's Cove he applauded heartily because the King and Queen had come. By afternoon he was cheering lustily as acquaintance with Their Majesties deepened. At night he was fighting with police for a vantage point in the crowds to see them.

For Jean-Baptiste, typical French-Canadian, is an independent, logical, freedom-loving individual. And he always wants to be shown.

Typical comment in French-Canadian crowds yesterday:

"The Queen is chic isn't she? All the photos of her don't do her justice." This from a young man.

A French-Canadian priest: "It was more than gesture his speaking to Senator Dandurand in French. And such a graceful speech."

Another priest: "I hear the King has a pretty heavy accent, but his French is undoubtedly good."

A young girl at the Battlefield Ceremony: "He's handsome, isn't he and so simple and forthright, and so youthful."

At the hotel: "The Queen's a grand person. She seems to have all the qualities that made Queen Mary such a fine queen."

And the little French-Canadian girl who presented flowers to Her Majesty at the Battlefields: "I was frightened at first. But she was so nice. She asked me my name and if I was a little French girl."

SQUIRRELS BLAMED

Grimsby, Ont., May 18 (CP)—Squirrels were blamed for a fire today that destroyed the 113-year-old home of James Armstrong in North Grimsby. Armstrong escaped with difficulty from the house.

Armstrong said squirrels living between the walls of the house probably caused the fire. Damage was estimated at nearly $6,000. The house was believed the oldest in the district. William Nixon, a United Empire Loyalist, built it in 1826.

SCHOOL CHILDREN GREET ROYALTY AT THREE RIVERS

Queen Elizabeth Motions Officials to One Side So She Could See Crowd

GIVEN PARCHMENT

Three Rivers, Que., May 18 (CP)—King George and Queen Elizabeth arrived at 11.45 a.m. E.D.T. today in this pulp-manufacturing town to receive a vociferous welcome from thousands of French-Canadian mill workers, school children and citizens who managed to gain standing room along the colorful champflours. Their Majesties came here on their royal train from Quebec where they disembarked yesterday from the liner Empress of Australia.

The King and Queen appeared immediately the train came to a halt. They were accompanied by Prime Minister Mackenzie King who presented "Monsieur La Maire", Atchez Pitt. Then Their Majesties mounted the carpeted dais and Mayor Pitt introduced Bishop Alfred Odilon Compfols of Three Rivers, and Dominion, Provincial and civic officials and their wives. Among those presented was Senator Charles Bourgeois of Shawinigan, Wilfrid Gariepy, Liberal member of the House of Commons, Judge Emile Marchand and a number of civic officials.

Respond to Continuous Cheers

The Queen never lost her smile. Every once in a while both Their Majesties responded smilingly to the continuous cheers, especially from the hundreds of schoolchildren sitting in tiers close to the station.

The cheers reached their greatest

Queen Elizabeth Conquers Hearts In Quebec by Beauty and Charm

Quebec, May 18 (CP)—French-Canada's memory of Queen Elizabeth undoubtedly will be its fondest of the royal visit.

The deep impression of Her Majesty's beauty and charm on Quebec's French-Canadians was one of the notable features of the 23-hour stay of the King and Queen.

Every appearance of the Queen was the signal for spontaneous cheering.

Her poise, quiet smile and the graceful wave of her hand brought happy smiles to the faces of city folk who swarmed over the city.

A vast throng at Wolfe's Cove dock roared its approval when Her Majesty walked down the gangplank of the liner Empress of Australia on its arrival.

Eagerness of crowds for "one more look," gave police more and more difficulty each time Their Majesties mved about in public.

Doubly-pleasing to the Quebecois were the warm glances Her Majesty received from King George with the ovations for her.

Many Thousands Pay Homage to King and Queen

Continuous Wave Upon Wave of Cheers Sweeps Along Route of Royal Progress After Historic Reception at Station

Montreal, May 18 (CP) — The Royal train carrying the King and Queen, pulled into Jean Talon Station in North Montreal today on time at 2.15 p.m. E.D.T. The train arrived from Quebec, after making a 15-minute stop at Three Rivers.

Thunderous shouting from thousands of throats greeted the King and Queen today as they arrived in the metropolis of His Majesty's senior Dominion.

It was a magnificent reception, tendered predominantly by French-Canadians, on the third stop by the Royal tour of Canada.

A colorful array greeted Their Majesties as they stepped from the train to a carpeted pathway leading to a dais from their private train. They were greeted by spontaneous cheering and shouting, flag waving and singing, band playing, punctuated by the detonations of a 21-gun salute.

Montreal, May 18 (CP)—Never in the 300-year history of this once Iroquois village has the varied population united as it did today to welcome the King and Queen.

And not since the day of the Armistice have the streets been so crowded, traffic so disrupted, the city in such festive garb and the citizens in such carefree spirt.

Almost nine hours before the train was scheduled to pull into the squat Jean Talon station, thousands of persons swarmed to the line Their Majesties were to follow through the city. Even down town, on the massive lawns of Dominion Square, where the King and Queen were not due until six o'clock, the crowds had formed six and eight deep.

Thousands Pour Into City

From the time the sun burst in brilliance over the city, little groups some with lunch baskets, suitcases, steamer rugs, chairs, improvised folding stools, began pouring into the main traffic arteries.

Hundreds from nearby hamlets came into the city before daybreak, some by truck, car and even horse and buggy. Down in Victoria Square, surrounding the huge monument to the present King's great-grandmother, even the Indians were represented. Six of them, clad in brilliant plaids found places along the curb stone to await the parade. With them was a squaw, her squalling papoose on a heavily-beaded "back-board".

Everyone was in holiday mood. The French-Canadian was observing not only the presence of the King and Queen but also the Holy Day of the Ascension. From the churches crowds streamed from early Mass. Thousands of schoolchildren marched along the roadways, seeking the observation posts reserved for them.

So great was the crowd, that all through the business district, barriers had been placed in front of plate glass windows. Doorway steps also had been barred and windows were guarded by slanted wood, protectors that the spectators would not be able to climb to the window sills.

Thousands—there was little use trying to estimate numbers—of persons who had paid as high as $7.50 for bleacher seats along the route, gained early occupancy of their positions, ate breakfast and luncheon.

King Displays Good Appetite

By FRANK H. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 18—(AP)— Already the British Royal tour in America has been called "The Royal Torture", but not by King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Smiling, good-natured, healthy-looking, normal persons, they showed no signs of torture, or even discomfort, this first day of crowded functions in new and strange surroundings even of their own realm.

This reporter, besides witnessing their welcome from the Empress of Australia and at other events during the day, was in position to observe every move, gesture, expression and even every mouthful of food they ate at the luncheon nearly 500 Canadian notables attended.

At the risk of bad taste in talking about Royal manners at table, the facts should be recorded that both the King and Queen had a good time. They are good talkers and good listeners, and they made a great assembly of dignitaries appear to feel at home in the august presence of the first British Sovereign to visit this continent.

King George had a good appetite; the Queen watched her helpings carefully.

So good was the King's appetite for his first meal ashore that, like a hungry schoolboy, he started eating his specially prepared toast.

At Jean Talon Station on North Park Avenue, crowds sang and jested as they awaited the Royal train's arrival.

Police had their hands full restraining the gay crowd which sought to break police lines.

PREMIER HEPBURN RETURNS HOME

Limping Slightly From Foot Injury but in General Good Health

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—Limping slightly as the result of trouble from an old foot injury but otherwise in good health, Premier Mitchell Hepburn returned to Queens Park today from a holiday in the South.

Some time ago Mr. Hepburn broke a small bone in his foot and in some manner the injury became aggravated. He hoped as he studied plans for the royal visit today, that the limp will disappear before he has to advance to meet Their Majesties on Monday.

DISPLAYS FLAG MADE IN 1860

Miss Wills, St. Agnes Manor, has a beautiful flag made by the ladies of St. Thomas Church at the time of the visit to Canada in 1860 of the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII. The flag is a naval ensign, beautifully finished, and is of a large size. Miss Wills is arranging to display the flag on the grounds. It is interesting to note that Miss Wills' grandfather was a captain in the Royal Navy serving at Trafalgar and Copenhagen.

C.N.R. ENGINEER MAKES LAST RUN

An employee of the local Division of the Canadian National Railways, and formerly of the Grand Trunk Railway for thirty-seven years, Ralph R. Crum, for the past thirty-three years an engineer of the line entered into retirement at Lindsay yesterday when he completed his last run. Mr. Crum during his many years of service has the enviable record of attaining well over one million miles of travel as engineer and fireman without an accident. He received his engineer's papers in the Belleville division in 1906.

$1,085 CITY'S SHARE OF REVENUE FROM SALE OF BEER HERE

As the city's share in government revenue received from the sale of beer in local hotels during the past year, a cheque for $1,085.91 has been received by city treasurer H. B. Stock from the office of the provincial treasurer, Queen's Park.

Slightly less beer was sold in Belleville during the past year than in the year previous, it is indicated by the fact that this year's cheque is slightly smaller. Las year Belleville's share of this revenue amounted to slightly over $1,100.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. EBENEZER COOKE

The funeral of Mrs. Ebenezer Cooke took place Wednesday afternoon, May 17th., fro mthe family residence, 70 Gordon Street, to St. Thomas' Church where the burial office of the Church of England was conducted by the Rev. G G. Wright, Rector of Christ Church, who said also the committal service at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery. Many friends were present and the floral tributes were beautiful and many in number. Belleville Chapter No. 55 O.E.S. conducted their service at the home.

The bearers were two sons, Mr. P. G. Cooke and Mr. J. E. Cooke; three sons-in-law, Mr. J. McGuire, Mr. J. Hanna and Mr. A. Boyle; one grandson, Mr. S. Johnstone.

MRS. M. McNULTY CROW (Toronto)

The many friends of Mrs. Margaret McNulty Crow, will be sorry to hear of her death in St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto on May 12th.

She was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. McNulty, of Elzevir, formerly of this city and a sister of the late Mrs. Con. Mullins.

She leaves besides her husband, two daughters, Marie and Rita.

Interment was made in Mount Hope cemetery, Toronto.

ST. JOHN'S MISSION

The members of the Ladies' Guild met at the home of Mrs. Manore on Tuesday. The meeting opened with hymn and prayer. The roll call was answered with a eerse on Mothers as last Sunday was Mother's Day. Mrs. Meens and Mrs. Mathews each read a payer on Mother's Day. Mrs. Corby sang a solo. The business being completed a dainty lunch was served by the hostess and Mrs. Corby. The meeting closed with the Blessing being said by the president.

RONALD J. LITTLE

Mr. and Mrs. George Little, Herchimer Avenue, will receive the sympathy of friends in their bereavement occasioned by the death of their two-months-old son Ronald James, which occurred at the family residence on Wednesday evening, May 17th. Left to mourn his loss besides the parents are two brothers, Gary Allen and Robert George, at home.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

FINAL DECORATIONS BEING ARRANGED

Front Street and other areas of the business section of the city took on a gala air today as final decorations were being hung in place. Firemen using long ladders commenced the decoration of the city hall this morning, and an ambitious display of flags, bunting and the Royal crest was being placed. The two bridges will not receive the decoration it was decided by chairman of Market and City Property due to the cost of an estimated $100 needed for the work.

BLAST IN ARSENAL KILLS 5 GUNNERS

Most Serious Accident at Woolwich Plant Since Year 1936

London, May 18 (AP)—The War Office announced that five army gunners were killed and six injured today in an explosion at Woolwich Arsenal, the second there in two days.

The explosion occurred during the loading of a 3.7-inch anti-aircraft gun. An investigation was begun.

Today's was the most serious accident at Woolwich since five men were killed in 1936 during secret experiments wtih artillery ammunition.

The victims, all connected with the Woolwich Scientific Military School, were standing near a gun at the stop-butts of the artillery range when the blast occurred.

The five bodies were taken to the Arsenal morgue.

C. A. Cameron, M. P., Makes Urgent Appeal to Premier King to Have Train Stop Here

Spent Most of Yesterday With Secretarial Staff of Premier to Have Their Majesties Make Personal Appearance During a Ten-Minute Stop

EXPECTS REPLY TODAY

Extent of the arrangements being made by Belleville officials in co-operation with the officers of the local Canadian National Railways to accommodate hundreds of residents of the city and entire district at the North Station on the evening of Sunday, May 21st., who will gather in hopeful expectancy of seeing Their Majesties, the King and Queen on the Royal Train passing through, is being stressed today to the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King through his personal secretary at the request of Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., who yesterday spent almost the entire day with the secretarial staff of the Prime Minister in an effort to have a ten-minute stop made by the Royal Train in Belleville and a brief appearance on the observation platform of the train by Their Majesties.

It was pointed out by Mr. Cameron in his request for a brief personal appearance here of Their Majesties that not only the hundreds of citizens would be awaiting the appearance of the Royal Train, but also hundreds of pupils of district schools and institutions, among them at least two hundred children of the Ontario School for the Deaf, who are registered there from all parts of the Province.

This personal appeal, of an extremely urgent nature, it will be impressed upon the Hon. Mackenzie King may be answered by this evening, and a statement to Belleville and district residents may be given by Mr. Cameron tomorrow, it was stated.

"It is hopeful that Their Majesties will appear here, but of course there is nothing certain. However, nothing is being left undone in the matter of having Their Majesties appear on the observation platform of their car here, and this appeal being presented the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King today will be in the interests of all citizens. We are hopeful that this will be entertained," stated Mr. Cameron.

The fact that the shortened schedule of Their Majesties' appearance in Kingston and elsewhere will result in many hundreds from Belleville and district staying in Belleville in the hopes of seeing the King and Queen here will also be stressed in the urgent appeal being presented the Prime Minister today.

with a bit of butter spread on it, almost the moment he hit his chair.

It wouldn't have been so noticeable, but there was delay in bringing the first course of melon, and there in the great gathering of the great men of Canada and their wives was the Sovereign the only person in the whole place with anything to eat. And he proceeded to eat. Oblivious to everything but his toast and butter, he crunched away while Prime Minister Mackenzie King, seated between him and the Queen, told him about Canada.

King George not only had special toast but special scarlet-coated footmen all the way from Buckingham Palace to serve it.

The ritual of the serving of the King and Queen was new to Canada. EachBuckingham Palace footman, a towering soldier-like figure, stood like a sentinel behind the chair occupied by the King and the Queen.

Special waiters brought them food, wines, dishes, but only the footmen served the Sovereigns. In unison as if drilled they moved together to the left side of the King and Queen, their right arms smartly crooked behind them, and leaning far over offered the course.

Excursion Train Will Probably Leave Here At 2.30 p.m., D.S.T.

Five Nurses Will Accompany the Children to Watch for Fatigue

Arrangements proceeded without a hitch today in final plans for the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on May 21st with the only alteration in original plans being the change in time of the excursion train over the Canadian National Railway lines.

The train will leave Belleville, probably from the Pinnacle Street spur line near the Market Square, at 2.30 p.m. Daylight Saving Time, and will arrive in Kingston at 4.00 p.m. The train will leave Kingston at 9.50 p.m. and will arrive back in Belleville at 11.20 p.m. according to latest schedule fixed by the local office.

At Kingston, it is announced by the committee there, all the thousands of children from Belleville and other municipalities from throughout the central and eastern Ontario districts must be inside the George Richardson Memorial Stadium by 6.00 p.m. and in their seats by: 7.00 p.m.

Five qualified nurses will leave Belleville with the local school children and have volunteered their services. The nurses will be in charge of Nurse Miss M. Peacock of Belleville and will watch carefully for any signs of fatigue or undue exertion of the smaller children. Today special arm bands, lunch haversacks and flags were being distributed to the children of the schools through the supervisors and principals.

Yesterday general chairman of the local children's committee, Reg. Moncrieff, visited Kingston and studied final plans of the Kingston committee. "We are going to be happy to welcome the Belleville and district children, and we will make every arrangement for their safe care." Mr. Moncrieff was told by the Kingston committee members.

Further details of the excursion will appear in tomorrow's or Saturday's issue of this paper, when last minute arrangements have been completed.

No Vehicular Traffic Allowed Over Crossings 5 Minutes Before Train

Also No Person Will be Permitted to Stand on Overhead Bridges as Royal Train Passes

The co-operation of citizens, motorists and visitors is eagerly sought by police in the matter of traffic regulations during the time the Royal train, bearing Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth, passes through Belleville on Sunday evening.

All C.N.R. crossings, bridges and the railway right-of-way will be guarded by police and assisted by Great War veterans, all of whom will be identified by either uniformed policemen or the conventional berets, as worn by the veterans, Chief Kidd announced today.

"No vehicular traffic will be permitted across city railway crossings at Cannifton Road, St. Charles, Geddes or Grier Streets, for a period of five minutes before the Royal train approaches, while no persons will be permitted atop either of the two local overhead bridges, at North Front Street and near the old rubber plant," Chief Kidd explained today as he urged the co-operation of the citizens and visitors in adhering to the regulations pertaining to traffic during the time the Royal train is in Belleville.

To Use Rope Barriers

"Chas. Mott, the city engineer, is assisting us in the matter of providing ropes to be placed across the streets at these crossings. A white strip will also be painted across the roadways and motorists are requested to observe these regulations and remain back of these barriers," added Chief Kidd as he stated the railway right-of-way, along which the Royal train would pass on Sunday night, would be guarded by special police and War Veterans. No persons will be permitted inside the constructed barriers and along the right-of-way, but ample spaces where citizens may view Their Majesties on the train will be provided under regulations at the Belleville station and along the tracks west of the station to the city limits.

Bridges Protected

Especially of note police announced no persons would be permitted to stand on the two local overhead bridges over the C.N.R. tracks in Belleville. "There is ample space for all to see their Majesties but I would urge the co-operation of those present to give the children all preferences and assist the officials in every way so that no kiddie will miss the opportunity of seeing the Royal couple," added Chief Kidd today as he craved the indulgence of adults and their co-operation in adhering to the rules and regulations of traffic during the presence of their Majesties in Belleville.

The patrolling of city crossings and bridges will be in the hands of War Veterans from the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville Post No. 301 under Secretary James Lazenby while the policing is in charge of C.N.R. special police at the station, city police and provincial authorities.

In commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Panama Canal and the tenth anniversary of the inauguration of the air mail service, Panama will issue special stamps.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

A CLASSIC ADDRESS

On his first day in his Dominion of Canada. His Majesty King George Sixth delivered an address in reply to the Prime Minister's welcome on behalf of the Dominion which will become a classic not only in Canada but in British Imperial history. It contained a reference to the development of the Empire as largely moulded through the events of the past two hundred years in North America.

> "I stand today on the soil of North America. Here, in the past two centuries, through loss and through gain, the British Commonwealth of Nations has been largely moulded into its present form."

It is a mark of the wide interest of the King and Queen that they desire to greet as many as possible of the men and women who are the strength and stay of this vast country and see something of the younger generation, who are growing up to positions of responsibility and into whose hands will come the destiny of Canada in course of time.

The graceful reference of the King to the welcome tendered the Queen and himself was ample reward for the people who had tried sincerely to extend a royal welcome worthy of the sovereigns.

WHAT THIS TOUR MEANS

For a month we shall seem like the centre of the Empire and the world. The King and Queen are in this country, in the New World, thousands of miles from the British Isles. To many it would seem that the centre of Empire has been moved, the centre of gravity of the world shifted.

Instead of thinking of the King as in Buckingham Castle, we think of him as residing in federal and provincial government houses and in their rolling palace, the royal train, though while on his tour the King has constant communication with the seat of the Empire.

In England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, subjects of the King cast their eyes westward across the Atlantic, which so many brave British seamen have dared to explore and over which so many great pioneers have gone to found new nations. From the Palaces of England and Scotland, royal minds are westward-bent because the head of their house, The House of Windsor, is making an extended tour in the senior Dominion. Many a mind in France too, looks westward as Frenchmen think of the French Canadians in Quebec, so potent a part of the young nation of Canada. In the Homeland many a family thinks today of relatives who left the British Isles to find fortunes and to found homes in the New World, and these latter look proudly upon the Motherland as their inspiration.

Canadians are the hosts of their beloved Rulers and will shower them with demonstrations and with their homage. But they will also be considerate of the pleasures and happiness of Their Majesties and so will not crowd their days and nights with too many interests and weary them. The King and the Queen are seeing what to them is a new country, and may be expected to seek enjoyment of their experiences without too exacting demands. The people want everything to be of a happy nature while the royal guests are staying in our "house", they want no untoward events, such as accidents through crowds on highways, because the highway traffic will be greatly accelerated by reason of the desire of so many thousands to witness royal processions and to pay their homage

On the other hand the King and Queen will endeavor to see as many of their subjects as they can. That means millions of men, women and children.

Canada is now absorbed in the royal progress, greater than any 'royal progress' in history. Canadians will be more absorbed in the royal events in Canada, will think something less of war possibilities and will assuredly come to feel that tension is eased in international affairs, in Europe.

This royal visit will give Canadians an even higher sense of the importance of Canada than they have held. They will realize more fully that since Their Majesties have been pleased to honor Canada and the United States as well at this time, these nations of the New World are mighty for what they are and mightier potentially for what they will be. It will bind Canada more closely to the Empire, loyal as Canada is, it will make Canadians think imperially.

Then too it will take away some of the self-centering of thought of Europe, that distracted continent, which takes time to look across the sea and see a King-Emperor representing a population about one third of the population of the globe visiting another continent and paying tribute to two nations of the western world. It will give Europe time and food for thought.

WELCOME TO KING GEORGE VI

To thee, O King of Canada—
Our Empire's Majesty—
And to thy gracious Scottish Rose,
We pledge our loyalty.

From Nova Scotia's rugged coast,
Where seething Fundy roars;
From western prairies' rolling plains
To blue Pacific shores.

From towering heights of cities' maze,
From mountain, mine and mill,
Throughout the Nation's greening miles
Of farm and wooded hill.

Canadians—ten million strong—
Unite as one to sing:
"Praise God who graced us with this day;
Heav'n bless our noble King!"

—Mabel Black Myers in Montreal Star.

WHAT HO! FOR THE GREAT OPEN SPACES, the fishermen are on the move, real fishermen who scorn a worm and give the sporting fish an even chance with fly casting. Fish stories, which like the fish, must be taken with a grain or two of salt, are making their appearance in various degrees of possible strain upon the imagination. One real fisherman, who like George Washington, never told a lie, but has caught more and bigger fish than possibly anyone else in these here parts, having lived longer than most, and had more experience, is that ardent sportsman, Capt. Wm. Bottum, recently returned from a fishing expedition to the headwaters of the Madawaska river with a Belleville party, his top catch, and largest of the party, being a magnificent trout weighing over three pounds. His companion, also an ardent fisherman, and hero of many hard fights with rod and reel, was Chas. Bishop, Sr., who also gave a good account of himself with the party, showing the way to the younger fellows. Irv. Hefkey, genial manager of the Royal Bank of Canada in Belleville, was a good second with a magnifcent fish, after an epic fight which landed the fisherman in the top row of flycasters and the fish in the ice box. Other members of the party included Joe Shortt, than whom there is no whomer as a fisherman with rod and reel and fly-casting; also Dr. Van. Blakslee, all-round sportsman, and noted as the First Fisherman of Wesylmkoon. It was a notable party and besides fish they brought home some new stories, verified and endorsed by the entire party as authentic, correct in every detail, the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so hellup me......

GIVING THE CHILDREN A GOOD TIME is the main object of those busy, boys, the travelling salesmen of Central and Eastern Ontario, who bring us all the latest stories, as well as the latest in good things to eat and wear, also other life's necessities and luxuries, in many different forms. Belleville Rotary Club has received a request from officers of the Travellers' Good Will Picnic, inviting the club to bring twenty-five under-privileged children to the annual picnic where they will be entertained in the grand manner by the Knights of the Grip. The picnic also features the entertainment of young orphans from Peterboro, Cobourg, Port Hope and Oshawa, in addition to two hundred children from other counties. The children will be selected, not from the ranks of the rich and well-to-do, but from families who have felt acutely the pinch of depression, children sure to enjoy the outing to the utmost. Hundreds of merchants will be present at the picnic, customers of the travellers, who appreciate their patronage and friendship and annually express their good will in old-fashioned picnic fashion on the beach at Cobourg, where there will be hot dogs, hamburgers, and all kinds of eats and drinks, and prizes for races and all kinds of fun and frolic. Skinny and Fatty, Slim and Susie, and Sallie and all the Tom Sawyers and Huckleberry Finns of this neck of the woods will be there and it's going to be just as much fun for the grownups as for the kiddies, so let's go.

Fixing the Picnic Hot Dog

The Crown Prince and Princess of Norway are said to have been introduced to that typican American delicacy, the hot dog, at a picnic luncheon served on the porch of the President's new house at Hyde Park.

With all due respect to the various eminent persons concerned—nonsense! That wasn't the American picnic hot dog—not if it was served on a porch and brought to the guests already prepared. That was at best only an effete—one is tempted to say, epicene—representation of a pugent and powerful item of diet; and from it the royal visitors can have obtained but a faint conception of the vigor of the American stomach that contends with it successfully.

The real picnic hot dog is prepared by the guest himself. Handed over raw, it is spiked on a sharpened stick and the guest roasts it himself impartially at a bonfire marked by the curious characteristic of spreading its smoke equally in all directions. During the process the dog slips off the stick and falls in the ashes at least once, and when it is charred black on one side, while still cold on the other, it is removed by the thumb and forefinger, raising a blister on each.

Naturally, in the course of this process the picnic hot dog acquires flavors not even suggested by things cooked on a stove and decorously served on a porch. The mingled essence of charcoal, ashes and wood smoke give the true picnic hot dog a wild tang suggestive, not of a placid garden party, but of some infernal feast lighted by the lurid glow of the pit. The picnic hot dog is to the commonplace frankfurter of commerce as Prince Beelzebub is to a printer's devil, and the foreigner who has not tasted it has missed a startling measure of durability of a nation that can eat it and thrive on it.—New York Herald Tribune.

Cash Paid for Good Manners

Think about politeness in terms of sentiment if you want to, but cold facts show that courtesy pays well in terms of hard cash. This is the verdict of Charles B. Hathaway, writing in the current Rotarian Magazine. He cites examples of substantial fortunes resulting directly from thoughtfulness and good manners.

Clement George McCullagh, now one of the dominant public figures in Canada, impressed fabulously rich Bill Wright by his courtesy when trying to sell him some securities. Other salesmen had shown little respect for his privacy and feelings, so, attracted first by a single courteous act, eventually the two formed a history-making partnership, combining McCullagh's ability and Wright's money.

Or consider the girl working in the safety deposit department of a Detroit bank. A certain elderly gentleman came to the vault only three times a year to be served by the girl, yet when he died he left her $5,000 in recognition of her "unfailing courtesy."

Mr. Hathaway points to the examples of John Wanamaker and Marshall Field, the greatest merchant. It was the former who insisted "the customer is always right," and in applying the principle to his stores made himself wealthy. Mr. Field, at the height of his success, would take time to tour his store, wait on customers, and hear their complaints. He profited greatly by applying courtesy to merchandising.

While commercialized manners are desirable, it is even more heartening to meet a person who is mannerly, not because he anticipates a profit from his acts, but just because he is mannerly. Outstanding in this way is the great Paderewski. As one of the world's greatest musicians, he could indulge in any rudeness and have it charged off to temperament. "But", the author points out, "his simple kindliness — manners, I call it — made him a national idol."

One corporation has a person who first interviews applicants for positions and reports on manners only. If one fails to pass the courtesy test, no amount of ability will earn him a place with the firm.

"I believe we have established the point:" Mr. Hathaway concludes, "we need not be sanctimonious when we talk about manners, or approach the subject as a semireligious, non-profit proposition; we can admit that it is a good thing because it has cash value." — Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Secrets of the world's greatest munitions factory were revealed to King George when he made a tour of the $60,000,000 plant in Exton, England, recently, including a trip into the subterranean bomb-proof chambers.

On the deck of the Royal liner the Empress of Australia, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth enjoy the ocean breezes. His Majesty is dressed in Scotch plaids while the Queen is wearing a Scotch blanket as they look over the ice fields which delayed their arrival in Quebec City for a full two days.

Britain's Exports To U. S. Increase

London, May 18 (AP)—A big jump in British exports to the United States for the three months beginning Jan. 1, when the British-American Trade Pact went into effect, was reported by the Government.

Replying to a question in the House of Commons, Ronald Cross, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, said:—

"During the first three months of 1939 exports of United Kingdom goods consigned to the United States were valued at £6,885,000 (about $32,221,800), an increase of £1,922,000 ($8,955,000) as compared with the first quarter of 1938.

"Corresponding figures for re-exports to the United States were £1,951,000 ($9,131,000) and £319,000 ($1,493,000) respectively. It should be borne in mind that exports to the United States were at an unusually low level at the beginning of 1938."

No figures were given on imports of American goods.

After traveling 1,600,000 miles in its 53 years of service, the first cable street car of Melbourne, Australia, is to be placed in Melbourne Museum.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Tuberculosis Finds Ready Victim in Infants

Almost everyone knows how tuberculosis has gradually been brought under control through the efforts of the various bodies interested in this work. Many of us have seen people waste away and die with this ailment. Although dangerous to people of all ages, when it strikes a small child, it is particularly to be feared, for babies don't seem to have any resistance to it.

We have all heard the story of how our North American Indians died in droves after the coming of the white man because, never having had tuberculosis, they had no immunity to it. The same applies to a new born baby; he has no immunity, and if he does come in contact with the disease, it may be a very serious thing for him. If the child is fortunate, he won't come in contact with tuberculosis until he starts to school, by that time he is physically better able to throw it off.

In spite of the stories you hear, tuberculosis is not a hereditary disease. A person may inherit weak lungs, or a tendency to take the disease, but not the disease itself. I have seen tubercular mothers whose babies turned out to be quite healthy. In one case I recall, the mother was so distressed, we immediately had to take the child away from her. The child, however grew up to be quite healthy and never showed any signs of the disease.

Health boards, institutions and all societies that deal with tuberculosis in any way are extremely anxious to discover all cases and remove them from families where there are children. In the old days, before we knew much about tuberculosis and contagion, a patient would sit around the house, coughing and spitting, free to infect every memmany as six deaths in one family; result of such infection, and know sult of such infection, and I know of many families that lost three or four children that way. Nowadays we isolate the infected person just as quickly as we can.

[illegible] old enough to go to school, he then begins to have mild contacts with the disease, through which he gradually builds up an immunity, so that if he does come in direct contact with someone who disperses the germs, he will likely be able to fight it off.

There are two ways in which baby can come in contact with tuberculosis germs. He can breathe them or he can eat them. First of all, I want to speak to you of the dangers of inhaling them. Just stop and think of the large number of persons who come in contact with your baby. There are the parents, grandparents on both sides, friends of the parents. These are the obvious people with whom baby comes in contact. Besides there is the maid, the grocery boy who steals a look at him, perhaps the policeman who peaks in the carriage to see him when you take him downtown in his pram.

If just one of those people had the disease, and coughed on him, there would be grave danger that he would contract tuberculosis.

Letters to the Editor

VETERANS ATTENTION

Army And Navy Veterans in Canada
Unit No. 201—Belleville, Ont.
87 Station Street,
Belleville, Ont.
May 17th, 1939.

Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:

May I through the medium of your paper approach all the Veterans of this locality in anticipation of their local co-operation in completing the duties assigned to the Veterans on the occasion of the visit of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on Sunday, May 21st, 1939.

The Army & Navy Veterans Association have been requested to complete arrangements for the guarding of all railway crossings from Marysville to Sidney. The crossings under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Police have been filled and also the crossings under our City Police, there is an urgent need of more Veterans to be allocated to other places and so we appeal to all Veterans to kindly assist in this endeavour to protect all concerned.

Any Veteran who can spare the time Sunday evening May 21st at seven p.m. for at least two hours duty are requested to phone their names, regimental number and service unit either to the Army & Navy Veterans 1814 or to the undersigned phone 1933, when all particulars will be outlined to them.

The Veterans are asked to meet at Memorial Hall at 7 p.m. D.S.T. (if convenient) and then parade to the several places designated for duty and we desire to stress on all Veterans to wear BERETS and Medals.

May I at this time Mr. Editor convey to you the thanks of all the Veterans for your very hearty co-operation in publishing this letter and so bringing this urgent occasion before all concerned and may we all rejoice in being in a land where we can still sing "God Save The King."

Thanking you, Sir,
I am
Sincerely Yours,
J. H. Lazenby.
Secretary A.N.V.C. 201.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Campbell are spending a few days in Ottawa.

Mrs. T. A. McFarlane of Toronto, is the guest of Mrs. Jas. Donaldson, North Park Street, and is renewing acquaintances with friends and relatives in the city and vicinity.

Mrs. Samuel Pope of Cannifton, received a lovely box of tulips for "Mother's Day" from her son, John of Vancouver, B.C. The flowers arrived in perfect condition. A lovely Mother's card was also sent by 'Air Mail'.

Dorothy Hazel Mullet of Trenton, and Evelyn Elizabeth Rigby of Havelock, will be among the eleven girls who will be graduated from Nicholl's Hospital, Peterborough on Friday evening as nurses.

Miss Gladys Knox, bride elect, was honoured at a linen shower held by the F. W. Woolworth staff and friends at the home of Mrs. J. Bell, last night. The evening was spent in euchre and games. Miss Knox received many lovely gifts from a gala decorated chest and she thanked her fellow workers very graciously. Winners of prizes during the evening were Annie Lazerick and Mary Kidd and others. The door prize was won by Mrs. P. Grant and the spot prize by Mrs. J. Bell. A delicious lunch was served by the hostesses. Miss Susie Lowes, Miss Gertie Cretney and Mrs. J. Bell which brought the enjoyable evening to a close.

Miss Ruth Evelyn Leavens, B.A., Picton, will receive a third year scholarship for post graduate studies in nursing at the University of Toronto, and a general proficiency award at the Toronto General Hospital graduation exercises tonight. Miss Anne H. Cryan will also graduate at the exercises this evening.

The Young People's Society of the St. Andrew's Church met on Monday evening, May 15th., in a social capacity to entertain a group of Young People from the O.S.D. The play "Wanted a Wife" was presented by the St. Andrew's Young People, followed by a "Gavotte" by two students of the O.S.D. The rest of the evening was devoted to games. A delightful lunch was then served, the hostesses being Miss Murray and Miss Kew.

Miss Muriel Glenn, bride-to-be, was honoured last evening when Misses Helen and Hazel Smith were hostesses at an enjoyable party held at the home of Mrs. Fred Lazier, Charlotte Street. About twenty guests were present and spent an interesting evening playing games and contests. Miss Glenn was presented with a handsome floor lamp by the gathering after which a dainty lunch was served.

The May meeting of Tabernacle Mission Circle was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Wm. Dougherty 65 Geddes Street, with a large number of members and friends in attendance. The theme of the programme was Stewardship. Jessie Smith conducted the devotional period. A reading "Stewardship of Today" was given by Myra Irvine. Leona Bailey conducted the Study Book period assisted by Emma Dafoe, Thelma Hodges and Rachel Fox. The Watch Tower reading was given by Mae Edmonson. An interesting dialogue "Waked Up" which portrayed the truths of Stewardship in a very forceful manner was presented by Delia Johnstone, Marion Fisher, Emma Dafoe, Doris Kerr, Hazel Denike and Jessie Smith. The meeting closed with the National Anthem and benediction. A delicious lunch was served and a vote of thanks tendered Mrs. Dougherty for her hospitality.

Mrs. R. Andrews entertained at a charming trousseau tea at her home on Sunday in honor of her daughter, Miss Muriel Glenn, bride-elect. About seventy-five guests were present and were received by Mrs. B. Loney of Frankford, Mrs. Andrews and Miss Glenn, the door being opened by Miss Sadie Welburn. Daffodils and tulips in profusion were used in the decoration of the living room and dining room, the tea table being centred with these colorful blooms. Mrs. Earl Elliott invited the guests to the lovely dining room. Mrs. R. Bourk and Mrs. H. Burley poured tea and tea assistants were Miss Hazel Ross, Toronto, Miss Doreen Loney, Frankford, Miss Gwendolyn Burley, Mrs. J. Craighead and Mrs. A. Rose. Assisting in showing the trousseau to the guests were Mrs. Dick Neal, in charge of the trousseau Miss Ruth Brough, the gifts, and Miss Hazel Smith the linens.

First Prize $200.00 and a Sterling Silver Cup!

What kind of supper would you serve the King and Queen?

By Evangeline

Supposing their Majesties, whose preference for simple meals is well known, were to drop in for supper at your home. What would you serve them? Draw up a simple, typically Canadian menu and send it to me. Robin Hood Flour Mills are offering 187 cash prizes totalling $1,000.00 for the best menus.

A GRAND LIST OF PRIZES
1st Prize - - - - - - $200.00
and a Sterling Silver Cup
2nd Prize - - - - - - 100.00
3rd Prize - - - - - - - 50.00

9 PROVINCIAL PRIZES
(one to be awarded to the best entry in each province after the winners of 1st. 2nd and 3rd prizes have been selected).
$25.00 each

25 Prizes, each - - - - $5.00
150 Prizes, each - - - - $2.00

If you don't win 1st, 2nd or 3rd Prize, you have a chance for the $25.00 Provincial Prize which will be awarded for competition only in your province. And if you don't win one of these you can win one of the 25 prizes of $5.00 each or one of the 150 prizes of $2.00 each. No contestant can win more than one prize so that 187 Canadian women will share the prize money.

Just Plan a Simple, Home-Like Meal

Think of a meal which, in your opinion, would give our King and Queen a correct and favorable impression of Canadian foods. Choose what you like but be sure to have at least three items in each menu which contain Robin Hood Flour.

Follow These Simple Rules Which put Everything In a Nutshell:

1. 187 cash prizes and a handsome Sterling Silver Cup, suitably engraved with your name, will be awarded for the best supper menus to serve the King and Queen during May or June, using Canadian ingredients only (spices excepted) and with Robin Hood Flour used in three or more items on each menu.

2. Send in as many entries as you wish. Each menu entered must be written on a single sheet of paper, with your name and post office address written clearly at the top of the page.

3. Each menu shall have three courses: a soup, main course and dessert. Each course may include whatever dishes you would serve to make up a well-balanced meal in a typically Canadian home where the homemaker prepares the food for the family. (A sample menu is given on this page for a guide.)

4. Write on the back of your entry paper the recipe for the dish you consider the best in your menu.

5. Each entry will be judged on its merits as representing a simple, well-balanced, typically Canadian meal. In case of a tie the prize will be given to the menu with the best recipe.

6. To each menu entered, pin the guarantee certificate from your bag of Robin Hood Flour. No entry can be considered unless accompanied by the guarantee certificate.

7. The closing date is June 30th, 1939. All entries must be received by midnight of that date. Mail your entries to "Evangeline", Dept. O, Home Baking Service, Robin Hood Flour Mills Ltd. Toronto, Ont. No employee of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited or any member of their families may enter the contest.

8. I have appointed the following well-known dietitians as judges:—Miss Jessie Read of the Toronto "Evening Telegram", Mrs. Madeline Day, Chief Lecturer of the "School of Canadian Cookery", and Miss Marie Holmes of the Toronto "Daily Star".

9. If, for any reason, the Royal visit should be postponed, this contest will be held just the same.

10. All menus and recipes become the property of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

Sample Type of Menu

Now, to give you some idea how to go about making your menu, I have put together a menu as a guide to help you. Of course, I haven't mentioned any actual dishes so as to leave your choice absolutely free:

SOUP
SALAD
WITH TWO VEGETABLES
DESSERT
BEVERAGES
BREADS OR ROLLS, OR OTHER BAKED GOODS

"In the above menu I consider my best recipe to be the ———————. The recipe for it and the method of making it is enclosed. (Name and Address of Sender.)

A Final and Important Word

Mail your entries now. The closing date for entries is June 30th. Send in as many menus as you please but pin a guarantee slip to each menu. Prize winners will be announced in this paper as soon as possible after judging has been completed.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Popularity's Magic

There must be few normal girls in existence who wouldn't like to be popular if they could.

So true is this that many girls, sadly conscious of exercising no magnetic attraction, very sensibly try to find out what popularity means and to remedy their own defects.

How is popularity achieved?

The senior girls at Rochester University set to work recently to discover the answer to this really important problem, and surely nobody could accuse them of wasting their time. On the contrary a world of women, if it knew what they were about, might feverishly await the outcome of their investigations.

Well, the secret is now revealed, so far as these college girls discover it. And most women will be surprised, I think, at one omission in the report.

No mention is made of the siren's gift, the come-hither quality, which has been supposed to be a necessary port of the really popular girl's otherwise mysterious success.

What has become of the girl "vamp", and of that mysterious magic of hers, so desired and so dreaded? Since here is, of course, an almost impossible art to imitate if you aren't born that way, a pretty big sigh of relief is going to be heard if girls can come to believe that they can operate successfully without it.

Instead, this new report announces that three qualities are essential to the popular girl of today. She must have poise. Which means that she must be quietly sure of herself, without being either unpleasantly cocky, or uncomfortably shy. And I believe the girls are right in placing this quality at the head of the list.

Second, she must have a sense of humor, that means, to join naturally in the gay give-and-take of college life, never to be at a loss for a lively rejoinder. A girl couldn't make much headway in a youthful community if the current jokes passed over her head or if she did not now and then contribute one of her own.

Third, friendliness is ranked as a winning quality. And well it may be. A girl couldn't be widely liked by boys she couldn't play the game unless she had plenty of humanity in her. The girl who is kind and sociable who actively likes a lot of people, is certain to be liked in return.

But you're waiting for something to be said about good looks, attractiveness. According to this report, neatness is placed above beauty as a popularity-getter. Which gives one something to think about. Men don't like sloppiness. Any girl pretty or not can avoid being sloppy. Encouraging, isn't it? And we're not really talking about the beauties anyway. They ought to be able to manage their own popularity.

Along with their positive recommendations, Rochester's young popularity experts throw in a warning which it may be wise to heed, old-fashioned as it is. "Don't show too much intelligence", they suggest. No boy exerts himself to make dates with a girl who is brighter than he is, who corrects his statements, who lets it be known that her teachers praise her work. Far from it. He's even willing that a girl rank as just a wee bit dumb, if she is easy to look at, sweet, sympathetic and all that.

One more point mustn't be overlooked. The popular girl has to be a 'good sport'.

The above suggestions, as you see have been formulated by girls for girls. I think they're simple enough to be followed and I hope they will be. For I should like never to hear of another dismal tragedy such as the case of the out-and-out unpopular girl presents.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Welcome home the simple but effective all-black crepe frock. A beauty has sun-burst pleating across the bosom extending from the shoulders on either side of the collarless V-neckline to just above the waist. The slim skirt is slightly flared. Ideal for smart accessories.

Pick up your blue and black frocks with a bright red, hip-length loosely cut, double-breasted coat. Grand for town or country.

At least one town coat seems necessary this season. A beauty is of navy blue double twill with tucks and pleats at the snug waistline, and stitching to simuplate revers on either side of the collarless neckline. A white pique ascot scarf and matching nosegay freshen up these navy blues.

Nice to know that one is wearing a suit which is ready for anything in town. Such a suit is of bengaline made with a slim jacket and a wide skirt, ideal for dancing. The jacket has four appliqued bows for pockets. One of the smartest dress suits of the season.

A smaller edition of mother's suit is what little girls crave. So your daughter may fare forth in a collarless two-piece suit, the jacket with pockets at the bust and waistline and bright with shining silver buttons. Good in rose copen, turquoise or coral.

Spring flowers hand-painted all over a gleaming black patent shoe and in bands on a matching patent leather bag are good tonic for a monotone costume.

The Joke's On You

—If You're Not Very Careful About Picking Your Hats.

PATRICIA MORISON

Chooses soft, flattering colors in her hats

By HELEN FOLLETT

Casting a reflective eye over millinery displays, we must come to the conclusion that designers are still playing jokes one us. You can get a chapeau the size of a beaten biscuit or a floppy lid that comes down to your shoulders. There are hats with crowns like funnels, and there are hats with no crowns at all. All help to stimulate the blood streams, keep the money flingers on their way.

Let us urge the beauty class to take time aplenty when making a selection. Regard the profile, take a long, thoughtful squint at your nose, see what the new bonnet will do to it. If you have a long tall neck, don't buy a tall, long hat. If you do, you will look like a ketchup bottle and your best feller won't love you.

While there are freaky lids, there are also those that are sweet and compelling. Choose soft, flattering colors, yielding fabrics. Observe the effect of the color on the skin. Some of those off-fuchia shades are terrible with a sallow complexion, as are faded, lifeless blues. And green isn't easy to get along with unless one is a true blonde or a redhead.

The chapeau is the most important detail of dress. One can wear a frumpy frock and get by, but the wrong hat knocks one's beauty hopes flat.

Treat yourself to one silk suit. A good model is Molyneux's wide spaced polka dot in navy blue or green, with white. New is the skirt with its high corselet belt which scarvely meets the curving front of bolero, buttoned very high over a tucked white lingerie blouse.

Don't overlook white hats. A beauty of white Milan long and narrow, has pink roses with red velvet streamers posed at the back of its postilion crown.

Mrs. Roosevelt Plans All-American Dinner For Their Majesties

By Beth Campbell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Washington, May 16. — (AP) — Sweet potatoes, which are served on thousands of American tables every summer, will become royal fare in June.

They are included on a tentative menu for the State dinner to be given King George and Queen Elizabeth by President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Unless something is scratched off by market conditions, this will be the dinner menu,

Clam Cocktail
Calves' Head Soup
Broiled Fillet of Flounder
Mushroom and Wine Sauce
Sliced Tomatoes
Boned Capon Cranberry Sauce
Peas Buttered Beets
Sweet Potato Puffs
Frozen Cheese and Cress Salad
Maple and Almond Ice Cream
Coffee

There's not a French word on the list and nothing that has to be imported. Dishes were suggested for Mrs. Roosevelt's approval after Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, her housekeeper, studied menus served to the King and Queen in Paris, at the Guildhall in London, and at other functions.

When these menus were translated into English, they indicated to Mrs. Nesbitt that the King and Queen like rather simple food. That made it easy, because the Roosevelts like simple food, too.

Fare planned for their private luncheon, with Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt is as follows—

Minted Melon Balls
Jellied Bouillon
Broiled Sweetbreads with Mushrooms
Asparagus and Potato Chips
Hearts of Lettuce, Roquefort Dressing
Strawberry Shortcake
Coffee

AT THE BELLE

"Fast and Loose"
"Hotel Imperial"

Something new under the sun is revealed at the Belle Theatre, now playing where Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell race across the screen in "Fast and Loose", a rip-roaring sequel to last year's comedy hit, "Fast Company". The new picture is a most unusual mystery comedy that contains all the qualities of first-rate entertainment.

"Fast and Loose" unwinds in rapid-fire manner from the novel motive of baffling crimes actuated by the desire of many persons to gain possession of a rare and valuable document, or at least to prevent Montgomery and his charming screen wife Miss Russell from gaining possession of it.

Montgomery is seen in the role of Joel Sloane a young devil-may-care-dealer in rare books who inevitably finds himself in the role of amateur detective surrounded by mystery which he eventually solves. Miss Russell plays his charming fun-loving wife Garda, in "Thin Mannish" fashion and shares all his adventures and a few of her own.

Throughout the hair-raising adventures of the young couple, Montgomery and Miss Russell are ably assisted by Reginald Owen, Ralph Morgan, Etienne Girardot, Alan Dinehart, Jo Ann Sayers and Joan Marsh.

"Fast and Loose" is a different kind of picture for Montgomery and Miss Russell and one that establishes them as one of the leading comedy teams on the screen.

"Hotel Imperial"

A grand-scale romance, born amid the turmoil of a world at war, moves the plot of "Hotel Imperial" Paramount's stirring new screen drama, which is announced as the companion feature attraction. Isa Miranda, making her initial appearance in an American picture, and Ray Milland, handsome Paramount leading man, are the stars and the partners in the romance.

So much has been written and said about Miranda during her two years of preparation for the role in 'Hotel Imperial' that she is already a Hollywood celebrity even though this is her first film on this side of the Atlantic. Filmdom expected a lot of the girl whom Gabriele d'Annunzio ecstatically called "the most glamorous woman in the world' and the blonde beauty from sunny Lombardy did not disappoint. "Hotel Imperial" promises to give film lovers the chance to echo Hollywood's enthusiasm.

An all-new edition of The March of Time will be presented on the same program.

Sunday Midnight Show

The romantic stars of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" are back again in another grand picture that opens the gates of memory with the heart songs and hit songs of yesterday and today. Tyrone Power and Alice Faye co-star with Al Jolson in "Rose of Washington Square", 20th Century-Fox film coming to the Belle Sunday Midnight, with a great surrounding show.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Pacific Liner"

Victor McLaglen who recently scored to fame in "Gunga Din" and who is Hollywood's foremost purveyor or virile roles again has triumphed in another hit "Pacific Liner" now playing at the McCarthy Theatre in which he is co-starred with Chester Morris.

As a swaggering, hard-boiled and yet likeable Chief Engineer who asks no man to do what he won't do himself, and who in a crisis performs unbelievable feats of leadership, Victor McLaglen has and plays in a truly memorable role.

Most of the action of the film transpires in the engine room of a large steamer where Victor McLaglen rules with an iron hand. The story deals principally with the conflict between the Chief Engineer and the ship's doctor played by Chester Morris, during the outbreak of an epidemic on board. Wendy Barrie is seen as a nurse and the romantic foil of both men. Lew Landers expertly directed "Pacific Liner" and the supporting cast includes such players as Barry Fitzgerald and Allan Hale. On the same program as a companion feature Gordon Jones and Betty Furness co-star in "They Wanted to Marry", which is an exciting rough-and-tumble comedy romance, crammed with thrills, glamour and action —every constituent of good, solid entertainment to please every type of audience. In addition to the great feature presentations another thrill-packed episode of "Flying G-Men" is also presented at each performance. Please do not miss this show, for your own personal benefit of enjoying wholesome screen entertainment, from the opening to the final fade-out scenes.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, May 19

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A PARTICULARLY lively day, with all the energies and faculties under high stimuli, is forecast by the lunar transits. Initiative, sound judgment, detailed plans and hard work are bound to reap rich returns, with the endorsement of superiors or those in power. New projects are definitely encouraged. Do not fear to reach for prestige and popularity with aggressive action and confidence. There should be gratifying reactions on the private life.

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of constructive work, with the approval and solid co-operation of those in power. These will be attracted by major projects that are worked out by new methods. Enhanced prestige and popularity, with happy social reactions, climax well-directed initiative.

A child born on this day may be energetic, practical, aggressive, probably militant. Its determination, good judgment, industry and bold initiatve should assure it success in important creative work.

About China Plates

The size of china plates is related to their correct usage.

Service Plates are really place plates, or cover plates, and are 10 to 11 inches.

Dinner Plates. Usually 10 inches, but seen as large as 10 1-2 inches. The size of the dinner plate has become fairly large, due to the current practice of placing attendant vegetables on the plate with the meat. The day of side dishes, each bearing a particular variety of vegetable, has passed, at least as far as good form in service is concerned.

Luncheon or Entree' Plate. 8 1-2 to 9 1-2 inches. This plate is of a most convenient size, for, in additation to its use for luncheon or for serving entries, it is often used as a salad or fish plate. Very often too it is used as a dessert plate, with the finger bowl and dessert silver placed on it.

Salad Plate, Dessert Plate. 7 1-2 to 8 inches. This plate, besides being used for salad or dessert, becomes the cake plate at tea. Many hostesses prefer to use a larger plate for the service of salads, particularly when it is their custom to serve generous-sized salads as a separate course.

Bread and Butter Plate. Usually 6 inches sometimes 6 1-2 inches. Besides its use as a butter plate, this plate will be found to have many other uses, particularly as an under-plate for the service of iced tea and other drinks.

Soup Plate. About 8 inches from rim to rim for the usual soup plate with wide, flat rim. There is also a bowl soup plate, or "coup" soup, which has no rim.

Cream-Soup Cup. This is the low, broad cup, handled on both sides. Its width is about 5 inches, and its depth about 2 inches. It is used for the serving of cream soups, purees, bisques, and for clear soups at luncheons or informal dinners. It is accompanied by a matching under-plate of appropriate size.

Bouillon Cup. A teacup with two handles. Clear consommes and bouillons are served in it. It is accompanied by a saucer-like under plate.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Putting a Seal of Acceptance on Food Products

There was a time when the sell-Today those patent medicines ried on by a travelling concert troup or even circus. After a crowd had gathered about the tent and watched the performance for a while the "professor" stood up and told of the merits of his medicine it would cure practically all the ailments common to the majority of his listeners. There was some merit in most of these remedies in that they helped to create an appetite and were effective in causing bowel movements.

ing of patent medicines was carare sold by means of radio and newspaper advertising and as this advertising is supervised, by the government, it is not likely that the statements made stretch the truth too far. The firms behind these medicines realize that one or more cases of dangerous results from the use of their remedies would stop all sales.

It would seem then that to a great extent patent medicines are safe enough but of course, their use for any special symptom or ailment should be really under a physician's direction.

What is the travelling entertainer selling today? The patent medicine man has given way to the food expert.

Some of these experts may know their foods; their chemistry, nutrition qualities and quantities. Many of them also, after experimenting upon themselves, are quite honestly trying to help others. There are many, on the other hand, who are just trying to play up the lack of food values and vitamins of good, nourishing foods in order to sell some special food in which they are financially interested by expanding upon its vitamin value, its mineral value, its easy digestibility, and its ability to prevent constipation.

Fortunately, to protect those who have a food of merit, and to protect the public from being alarmed or fooled by unproven claims, the Council of Foods of the American Medical Association is now judging the food values of certain food products and also the claims made by the manufacturer. The manufacturer submits his product and the list of his claims for his product to this Council. If the food and the claims for it are accepted, advertising is permitted in the publications of the American Medical Association, and a "Seal of Acceptance" may be used in the advertising.

Going about with suits and dresses in black, blue or brown is a big squashy bag of bright red gleaming patent. Nice later on, too, with Summer white.

Madoc

Annual Meeting of Women's Institute

Annual meeting of the Madoc Branch of the Women's Institute was held in the Community Hall on Friday, May 12th. Due to the absence of the president, Mrs. Tanner, first vice-president, presided. The meeting was a business one thruout. The president reviewed the year's work (read by the vice-president) and also thanked all members for the wonderful co-operation she had enjoyed during the year. Twelve meetings were held with an average attendance of 45 members. Every department of the work had been under consideration. A tag day was sponsored for the Canadian Institute for the Blind and $54 remitted for that cause. Extensive Health and Child Welfare project was carried on in assisting financially the wiring of one room in the public school, also nurse for inoculation clinic and a very splendid lecture given by Dr. Beatty on "Feed Your Body to Protect Your Health."

The relief committee has been very active during the Winter. With the financial assistance of the Community Club and donation from the Men's Club, the demand for clothing has been met and fruit and vegetables, much of which was donated by the public school staff and pupils were distributed at Christmas to various families. Proceeds from the travel bridge and annual reunion were given to this cause.

The Girls' Work, under the leadership of Miss H. Major and Mrs. H. Davies was carried on and ten classes held during the Winter season. Nightgowns, pyjamas and house coats were made, also a skit written and demonstrated at the April meeting.

A very successful year in general has been realized by the Society due to the enthusiasm and hearty co-operation of all.

The Nominating Committee presented their slate of officers for the coming year as follows:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. L. McCarey; 2nd. Vice-President, Mrs. Dymond; Sec.-Treasurer, Mrs. W. Hulin; District Director, Mrs. W. Parks; Branch Directors, Mesdames R. Bristol, A. Smith, C. Whytock; J. Mrs. Simpson served candy and was extended a vote of thanks for entertaining the W.M.S.

SLEEPY STOMACHS NEED WAKING, TOO!

Yet that's only one of the

THREE THINGS YOUR BREAKFAST MUST DO:

1 STIMULATE YOUR APPETITE: The teasing malty flavour of crisp Kellogg's Corn Flakes starts your gastric juices flowing—gently rouses your "sleepy" stomach.

2 GET YOU STARTED QUICKLY: By supplying abundant carbohydrates, the quick-energy "fuel," Kellogg's Corn Flakes get your family off to work and school "in high."

3 HELP KEEP YOU GOING TILL NOON: A bowl of Kellogg's Corn Flakes with cream and sugar releases energy for hours—helps prevent that 11 a.m. slump.

"How Albert 'squawks' if he doesn't get Kellogg's Corn Flakes! They actually give him an appetite for breakfast . . ."

"Nothing else at breakfast-time seems to give Albert as much early-morning energy or get him started as quickly . . ."

"Albert says that a breakfast with a good bowlful of Kellogg's Corn Flakes helps keep him going strong till lunch time!"

Make breakfast a "starting up" meal . . .

In thousands of Canadian homes, Kellogg's Corn Flakes whet early-morning appetites.

What's more, housewives from Halifax to Vancouver save time and trouble by serving this delicious cereal. No wonder Kellogg's Corn Flakes are famous as the "30-second breakfast." Order several packages from your grocer today! Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Have you tried the new family-size package?

Kingston Road United Church Activities

A very impressive Floral Service was held in Kingston Road United Church on Sunday morning, May 7th. Following a well attended Sunday School the church service opened with a nymn. The 23rd Psalm was repeated in unison followed with prayer by Rev. Farnsworth. The choir rendered "The Rose", Mrs. Donaldson very ably taking the solo part.

Miss Edith Hogle of Sidney, gave a very interesting springtime object talk, comparing an empty flower pot to a life without Christ; and how, when Christ is accepted, the life grows into beauty and worth, just as a flower pot becomes beautiful when filled with flowers. At the conclusion of her talk Misses Edith and Ila Hogle sang very nicely "Let Him in". All flower hymns were used and it was a very impressive service.

In a few well chosen words Rev. Farnsworth thanked the Misses Hogle for taking part in the service and "Sowing in the Mornin" concluded this Floral Service

In the evening of May 7th, church service was well attended again and Rev. Farnsworth delivered a very impressive sermon.

On Friday evening, May 12th, Mr. and Mrs. John Kingston were called back from their new home on the Fourth of Sidney to spend a social evening at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Farnsworth. A goodly number were present to say farewell to Mr. and Mrs. Kingston, who have been devoted workers in the Kingston Road United Church for a number of years. Rev. Farnsworth acted as chairman for the evening. A game of forfeits which created much amusement was played, consisting of songs, stunts and instrumental music.

Miss Freda Donaldson was the last one called upon to pay a forfeit. The forfeit was a speech which she read, it being the address:

Belleville, May 12.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kingston,
Frankford, Ont., R.R. 2

Dear John and Mildred:

We, your many friends on learning of your departure from our midst felt that we must call you back to say farewell and show in some small way the esteem in which you are held.

We have called you back to spend a social hour with us tonight and may you do this frequently. Your presence will always be welcomed at any of our church services, social affairs and in our own private homes.

We are going to miss you both more than you realize. John, we regret losing you as our Sunday School superintendent, a position you filled whenever your home duties would permit. Mildred, we are going to miss you a great deal, especially at our social gatherings where you so willingly helped with our programs. You are also going to be missed among the young people.

Your upright Christian characters, your pleasant smiles and your willingness to do what you could at all times, have painted pictures on our memories, not soon to be forgotten.

Charles is going to be missed a great deal especially among the younger generation.

Yes, we say we are going to miss you. In fact, we already have missed you, but when we realize that our loss is another's gain we can only hope that you prove as faithful in the neighborhood to which you have gone as the one you left.

We realize that it is a bit difficult to make new friends in a strange neighborhood, but we trust that your lonely hours may be few and that you both find much happiness in your new surroundings, guided by a loving Father's hand.

Life is full of froth and bubble,
Two things stand like stone;
Kindness in another's trouble,
Courage in your own.

But we trust that your troubles may be few and we do hope that you may find your way back among us often in the future. You will always find a warm welcome waiting you at all times.

Please accept these gifts as a token of the esteem in which you are held and not for their intrinsic value, and as you use them may you ever be reminded of your many friends of the Kingston road.

Signed on behalf of the Kingston Road Congregation; Sunday School; Young Peple's Society; and The Women's Association.

Mrs. Gazely,
Mrs. MacDonald.

Douglas MacDonald presented the gifts which consisted of a breakfast set of dishes, a casserole, a pie plate and a relish dish.

Mr. and Mrs. Kingston both respond, thanking their friends for the gifts and kind remembrances.

"For they are jolly good fellows was sung" followed by refreshments after which all joined in singing, "God Will Take Care of You." After Mr. Marsh, Mr. Ridley, Mrs. MacDonald and Rev. Farnsworth in a few well chosen remarks again spoke of the good Mr. and Mrs. Kingston had done during their stay in this vicinity and how much they are going to be missed.

The gathering was brought to a close by singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds."

Mother's Day was observed in the Kingston Road United Church on Sunday morning, May 14th, with a good attendance.

The Mother's Day program was followed; Rev. Farnsworth giving the theme while Mrs. MacDonald very ably conducted the story.

Ernest Gazely, Douglas MacDonald and Ross Gregory very nicely sang "That Wonderful Mother of Mine".

The many friends of Mrs. H. Walkom will be sorry to learn that she is confined to her home again through illness.

FOXBORO GUILD

The Ladies' Guild of Foxboro Presbyterian Church held a Pot Luck Dinner and quilting. After the dinner a joint meeting of the Guild and W.M.S. was held, Mrs. J. W. MacDonald presiding.

The meeting opened with a hymn. The Scripture reading from Psalm 96 was read by Miss Bessie Spencer, followed by prayer by Rev. J. W. MacDonald.

The guest speakers for the meeting were Mrs. J. Pargey and Mrs. Percy Ransom, both of St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, who gave the report of the W.M.S. Provincial Annual held in Hamilton. The report was much enjoyed by all.

Meeting closed with a hymn and the Benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. W. MacDonald.

QUINTE W. I.

The annual meeting of Quinte W. I. was held at the Front Road Church Hall on Tuesday, May 9, with an attendance of around thirty members and visitors.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. A. Mitchell, by singing the Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The minutes of the last meeting and financial statement of the year were read by the secretary-treasurer Mrs. N. Brown, and approved.

Mrs. H. Murphy conducted the election of officers, the results of which are as follows:

President, Mrs. Cameron; first vice-president, Mrs. W. C. Mitchell; second vice-president, Mrs. S. Anderson; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. G. Bradshaw; district director, Mrs. A. Parrott, Mrs. H. Greatrix.

The newly-elected president then took charge of the meeting.

A splendid paper on legislation, prepared by Mrs. S. Dies was read by Miss Lulu Mitchell.

The topic, "Which would I prefer —an old fashioned mother or a modern mother and why?" — Mrs. Maguire speaking for the old fashioned mother and Mrs. Monore in favor of the modern mother. Many good points were brought out in favor of each, and several took part in the discussion after these papers which everyone had greatly enjoyed.

A solo, rendered by Mrs. H. Grills, was enjoyed by all.

A vote of thanks was moved to Mrs. A. Mitchell and to Mrs
Brown for their efficiency du their term of office as past presi and secretary-treasurer.

The roll call was answered by ment of fees and giving mot maiden name and nationality.

Collection amounted to $2.30

The meeting closed with "

Shannonville

Shannonville, May 18.—A very delightful event was held in the Shannonville Orange Hall on Friday night when a large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cook (nee Violet Gray of Belleville) assembled at the hall to extend their felicitations to this popular young couple who were recently married and who will reside in the community. During the evening the gay crowd danced to music furnished by local talent. At the social hour a delicious lunch was served which added much to the enjoyment of the evening. Following the social period the bridal couple were called to the platform at which time the following address was read by Miss Bessie King to which appropriate replies were given by the bride and groom.

"Dear Violet and Ray: On hearing of your recent marriage, we, your friends and neighbors have gathered here to extend to you both our best wishes for a long and happy wedded life.

"Ray, having known you all your life thus far we are glad to learn that you are going to continue to make your home in our community. We feel sure that we may rely on your help in the future affairs of the community as we have in the past.

"Violet, although you come among us as a stranger, we welcome you to our community and invite you to join in the activities of our neighborhood.

"To you how bright the future looms,
What prospects are in view,
And may they all be realised,
Is our best wish for you.

"We now ask you to accept these gifts as a small token of our esteem. Accept also our sincere wishes for your health, wealth and prosperity throughout the coming years.

"Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors: Reggie Fox, Leslie Sealey, Ken Badgley."

No Baseball.

Although it is not known definitely rumors are circulating that neither Cannifton nor Foxboro will sponsor baseball teams in the South Hastings League this summer. If this is true the South Hastings League will in all likelihood curtail operations. However there is a possibility that the two village teams might have a change of heart and be ready when the league moguls convene in the near future.

At one time the South Hastings League was a flourishing rural baseball league but when each team began importing players the attendance fell off and last year the league executive made a rule banning all imports. Although this was a good move it was adopted too late as interest in the league had declined to such an extent that a mere handful was watching the games.

In the northern part of the township softball is forging to the limelight and Melrose expects to sponsor two teams this year. Shannonville should be able to field a fairly strong nine. The Mohawk Athletic Club sponsored a team two or three years ago and the team had remarkable success throughout the county. If the baseball league should fall through there is a distinct possibility that a softball league might be inaugurated although it is rather doubtful if such a game would attract very large crowds.

Mother's Day.

Mother's Day which is remembered by everyone young and old passed uneventfully in the district on Sunday. A very heavy traffic was noted on No. 2 Highway and although the weather was rather cool at times it was not too cold to keep the holiday seekers inside. Over the week-end a large number of the younger boys were noted playing baseball and softball and a few young tikes were also seen walking barefooted along the streets while other residents shivered in the cold wind.

Safety in the Electrically Equipped Home

By J. E. RITCHIE, B.A. Sc.
Fire Prevention Engineer
Ontario Fire Marshal's Department

The safe use of electrical appliances depends primarily on the standard of wiring through which the electrical current is distributed in the building. Unless the wiring has been installed by a competent electrician and inspected by a proper authority to ensure that it is in accordance with the prescribed regulations, it may in itself constitute a hazard in addition to aggravating further hazards introduced by the improper placing or installation of current-consuming appliances.

Signs of Trouble

It is a sign of trouble when sockets hiss or lamps flutter, when plugs are loose in wall outlets, when the wall switches fail to function, when insulation on the wires is injured, when it is possible to get a shock from an appliance, or when an appliance fails to operate or causes a blown fuse. It is essential that the trouble be removed before any such warning or failure grows into a real hazard.

Electricity, properly harnessed and properly handled, is not dangerous in the customary acceptance of that term. Installations that are properly made and properly maintained and utilized, offer very little hazard of fire, except when some abnormal circumstance develops. Almost all fires from electricity are the result of improper installation, improper maintenance, substandard extensions, or the overloading of individual circuits.

The characteristics of electrical energy are more or less obscure, and the ordinary householder is not sufficiently familiar with the technical aspects to know whether it is being safely applied or handled. For this reason expert supervision is necessary when electrical energy is being handled.

"White Hot"

Everyone knows that when an electric current passes through the very fine wires in an electric light bulb it produces a high temperature in the wires so that they become "white hot." It may never have occurred to the average consumer, however, that if a sufficiently large current is allowed to pass through the larger wires that constitute the house wiring, these, too, will reach a temperature so high that a fire may result. To prevent this, the Electrical Inspector examines wiring when an installation is completed, just to make sure that the wires are large enough to carry safely the amount of current required, and that fuses and other pieces of equipment are properly installed.

It is well known that electricity applied under certain conditions may be fatal, particularly where a high voltage is used. Even at the voltage ordinarily used in homes, electricity can be very dangerous if allowed to pass freely through the body. The Electrical Inspector safeguards the public in this respect, by ensuring that appliances and wires are properly insulated.

Testing Electric Appliances

To protect the public from electric shock and from electrical fires, a code of rules, formulated by the Hydro Electric Power Commission, has been made a part of the law of the Province of Ontario. In recent years the code has been standardized to apply to all the provinces, and the provinces are taking steps to adopt it. Under the code, as it is now enforced in Ontario and as it will be enforced in other provinces, facilities are provided for testing electrical appliances and materials so that only those which are entirely safe to use will be placed on the market.

Proper use of electrical wires and equipment is just as important as proper materials and proper installation. Allowing electrical equipment to fall into disrepair is responsible for most of the fires charged against electric service. Too often, electric fixtures are subjected to usage for which they were never intended. It is not uncommon to find articles, sometimes of considerable weight, hanging on electrical brackets and subjecting them to an abnormal strain with the danger of causing injury to them or to the wiring that is connected to them. Fires and shocks resulting from such improper practices should not really be charged against electricity but against utter carelessness on the part of the user.

Beware Wet Hands

Nearly everyone at some time has received slight shocks from electrical equipment without any ill effects. Sometimes, however, those shocks may be dangerous, especially if the hands are wet. Electric fixtures in bathrooms, the handles of wall switches, and the cover plates for all electrical outlets should be made of porcelain, plastic or some other insulating material. An insulating link in the chain of a pull-chain socket increases safety if there is any probability of the socket being operated with wet hands.

Safety precautions built into the permanent wiring of a house are of no avail if the last links in the wiring chain—the attachment cords —are either not suitable or not kept in good repair. Fortunately it is relatively easy to observe when cords are wearing out, because, unlike other parts of the wiring system they are in plain view. As the result of the severe abuse that electrical cords are given in the average home they will almost undoubtedly wear out sooner or later, but some cords are so much more substantially made than others that it pays to take care in choosing them.

In addition to flexible cords for the attachment of electrical appliances many people use portable extension cords for electric lights, electric drills or other movable pieces. Such extensions are not recommended for permanent attachments, but they are certainly handy and are very widely used. If they are used to damp earth or in the vicinity of grounded metals good insulation is of extra importance. In such locations sockets of insulating material should be used, and lamps should be protected by guards.

Danger of Fire

Fuses play an important part in guarding the safety of the electrically equipped home, and their use it is being safely applied or handled should not be scorned. Some people, when a fuse blows, replace it with a copper coin, thus allowing the current to flow unchecked. Such actions defeat the very purpose of the fuse, and create added danger of fire. Fuses of the right capacity should always be used in replacing old brown ones. If too much current is allowed to flow through the wiring, insulation may be injured by excess heat, or a fire may even start in the affected wiring. Ordinarily the fuses in house wiring circuits should not have a current-carrying capacity of more than 15 amperes, unless some fully qualified electrician or inspector has advised that the wiring is suitable for a heavier fuse.

Electric Iron Warning

It would hardly seem necessary to warn against leaving electric irons connected to the circuit, but, as a matter of fact, overheated flatirons have probably been responsible for more fires than any other electrical appliances. Most of those fires occur when the operator has forgotten that the iron is connected; in many cases when the operator has left home. It might be a good thing if everybody remembered that the one sure way of turning off an electric iron is to disconnect the cord. Otherwise, if the iron is connected to an ordinary wall socket it is hard to tell when the current has been shut off.

There is another reason why lamp sockets should not be used to supply current to electric irons. The switching mechanism in such sockets is designed to control incandescent lamps which, for home use, seldom exceed 200 watts. As electric irons require from 500 to 1000 watts they overload the switch mechanism with possible danger to the sockets.

Electric washing machines present additional difficulties because they must necessarily be used in the presence of water and grounded piping systems, and sometimes on damp earth. For those reasons special precautions should be employed when the machines are in use. Motors of washing machines are usually well insulated, but if the motor is allowed to get wet, its insulation may be impaired. Cords used on washers are especially likely to become defective, and only rubber-sheathed cords of good quality should be used in this connection. It is very important to replace them when they become worn. If an electrician is employed to connect a special wire between the frame of the washer and a water pipe, you will have assurance that any failure of insulation, which might otherwise create a dangerous situation, will immediately be indicated by the blowing of a fuse.

Heating Pads

Electric heating pad is a very helpful appliance, especially in case of sickness, and may be used with safety if a few fundamental principles are observed. Sharp folds in the pad should be avoided. It should not be pulled from place to place by the cord, or the connection may be broken inside the element. It should not be hung up by a hook, and pins should never be pushed through it, for fear they might make a contact with the heating element. If they did, they would become "live" and might constitute a shock hazard or even result in the destruction of the element. It is also very important that heating pads be kept dry.

Since electricity and its dangers are not understood by the public, and since a little knowledge of those things may prove more dangerous than no knowledge at all, the householder should always employ experienced men to make repairs and additions to house wiring. All appliances should be kept in good order and due respect should be paid to all wires and fixtures as long as they are in service. If installations are properly made, and if maintenance is based on good practice and in accordance with the standard regulations, there is little if any, danger of either fire or shock from the use of approved electrical appliances.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

'A'nd there's so little one can do really," Hall meditated. "This is just an example of it—how can I help that family? Even if I hadn't got my own job to attend to—Hullo! Looks like a new convoy coming in. And we're full-up already; no space even on the floor for another mattress.

He quickened his steps as much as the sticky mud and melted snow would allow, as half a dozen motor ambulances clattered across the opening of the lane down which he was plodding. Hall turned aside climbed through a wall gap, ran stumbling across a field, a short cut which brought him first to the destination by a split second or two.

One of the over-loaded ambulances had just lurched heavily and creakingly into the cobbled square in front of the ruined sugar-beet factory, the shattered brick shell of which had been turned into a temporary hospital, manned by the newly-arrived French Red Cross detachment.

In the wet and gusty darkness the driver of the ambulance leaned down, peering about for help, shouting in French for stretcher bearers to deal with the load of wounded the vehicle carried. Hall ran up and answered quickly in English.

"Yes, yes, we'll have them here in half a minute—" then as he realized his mistake and hurriedly recollected himself, he went on in rather stumbling French: "Pardon! Je suis American—"

"That's all right! I'm an American myself, and it's a relief to be able to speak English for a bit," came the answer from the ambulance driver, crisp and clear-cut, accompanied by an equally incisive movement, which brought a slim figure down to the ground amongst the trampled clay and mud and blood of the roadway.

"Good! It's muc heasier for me to explain. I'm temporarily in charge of the orderlies here, and I'll get the men at once." Hall was just turning away when the driver interrupted him peremptorily.

"Wait! Don't go till you've said how-do-you-do. You're Wilson Hall; I knew your voice at once."

"And you—you are—?" Hall stopped to peer shortsightedly through the driving mist of rain. "Leonie!"

CHAPTER XX III

Leonie's New Role

"Leonie, certainly," she laid one hand on Hall's shoulder for a moment with a movement which was almost caressing. "Help me to get the stretchers out as quickly as possible. Some of these poor fellows are appallingly bad cases who've been lying out in the wet and the mud. We'll have plenty of time to talk afterwards, about everything in heaven and earth —and hell too! I'm attached here at present—been backwards and forwards for days."

Even as she spoke, Leonie had left Hall's side and was busy unfastening the waterproof weathershield at the back of the ambulance. When stretcher-bearers and orderlies had been summoned, for a time there was no sound in the rainy semi-darkness except brusque orders, the strained breathing of men lifting heavy loads, footfalls clogged and weighted by mud and the moans of the wounded as they were forced to endure the necessary torture of removal from the ambulance to the hospital building.

The work was done quickly and expertly. In a few minutes Leonie stood within the ground-sheet shaded doorway and looked round the big square room, lighted by electric bulbs swung on wires from the planks covered with tarred canvas which formed an extemporized roof to replace the demolished ceiling.

Hall came to join Leonie in the doorway, and the two looked at each other for the first time, gravely and appraisingly.

The first impression of each was the same, that the other had aged more than the passing of a mere twelve months warranted. Hall, always spare and slightly built, was now thin to attenuation, his face gaunt and fleshless, with cheekbones apparently heightened and eyes sunken behind the salient ridges, and hidden behind glasses in place of the familiar monocle. Yet he gave the impression of wire-strung alertness, a man living on his nerves, perhaps, but, all the same, very much alive.

As for Leonie, any loss of weight in her case could only be guessed at, so concealed were all the lines of her body by the shapeless great coat of the French infantryman which she wore, together with breeches and heavy trench boots, thick with mud. On her head, and soaked to blackness like all her garments, was the cap of a French poilu, from whose shabbiest aspect, indeed, her garb was only distinguished by a mud-stained Red Cross brassard.

For the French ambulance women drivers gave the impression that it had never been thought necessary to provide them with any distinctive uniform, that they merely wore such military or semi-military garments as it was easiest to procure.

Regulations were less stringent amongst the French than the British area. The rules which kept women well to the back of the Front, and as little under fire as possible were not so rigidly enforced and far more easily eluded under pressure of circumstances. Possibly it was because there were fewer men available amongst the French for bringing in the wounded, for these drivers of the Croix Rouge visited the front lines in the course of their duty, collected injured men from the actual trenches, or out of the shell-holes and ruined buildings in the battle areas.

It was from a communication trench enfiladed by the German machine-guns that Leonie had taken up her present pitiful ambulance load only a few hours before, their clothes drenched with rain and blood, and stiffened by the frost which followed.

"If I promised to Marry You—"

Leonie looked beyond Hall and spoke with an accent of commendation.

"This contingent of yours is a great deal better than the last we had here—more doctors, quicker orderlies.... But then the post was bombed a week ago by aeroplanes, who were probably out for the big munition dump near here. I've seen bad things out here myself, but never anything quite as bad as that. Well—can you spare a few minutes?"

"Yes. I'm supposed to be off duty now for several hours, and I don't think I'm needed urgently. Come to my tent and I'll make you some cocoa."

"Thanks. I shall be glad of it. I've had nothing since the morning. It's been a strenuous day, but I rather think the fighting is over for the time being; the bombardment slackened today considerably and some of the front line units have been relieved.... You lead the way, will you?"

Behind the main building a few tents had been put up for the staff. Into one of them Hall ushered Leonie after a glance round by the light of a dim and smoking oil-stove.

"The others aren't here; that's good!" he said. "We shall get a few minutes' peace, perhaps. How on earth can we dry that coat of yours? It's soaked through and through."

"Oh, I'm used to it—it doesn't matter!" She shrugged and pulled off the drenched cap, showing her face more clearly, with a lock of hair, dark with wetness, streaked down over her forehead, after the famous Napoleonic fashion.

As she sat down on a box, indeed hands drooping between her knees, the light thrown upwards on her face from the stove, the likeness to the Bonaparte of the early campaigns was more marked than ever and almost involuntarily Hall commented upon it.

Leonie glanced up and smiled faintly.

"It's being in France, I suppose —in the country he made, with the Army he made, for, after all, that's what it is. I feel sometimes as if I were seeing what he saw—until I remember that the English are in line with us and not in the trenches opposite, where they'd have been then. But this talk doesn't get us anywhere. How long have you been at the front?"

"Nearly four months. I was attached to the Franco-American Hospital in Paris first. I tried to get into both armies—French and British—but my eyes have been turning against me and prevented my acceptance. Chrissie Struan was working in Paris for a time, too, until her husband went to Mesopotamia. Now, she's in London, a V.A.D., at a hospital, working very hard, too."

"Ah!—yes, of course—he went with the Indian Expeditionary Force last month—I expected so," Leonie said.

"There's a baby now, you know, Elizabeth, they've called her— a jolly little beggar."

"Ah—I'm glad of that. It will be a comfort to Chrissie. She needed a child. And our other friends of Pathapora?"

"Tim Jones was wounded at Loos and is probably out of it for good. So far Struan hasn't had a scatch. And—the Maharajah?"

"Back in India. He had a bad attack of enteric, I believe; anyhow, he has been invalided. No, I didn't see him; why should I? All that Indian life is over and done with —fini!" She laughed shortly. "Nothing remains of Khotalghar in Europe except the six aeroplanes which were made over to the French Aviation; they are attached to the Lafayette Escadrille—the American squadron, you know — good pilots and good machines. I tried to get taken on with them myself, but it couldn't be managed, worse luck! So I learned to drive an ambulance—and here I am."

"Doing very fine, and useful work," Hall commented quietly.

"Ah—that!" She put it aside with a contemptuous sound and gesture. "A job anyone could take over! If this is all that I'm meant for—but it isn't! I can't believe that; there must be something more — something bigger — something waiting for me."

"Of course—I suppose this is a bit of impertinence, but I'm going to say it—" Hall paused, stared at the saucepan of cocoa which he was stirring over the stove, and went on more slowly:

"Now that things have altered, and the British are the Allies of the French, you must feel differently, you can't surely .... hate them in the same way?"

"I can!" Leonie threw back her head with a fierce jerk. "Why not? It doesn't alte rthe past."

"No, but it makes a considerable difference to the present," Hall said. "You can't injure one of the Allies without affecting the others, can't even wish evil against it, far less take action....Surely that's self-evident?"

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, MAY 18, 1939

REHABILITATION SCHEME PRAISED FROM ALL SIDES

Members State it Will Have Splendid Effect on Western Economy

IRRIGATION ADVANCED

Ottawa, May 18 (CP)—The Prairie Farm Rehabilitation scheme today had the hearty commendation of members from all sides of the House of Commons, even though many criticised detailed works and A. M. Mitchell (S. C. Medicine Hat) warned against allowing it to become political.

"This whole Prairie Farm Rehabilitation scheme is a permanent and good thing and will ultimately have a splendid effect on the whole western economy," Mr. Mitchell said last night as the Commons discussed agricultural estimates.

"But it is now commonly beginning to bear the stamp of becoming a political machine and if it is to become a political machine, the intrinsic value will be greatly reduced," he said.

The P.F.R.A. was voted another $3,250,000, bringing the total spent on such rehabilitation and water storage projects about $10,000,000.

Under the single-handed leadership of Agriculture Minister Gardiner through morning, afternoon and evening sessions, the House approved the last $12,000,000 of agricultural estimates for 1939-40. In the absence of the rest of the Cabinet in Quebec City to welcome the King, Mr. Gardiner held the floor himself a large part of the three sittings as he piloted through his estimates on a wide range of departmental activity. In the evening Postmaster General McLarty, Defence Minister Mackenzie and Hon. J. A. MacKinnon returned by air from Quebec and Transport Minister Howe from Halifax.

Defence Estimates

The House today resumes its discussion of defence estimates.

Under the clost scrutiny of Opposition members, wash-outs of 10 P.F.R.A. dams, the size of travelling expense accounts and delays in obtaining working plans for water projects were criticised.

In reply to an earlier criticism from E. E. Perley (Con. Qu'Appelle) Mr. Gardiner explained that a $7,085 travelling expense item under the name of J. I. Mutchler actually included expenses of 10 rod and instruments men working under Mutchler.

Dr. Thomas Donnelly (Lib. Wood Mountain) and Charles Evans (Lib. Maple Creek) enthusiastically endorsed the rehabilitation work being carried out. Mr. Evans said 90 per cent of the people who had had P.F.R.A. service were completely satisfied.

Dr. Donnelly commended the instruction of farmers in various methods of retaining soil moisture, by preventing blowing and strip farming and by planting trees. Chief work, however, was in building small dugouts and dams. The large irrigation schemes were only good to show people what could be done in that direction.

"If Western Canada has to depend on irrigation alone, then it has seen its best days and the future is not very good," he observed.

Several members advocated a campaign to popularize Canadian tomato juice and cider as a means of opening up markets for the products of gardens and orchards. M. J. Coldwell, (C.C.F.-Rosetown-Biggar), saw no reason why Canadian cider should not be marketed throughout the world as English cider was.

Apple Growers Organise

W. A. Fraser, (Lib-Northumberland), told the House Ontario apple growers were now getting organised and hoped to be able to contribute something to the marketing of apples both in their natural state and as cider.

Trial shipments of chilled baby beef to the United Kingdom had commanded a good price last summer, said Mr. Gardiner, but he admitted the cost of the shipments was high. He hoped further shipments would be made later. One of the difficulties in developing a market for Canadian beef in the United Kingdom was the attainment of regular supplies.

With some 30 community pastures now being developed in Western Canada, it might be possible to encourage the production of a steady supply of baby beef which would make commercial shipments feasible.

Regular Supply Necessary

Regular supplies were also essential to the maintenance of Canada's bacon trade with the United Kingdom. This was difficult because swine produced only two litters a year and climatic conditions in Canada made it difficult for farmers to have pigs born during the winter months to ensure steady supplies each month throughout the year.

This was responsible, to a large extent, for the fluctuations in hog prices throughout the year. Some farmers, because of the higher prices prevailing in off months were able to produce litters in heated piggeries. If the higher prices did not prevail at these times they would be unable to meet the cost.

An item of $750,000 for the improvement of high grade cheese by awarding of premiums was passed with little discussion. A vote of $1,000,000 for the distribution of surplus butter to the poor was approved.

ROYAL THANKS ARE EXPRESSED

King George Thanks Sir Edward Beatty for Comfort and Safety During Voyage

Quebec, May 18 (CP)—Canadian Pacific Steamships announced last night receipt of a wireless message from King George to Sir Edward Beatty, President, expressing the "sincere thanks" of the King and Queen" for all that has been done for our comfort and safety" during the voyage from England to Canada.

The royal party was brought from England on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Australia.

The King's Message

Following is the message:

On reaching Quebec I should like to express to you and to your great company, sincere thanks of the Queen and myself for all that has been done for our comfort and safety.

Our voyage has been an eventful one. We encountered fog which kept us immobile three days and passed through an icefield of an extent which is, I believe, unprecedented at this time of year.

The highest praise is due to the Captain of the Empress of Australia who did his utmost to get us here Monday, but in the execution of his duties (as a sailor I can appreciate this fact) made the safety of his ship his first consideration.

We shall say goodbye to the Empress of Australia with regret and gratitude.

Sir Edward's Reply

In reply Sir Edward expressed gratification that the "somewhat unusual crossing was completed safely."

Text of Sir Edward's message follows:

I appreciate Your Majesty's most gracious and generous message and am sincerely gratified that your somewhat unusual crossing was completed safely. The delay was a great disappointment but the conditions were extraordinary and the consequences of the delay have been greatly minimized by the speedy readjustment of your schedule on land.

May I on behalf of the Company's directors, officers and myself, extend our most loyal greetings and grateful thanks for your message.

FRENCH TRADITION HONORED TODAY BY KING, QUEEN

London Times Pays Tribute to French Pioneers of New France

'RIGHT OF SENIORITY'

London May 18 (CP)—The honor of receiving the King and Queen on Canadian soil falls on a people of predominantly French blood, language and tradition, The Times said yesterday in an editorial stressing the links between Canada and the Crown.

"It comes to them in a sense by geographical accident, but no province of the Dominion could show better title than the right of seniority which belongs to the French Canadians of Quebec," The Times said. "To this day, the tradition of Quebec is the noble tradition of the pioneers of New France.

"The Canadians will see in George VI the very incarnation of those ideals which have made it possible for two nationalities to dwell—setting a notable example to the rancorous people of Europe—within the confines of a harmonious state."

The Yorkshire Post said the regrettable delay in Their Majesties' arrival at Quebec "will soon be forgotten in the warmth of the welcome which awaits Their Majesties on Canadian soil."

"No part of Canada could be more appropriate as a starting point for a tour, for here Their Majesties will at once encounter a concrete illustration of two races living together in harmony in their different traditions and languages, subject to a common loyalty," the paper said.

Queen Elizabeth Brilliantly Gowned For State Dinner

(By Muriel Adams Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Quebec, May 18 (CP)— Queen Elizabeth is much lovelier than her pictures, those who saw her at a Quebec government dinner here last night decided. Later in the night, talk centred on the fact that the Queen climaxed a day of surprise for them by her appearance, when she attended the dinner.

She seemed just what a Queen should be.

Gowned in palest pink and glittering from head to foot her Majesty entered the flower-deck ballroom of the Chateau Frontenac and with the King dined as a guest of the Provincial government.

A dainty vision in her crinoline gown, studded with tiny gold and pink sequins, she chatted in French with her dinner partners, Premier Duplessis and Lieutenant-Governor E. L. Patenaude, eating sparingly of the elaborate meal. She wore a diamond tiara, and a magnificient diamond necklace and diamond bracelet as accessories. She did not wear gloves.

Before entering the dining room, the Queen took off her elbow length cape of pink ostrich feathers, disclosing the off-the-shoulder effect, outlined by a frill of pink tulle, of her low-cut picture gown.

Deep pink roses on a pale blue table cloth and masses of blue hydrangea and salmon shaded snapdragons and gladioli banked about the room added a dresden atmosphere to the formal affair.

At one end of the long chandelier-lighted room, a group of musicians chosen from the Quebec Symphony Society played works of Schubert, Beethoven and Tanguay, a Canadian composer.

The King was dressed in evening clothes and smiled proudly at his Queen between conversations with Mr. Duplessis and Mrs. Patenaude.

The King wore the Star of the Order of the Garter on his lapel and the Queen wore the diamond miniature insignia of the same order on the bodice of her gown.

Her Majesty's Ladies-in-Waiting, Lady Nunburnholme and Lady Katherine Seymour, chose gowns in pastel tints in complement to her Majesty's dress.

Lady Nunburnholme wore pale blue satin embroidered with pearls and sequins and Lady Seymour's gown was pale mauve net, with allover pattern of pearls and sequins on its puffed skirt.

Both Ladies-in-Waiting wore a diamond "E" pinned to their gowns by a pale blue satin ribbon, their only decoration while they are attending her Majesty.

CLOUDLESS SKIES AT MONTREAL TODAY

Montreal, May 18 (CP)—Cloudless skies, with just a touch of crispness in the air, is the weather fare Montreal will serve Their Majesties today. Rain fell for two hours yesterday but all traces of inclement weather vanished during the night.

Light scattered showers were forecast but unless there is a sudden change the "weather man's" predictions will be wrong.

Official Greeting in Quebec

King and Queen Talk to Children Who Present Flowers on Plains

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, May 18 (CP)—King George and Queen Elizabeth will move on today from this old French-Canadian city, scene of their triumphal arrival yesterday as they started their tour of the Dominion.

Their Majesties' departure was scheduled just 23 hours after their landing at Wolfe's Cove, where 180 years ago another historic landing led to the placing of Canada's destiny in British hands.

From the time the King and Queen stepped down the gangplank of the liner Empress of Australia which carried them to these shores, until the last ceremony of their visit here, they were received with boundless enthusiasm by the ancient capital's 150,000 population and thousands of visitors.

Cheering crowds lined the waterfront when the royal liner arrived and their enthusiasm grew greater as the day progressed. The streets were jammed at every appearance of Their Majesties, and last night crowds before the Chateau Frontenac, where the King and Queen attended a formal dinner, almost got out of hand in their excitement.

Queen Is Charming

Her Majesty's charm captivated Quebec City folk, and cries of "Vie la Reine" were heard as she smiled and waved from the automobile which carried Their Majesties about the city.

His Majesty was popular with the French-Canadians from his first appearance when he stepped to Wolfe's Cove pier after having been welcomed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to the British "realm of Canada."

The King's spoken reply in French to an address of welcome given by Senator Raoul Dandurand brought comment of admiration.

The King and Queen were welcomed officially to Quebec Province by Premier Maurice Duplessis who during a brief ceremony at the Provincial Legislature Buildings expressed French-Canada's sentiments of "joy, respect, loyalty and affection."

Praised Spirit

In reply, His Majesty praised the spirit of understanding exisiting in Canada between French and English Canadians.

Quebec home of Their Majesties was the Citadel, great stone fortress, built here by the British nearly 160 years ago to consolidate their newly-acquired position in the New World.

One of the King's first official acts was his signature of a submission conveying his consent to the appointment of Hon. Daniel C. Roper as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Canada.

For the visit of the King and Queen, Quebec was in a holiday mood and elaborately decorated. Preparations equally as elaborate had been made for the protection of the royal couple and the handling of dense traffic.

During the ceremony at the Legislature, Cardinal Villeneuve and other Quebec notables were presented. Last night at a dinner given by the Provincial Government there were further presentations.

Their Majesties showed keen interest in a demonstration on the Plains of Abraham by 35,000 school children who sang "God Save the King" in English and French, and then "O Canada."

Children Overcome

More than 100 of the children were overcome during a four-hour wait under a hot sun before the arrival of the King and Queen.

From a stand on the terrace the King and Queen looked into a sea of childish faces and when the children waved small British and French flags the effect was of a huge field of multi-colored flowers swaying in the breeze.

Three little girls, all of them eight, attired in full white net dresses, with garlands of flowers in their hair, now advanced slowly, and curtseyed low to the Queen. One of them presented to her a large bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Obviously touched, the Queen detained the children and questioned them, and the King, who had been chatting with the Prime Minister, broke away to say a few words to them also. The children represented the three races of this city, French-Canadian, English-Canadian and Irish-Canadian.

The children were Paule Delage, daughter of Notary Emile Delage representing French - Canadian children, Margaret Stobo, daughter of W. Q. Stobo, Chairman of the Protestant School Commission, representing English Protestant children and Emily Ftizpatrick, daughter of Walter Fitzpatrick, representing Irish Catholic pupils.

Talked With Girls

The Queen asked eight-year-old Paule, after thanking her for the bouquet, what her name was. Then she asked the other girls their names. And then she inquired of Paule if she was a little French girl.

"I was frightened at first," said Paule describing it all afterward.

Emily Fitzpatrick, the little Irish girl, said she found Her Majesty "just adorable".

"The Queen has a lovely smile," Emily said.

The shouts and cheers that were heard as they arrived in the morning and during parades were weak in comparison with the good-natured uproar with which the King and Queen were greeted as they entered the Chateau Frontenac for Provincial Government dinner and left it for the Citadel.

An official attached to the royal party said the spontaneous cheers that went up as Their Majesties arrived for the dinner were new in his experience and surpassed anything he had heard while riding with the royal party during the day.

Cheered Leaving Hotel

As they left the hotel, guests and newspapermen, who don't usually cheer anyone, set up a series of hurrahs in the Chateau lobby that threatened to tear the chandeliers down.

Their Majesties charmed the 400 Quebec notables who attended the dinner, a masterpiece of culinary planning.

The Queen was regal and lovely in a pompadour crinoline gown of pale rose satin, bright with copper and pink star sequins. She wore diamonds and a tiara.

During the evening Her Majesty chatted animatedly with Premier Duplessis of Quebec, while guests craned their heads to get better view of her costume and jewels.

Among the prominent guests seated with Their Majesties at the head table were Prime Minister King, Lieutenant-Governor E. L. Patenaude and Mrs. Patenaude, of Quebec; Senator Arthur Meighen and Mrs. Meighen of Toronto; Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe and Mrs. Lapointe and Provincial Treasurer Martin Fisher.

No Speeches

There were no speeches. After the toast to His Majesty the guests sang "God Save the King" and put a degree of fervor into it that indicated a personal meaning.

Later the King and Queen joined them in singing "O Canada," in English. A few of the guests sang it in their own French and the blend seemed to please Their Majesties.

The King and Queen possibly tired after a heavy day athough they didn't look it, ate sparingly of the elaborate menu. It consisted of:

Caviar.
Chicken Consomme Montmorency.
Laurentide Trout with White Wine.
Quebec Lamb Crown.
Champagne Sherbet.
Breasts of Island of Orleans Snowbirds.
French Salad.
Strawberry Cup with Whipped Cream.
Fancy Biscuits.
Fruit Basket.
Coffee.

Rare vintage wines were served. First there was Amontillado Sherry, then Chevalier Montrachet, Hospice de Beaume, Chateau Haut Brion, Grand Pin Champagne and Napoleon Brandy.

9,000 School Children To Mass at Cornwall

Cornwall, Ont., May 18—(CP) — More than 9,000 school children from Dundas, Glengarry and Stormont Counties will be among an estimated 40,000 persons who will be massed at the railway station here Sunday evening when the train bearing the King and Queen to Kingston, Ont., from Ottawa, passes through here. On the original itinerary of Their Majesties, the Cornwall stop was later cancelled. The train will only slow down.

BARRIE PUBLISHER DIES

Barrie, Ont., May 18 (CP)—Co-publisher and manager of the Barrie Examiner for 25 years, William Clarence Walls, 58, died in hospital last night from pneumonia which set in after an operation for removal of appendix.

Mr. Walls started in the newspaper business as a "printer's devil" when only 14. He founded the Saturday Morning hr in 1910. Four years later the Saturday Morning was amalgamated with the Examiner.

He was a director of the Ontario-Quebec division of the Canadian Weekly Newspapers' Association for five years and a former president of the York-Simcoe Press Association. He is survived by his widow, one son and one daughter.

CAFE ATTENDANT HOLDUP VICTIM

Two, Believed to be Indians, Drew Revolvers and Took $21

Simcoe, Ont., May 18—(CP) — While one of two customers slept in a chair, two men, believed to be Indians and armed with revolvers, held up Tim Munro, attendant at an all-night lunch room here, and escaped on foot with $21. Police traced the bandits to the nearby Innes' Swamp on the outskirts of town.

Munroe told police that two truck drivers, one of them asleep, were in the lunch room when the two men entered and asked him "Is anyone driving to Hamilton?" Munroe said no and the men asked for cigarette papers. When the attendant turned to get them, one man followed him, pulled out a revolver and told him to "hand it over."

The other bandit also produced a revolver and covered the other occupants, Munroe said. He attempted to "stall" but the men insisted he get the money from the cash register. The attendant gave them $21 and they fled. Munroe grabbed a shotgun and fired a shot in the air to warn police. Police saw the men running and traced them to the swamp.

The sleeping truck driver never woke up during the holdup.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

LAKE FISHING AT PORT BURWELL VERY POOR

Port Burwell, Ont., May 18 (CP) —Four fishing tugs remained in operation here today but lifts are small and unless they improve the spring fishing season will close within a few days. The average catch has been 600 to 700 pounds, a prohibitive amount to operating costs.

PLANE ON SKIS TAKES OFF FROM MUD RUNWAY

Anchorage, Alaska, May 18 (AP) —A man-made "mud puddle" enabled pilot John Moore to take off in a ski-equipped airplane from a snowless airport here. Moore needed the skis to land at Stuyahck, on the lower Yukon, where the snow still is three feet deep. So manager Don Goodman of Star Airline prepared a 400-foot "skiport" of slippery mud. The plane slid 350 feet, then took off easily.

MOUNTAIN TROUT FOUND IN IRRIGATION DITCH

Albuquerque, N.M., May 18 (AP) —Mrs. E. R. Hostetter opened the irrigation ditch gate to water her cabbage patch. Out jumped a 15-inch mountain trout. A clout with a spade provided the Hostetter dinner.

FELL INTO VAT OF LYE BURNS PROVE FATAL

Hamilton, May 18 (CP)—Frank Thompson of Aldershot who suffered extensive burns last Friday evening when he fell into a vat of lye at the Steel Company of Canada's plant, died last night at the General Hospital.

50 ACRES MINT PLANTS PLANTED AT PORT FRANK

Port Frank, Ont., May 18 (CP) —First step of what is hoped to be the initial peppermint industry in Ontario is being taken here this week with 50 acres of mint plants to be planted in fertile soil of celery gardens. The project is to determine if the land is suitable for mint growing.

"WHALEBACK" FREIGHTER NOW A RARE SIGHT

Sarnia, Ont., May 18 (CP) — Waterfront visitors were treated to a rare sight this week when one of the fast-disappearing "whaleback" freighters docked at the Sarnia elevator with grain. The boat, the John Ericsson, looks like a giant cigar. The vessels are known also as "pigs."

HUGE FRENCH FLYING BOAT ARRIVES AT BERMUDA

Hamilton, Bermuda, May 18 — (CP Cable)—The 70-passenger French flying boat, Lieutenant De Vaisseau De Paris, arrived here at 8.53 a.m. E.S.T. today from Horta. The big flying boat is on an experimental flight from Lisbon to New York.

YEARLING MOOSE BREAKS NECK AGAINST FENCE

Huntsville, Ont., May 18 (CP)— Alarmed by an approaching mail truck, a yearling moose charged a wire fence and fractured its neck after running ahead of the truck for more than a mile. The carcass was ordered buried.

TWO HOLIDAYS GIVEN

Ottawa, May 18 (CP)—So that Dominion Government employees may participate in the royal visit celebrations, the Civil Service here will enjoy a holiday Friday and Saturday, it was announced in the House of Commons today.

The staff of the House, which sits Friday afternoon, will be given time to join in the welcome to Their Majesties in the morning.

N. Y. RANGERS SELL 3 FORWARDS TO N. H. L. CLUBS

Bill Carse and George Allen Go to Chicago and Cecil Dillon to Detroit

ROMNES NOTIFIED

Centre Player for Toronto Says He Will Play with Amerks Next Season

New York, May 18 (CP)—Confident their wide-spread farm system will provide adequate replacements, New York Rangers have sold three tried forwards to other National Hockey League clubs.

General Manager Bill Tobin of Chicago Black Hawks announced last night the Hawks had bought Bill Carse and George Allen from the Rangers as part of a spending program aimed at lifting Chicago from the league cellar.

Then Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings announced his club had bought the veteran Cecil Dillon from the Rangers, giving the Wings one of the game's highest scorers and smoothest skaters. For the moment, those seem to complete the Ranger spring sales.

The deals were discussed at last Saturday's N.H.L. meeting in Boston and completed by telephone when Tobin and Adams returned home. As purchasing managers, they were entitled to make the announcements rather than Lester Patrick of the Rangers.

Romnes Goes to Amerks

New York's other club, the Americans, also entered the player market at the Boston meeting, buying players from Toronto Maple Leafs. The extent of the deal has not been determined, but Elwyn (Doc) Romnes said at his home in St. Paul, Minn., last night he had been notified of his sale to the Americans by Toronto Manager Patrick will count on the showing of students from his various farm organizations at the Winnipeg camp next fall to fill the shoes of Dillon, Carse and Allen. Actually, Carse and Allen played most of last season with the Philadelphia farm club, while Dillon missed all the Rnagers' hectic play-off round with Boston because of injuries.

Hampered by Injuries

Hampered by injuries of one kind and another, Dillon lost most of the remarkable form that made him second-high scorer in the old United States division in the 1937-38 season. That year he was second to only Paul Thompson of Chicago in pointmaking.

But in Dillon, a 31-year-old right wingman from Thornbury, Ont., Detroit gets a man whom Patrick once called "the perfect hockey player." A left-hand shot, Dillon plays the right boards as if that were the natural thing.

Frick Foresees Another Major Loop On Pacific Coast

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 18—(AP)— Ford Frick, youthful President of the National Baseball League, foresees a lot of things, including a third major league on the Pacific Coast within 50 years, but he doesn't think any of us will live to see a change in the present lineup of big league cities.

He had been asked if there was anything to rumors the baseball magnates were toying with the idea of reducing St. Louis and Philadelphia to one-team towns.

"It's a great idea," Frick admitted, "but nothing is being done about it because nothing can be done—absolutely nothing. It's just one of those things.

"Take, for instance, St. Louis. There's no doubt it doesn't need a National and an American League club. President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals makes no secret he would like to move his team to Detroit, which is a great city and a swell baseball town. It surely would support another club.

"But what does Breadon run into there? Only the fact that Walter Briggs of the Tigers owns the Detroit franchise and has exclusive territorial rights. No other team can move in without h's permission."

Yacht Club to Hold Punt Races Each Wednesday Afternoon

Races held each summer under the auspices of the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club will be held this season again once a week, on Wednesday afternoons, with the first race named for Monday, May 22nd, it was decided at a special meeting of the club held last evening. Races will be on Wednesday each week thereafter, except in the case of special races which will be held on Sunday, or announced beforehand.

The Mikel Cup race will be held on the Sunday closest to June 18th and the King Rogers' Cup race on the second Sunday in July.

Members of the Club will hold a special regatta off Massassaga Point in conjunction with the special speed boat regatta being held by the Belleville Rotary Club there on August 7th, it was decided, following a request by President McLean Haig of the Rotary Club for assistance in the holding of this special speed event.

Previously it had been mentioned that this date set by the American Power Boat Association had been found to interfere with the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club summer schedule. This was not learned until after the date had been set, and an apology was tendered by the Rotary president. To his request for co-operation with the Rotary Club in the holding of the regatta, every assistance has been assured by club members. Special sailing races will be held on that day by the club. A joint meeting of the committee on races of the Rotary and the Yacht Club will be held to complete plans.

This year the donation of a committee boat for the use of a course judge or umpire has been announced by George Loadsman, who will offer the use of his cruiser for this purpose. Selection of an umpire has been left to the discretion of the special sailing committee, the chairman of which is Secretary Charles Jeffs. A timekeeper and starter are yet to be appointed.

STRATFORD TEAM LOSES GAME ON RITCHER'S HOMER

Champions Leading When Homer is Smacked with Team Mate Aboard

PRESTON WINS

Riversides Making it Interesting for Other Teams in Senior Series

(By The Canadian Press)

From early-season indications, Preston Riversides will not take the easy way out of the Ontario Baseball Association Senior Series. All the Riversides have to do to get into the Intermediate "A" playdowns is to stand last in the Inter-County Senior League.

But today the Preston club shares with Guelph the lead in the Inter-County standing with two victories and no losses. The Riversides added Brantford Alerts to their victims yesterday in a 6-5 game at Brantford.

Alerts used three pitchers in an attempt to halt Preston's fifth inning rally, but six errors counted against them.

While Preston was winning, the champion Stratford Nationals were being upset at Kitchener. A home-run wallop by Wally Ritcher, Kitchener first baseman, for two runs in the ninth, scuttled the Nats 2-1. To make it more dramatic, two were out when Ritcher reached one of Powley's portside slants.

Four Runs Gives Tie

Four runs in the seventh inning gave Woodstock Red Sox a split decision with Waterloo on their home grounds. The Tigers scored six scattered runs on six hits and four errors by the Red Sox, who have been prodigals from senior competition for 20 years.

Galt Terriers sank into the Inter-County cellar as Guelph Leafs chalked up their second straight victory, 8-7, at home. It was a close call for the Leafs when Butter Smith weakened to allow the Terriers four runs in the ninth Lefty Hammond quelled the uprising after Gooding and Ante had hit home runs off Smith.

In an impressive display of infield strength on their home ground, Port Colborne sailors downed Fort Erie 6-4 in the Niagara District Senior League. Only one putout was credited to an outfielder as the tars exhibited their masterpiece which included three double plays.

Brights Win One

Niagara Falls Brights kept pace with the undefeated record of the Ports by turning back Thorold Mountaineers 2-1 in the Cataract Town. A homer by Wodinski, which went for the winning run, spoiled Andy Kerr's great pitching for Thorold. Kerr knocked a triple to give the Papermakers their single tally.

Pick Leeson poked out a homer with one on in the second to snap Merritton Alliance's three-game losing streak, 4-2, at the expense of Niagara Falls Brocks at St. Catharines. Each was guilty of five errors in a sloppy exhibition.

Pitchers Hugh Bradden and Joe Horvath had the game between Welland and St. Catharines to themselves at Welland until the Saints bunched four hits in the eighth to win 5-1. Horvath limited the Welland team to one run in the sixth, pitching five-hit ball.

Vito Tamulis of Brooklyn Claims Hard Luck Crown By Failing to Win Long Game

Pitches Eleven Innings Allowing Only Four Hits but Game is Tied

PEARSON WINS

Yankees Win Seventh Straight on Four-Hit Pitching Job by Monte

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

Everything happens to left-handed pitchers and, Brooklyn Dodgers, so now they have the uncrowned hard luck champion of the Major Leagues—Vitautas C. Tamulis.

Except that Vito is well-fed in these perilous times it might not be amiss to label him the champion of the world. He lost a chance with the world champion Yankees through no fault of his own and that is tops in tough breaks in baseball.

Vito ran into har duck yesterday when the Dodgers' game with Chicago Cubs was rued a tie after 19 innings of fighting and fumbling in windswept Wrigley Field—the longest game in the National Baseball League in seven years. Longest game in Major history was a 1-1 tie in 26 innings played by Brooklyn and Boston Braves on May 1, 1920.

Yesterday's game also was the second tie of this 1939 season and the other involved the Dodgers and Tamulis. That was a 1-1 affair, also ended by darkness, at Philadelphia April 21, as Tamulis made his season's bow with a five-hit, five-strikeout job.

Always a Winner

The chunky southpaw always has been a winning pitcher, but has had a hard time proving it. He joined the Yankees after a good season with Newark in the International in 1934 and pitched an impressive seven-hit victory which earned him a berth with New York for 1935, when he appeared in 30 games, winning 10 and losing five.

But he became ill, was sent back to Newark and by the time he was able to go again the Yankees weren't needing southpaws.

He was obtained by St. Louis Browns last year and after dropping his first three starts, was waived to Brooklyn, where he produced a dozen victories.

He was the third hurler called upon yesterday and he reeled off 11 scoreless innings on four hits. With the temperature at about 45 degrees, cold fingers contributed to nine errors to the early inning scoring, but the batters never had a chance against Tamulis and rookie Walter Higbe, who worked the last seven innings for the Cubs on one hit.

Yanks Win Seventh

Monte Pearson, although wild, held St. Louis Browns to four hits as the Yankees won their seventh straight, 4-3. Bill Deitrich and Clint Brown gave up only five in Chicago White Sox' 6-3 10-inning triumph over the Red Sox, and rookie Walter Masterson scattered six singles in Washington's 4-1 victory over Detroit Tigers. Philadelphia and Cleveland took the day off.

In the National Hug Mulcahy limited the Pirates to five hits for the Phillies' 7-3 conquest. Bucky Walters spread seven for Cincinnati against Boston Bees to win 6-1 and the Giants beat the Cardinals 9-5.

Inter-Service Club Softball League Formed

Efforts to organize an inter-service club softball league in Belleville fell on fruitful waters at the Y.M.C.A. last evening when the Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Y's Men's clubs signified their intentions of sposoring softball teams within their clubs for the purpose of recreation and enjoyment throughout the summer months. Two additional clubs one from the Knights of Columbus and another composed of city firemen and provincial police were also invited to join the loop, making a five teamed group in all.

Kiwanian Frank Folwell acted as chairman last evening and drafted a tentative schedule for the opening games which include: May 24th, Kinsmen vs. Kiwanis; May 30th, Y's Men vs. Kinsmen.

All games will be played on the Collegiate campus commencing at 6:30 p.m. while each team will supply one umpire for the night's game.

All players must be bonafide members of the club with which they play during the season, it was decided as the games are being arranged strictly for recreation purposes.

Games will be of the conventional nine innings duration.

"Aw come on, Ump, have a heart, I touched him here. Look— right here. He was out a mile! !" Thus went the pleas of Harry Danning, catcher with New York Giants after he had tagged Herschel Martin at the plate in a game with Philadelphia Phillies. As Danning receives moral support at least from a teammate, Umpire Goetz adjusts his mask and pads. Or appears to be doing so. He might be just stuffing his ears as one way of getting around the difficulty. It usually works when you know who always wins arguments of this kind.

Control Not Enough as Proved by Hutchinson Case

By LAWTON CARVER

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

New York, May 17 — Although the Detroit Tigers gave up $50,000 in cash and four players for Fred Hutchinson, the Seattle pitcher, there was some doubt among baseball men from the very start as to whether he would win in the major leagues, and their skepticism recently was borne out when the 19-year-old nothing-baller was shunted off to Toledo of the American Association.

He may come back into the majors again some day because he is young and big and strong, but it is unlikely that he will ever stick around long. He seems destined to be a chronic bush leaguer, and not the first of his breed either.

Hutchinson admittedly has neither a curve nor a fast ball. He relies on control, which has deserted him, and on his gameness, which can carry you just so far. After that you'd better have some talent. He could get by at Seattle, with only a grimace and a prayer, but will need considerable more than that against major league lineups, and he probably will never have what it takes.

The trouble with poor Hutch is that he hasn't got the groundwork upon which to build— no speed and no curve. In the majors control isn't enough for a rookie, although with that alone he won 22 games for Seattle last season in his first year of professional baseball, proving again the wide difference between the fastest minors and the majors.

A sharp contrast to Hutch's predicament is offered by the case of Bob Feller. He too lacked control when he came up to the Cleveland Indians three years ago. But Feller really could zing the ball in there. For all anybody can tell about him he may pitch the fastest ball ever seen, faster even than Walter Johnson at the latter's best. With that speed as the basis, he has turned into potentially one of the greatest pitchers of all time.

Feller has been busy acquiring control and a curve, a not too difficult task because of his speed, and finally will wind up with everything a great pitcher needs apparently. Hutch lacks all that, and even if he gets control back at Toledo it won't be enough to get him by in the majors. Occasionally there has been a pitcher with little more than control on the ball but invariably he is some cute oldtimer who has spent years learning his trade.

Of course, Hutch can spoil all this by doing the well nigh impossible, which would be to come bouncing back from Toledo to pitch winning baseball for the Tigers in spite of his shortcomings. But it is highly improbable that he ever will be able to make the grade, and you wonder then how the Tigers ever came to lay out all that money for him.

It just so happens that several scouts who had looked him over promptly turned him down, despite his great record in the Coast league. But a few clubs wanted him, the Tigers made the highest bid, so Toledo gets a pitcher from Seattle.

Experts Believe Brown Gelding Will Win Over Slow of Fast Track

NO SIZZLING TRIALS

Archworth Drops in Estimation of "Clockers" after Last Workout

(By Foster Barclay Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—Over either a fast or muddy track, Harry Giddings' Sea General, a big brown gelding, was called today to pace a field of about 13 thoroughbreds past the judge's stand in the 80th running of the King's Plate here Monday.

Nearly everybody who has watched the chunky son of Marina being put through soon-after-workouts, concede Sea General is the horse to lick in the battle for the King's 50 guineas and the biggest slice of a $10,000 added purse. He's big and powerful and razor sharp.

After ruling favorite throughout the winter and most of the spring training grind, Archworth, a colt owned by C. George McCullagh suddenly dropped in favor. Those who were unable to choose between the colt and gelding, placed their support firmly behind the General.

No Sizzling Trials

Sea General hasn't reeled of any sizzling trials. It's the manner he worked early morning tests. He has been tested over the 1 1-8 miles Plate distance and cooled out to the satisfaction of stable hands and Giddings.

Archworth began to drop in estimation after he startled clockers and railbirds by stepping two fast trials. He galloped over six furlongs in 1.12 3-5 and then came back a few days later to turn in a handy 1.57 2-5 for the nine furlongs, covering the final furlong in 12 seconds.

Belief of some veterans that mark Cowell had brought the colt to form too soon seemed borne out when the colt was brought out for a mile speed test. He showed early speed and covered the distance in 1.42 2-5. He was beginning to flatten out in the final furlong and jockey Denney Birley was pushing him to keep him going. He galloped out nine furlongs and was pulled up all out. That's when the sentiment began to switch heavily to Sea General.

J. E. Smallman's Milius, slightly favored, lost support when he showed a dismal 1.48 3-5 for a mile. He had been working faithfully under the watchful eyes of Leo Woodstock and the reversal of form was unexpected.

ORIOLES NEARING TOP OF LEAGUE

Given Boost up Ladder by Defeating Toronto in Twin Bill

By the Associated Press

Rogers Hornsby, manager of the practically unrecognizable Baltimore Orioles of the International League, after serving as coach and pinch-hitter in 1938, signed to pilot the club at the end of last season.

Immediately the "Rajah" and General Manager Jack Ogden went to work on the job of rebuilding the team. You'd hardly know last year's tail-end team up there today, half a game behind the league-leading Jersey City Giants.

Jim Reminger's five-hit pitching against Toronto Maple Leafs yesterday was responsible for the Orioles jumping from fourth to second. Jim downed the Leafs, 5-1, in the last half of a doubleheader after Jack Tising and Gene Davis had combined to take the opener, 4-3. Tising pitched one-hit ball for six innings and got credit for the victory.

Rochester Red Wings, meanwhile stuck close to the leaders as they finished seven innings of a so-called "twilight" game in a 3-3 tie with Jersey City.

The heaviest shelling of the day occurred at Montreal, where the Royals were ahead, 13-10, after eight innings, at which point the game was called to permit Syracuse Chiefs to catch a train. They probably were glad to get away, too, for by that time they'd seen Lindsay Deal, the Royal's centre fielder, clout a home run with the bases loaded and right fielder Art Parks hit his eighth four-bagger of the year, with two men on.

Newark Bears and Buffalo matched ninth-inning rallies in the other game, with the Bisons coming out on top, 6-5.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

We notice in the various changes of playing and scoring rules for baseball, where the old illegal practices have been made legal, such as pitchers standing with one foot behind the rubber, the rule makers only went half way in their recent endorsements. There are several old rules which have never been actually lived up to and enforced by umpires or league heads. For instance what about batters shepping out of their box, stopping the game of their own violation, without permission of the umpires? what about batters stepping out of his box without authority? And how about catchers blocking the base paths in direct violation of the rules on interference?

The rule book is supposed to be the court of last resort and if such rules exist they should be enforced. If the rules are found wanting — toss 'em out, either enforce them or change them. Incidentally President Lorne McDougall, of the Bay of Quinte League, instructed his league umpires last night that he expected them to conduct all games with dignity and added he wanted the games speeded up. "There is nothing that will discourage the fans any more than a slow draggy ball game," explained President McDougall.

Although our knowledge of greyhound racing is somewhat limited, we understand the whippets are to race here in Belleville on May 31st, under floodlights. Chairman Billie Woodley, of the Parks Commission, was recently approached by representatives of the Eastern Canada Greyhound Racing relative to the possibilities of holding whippet races at the Fair Grounds. It seems the promoters have some 50 greyhounds stationed at Cobourg, all of which were shipped to Canada from Florida after a winter of racing down where the south winds blow the year around, hurdles, as well as the conventional flat racing will be included on the night's program, Chairman Woodley stated today. Insomuch as greyhound racing is something new in these parts, no doubt the novelty will prove popular, especially as the races will be conducted beneath powerful floodlights. We hope to have more information of the matter later.

President Lorne McDougall, of the Bay of Quinte League added the names of three more umpires to the league staff when the league arbiters met at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. The additional names included Cronje Adams, a veteran umpire from Brighton, Alex Weir, former Belleville ball hawk and your correspondent. Incidentally Mr. Adams and your columnist were named by Sqd.-Ldr. Van Vleit as the R.C.A.F. umpires pro tem. No doubt the two umpires for the opening league game of Napanee at Belleville on Monday morning next will be "Mag" Loucks of Napanee at the plate and Don Thomas on the bases.

Yesterday's release of the Bay of Quinte League schedule by Secretary Lynn Crossman finds 36 games to be played during the season, each club having nine home and the same number away games. The league opens with Napanee at Belleville and closes on Aug. 10th with the new entry, the R.C.A.F. "Flyers" at Belleville to be followed by the league play-offs.

A galaxy of colors in kaleidescopic wonder will welcome local softball fans when the mushballers" push off next week. Every team in the local league has been equipped with new sweaters of the most gaudy colorings. Leading, we'd imagine, are the Dracup's outfit of yellow, red and black, others are red, white and blue (no connection with the Royal visit), scarlet and white silken shirts will bedeck the Citizen's Dairy juniors. The entire ensemble of all clubs' sweaters are on display in "Red" Townsend's sports store window and a more flashy display of colorings has seldom been seen locally. While on the subject of softball we hear the juniors trounced the 'Oilers' the other night and just after Frank Sedore's squad had made Chuck Barriage's pets eat humble pie. Judging from the result of the pre-season games it looks as though the "mushball" race will be much closer than was at first anticipated. President Clem Bowler has had the Coleman Flats diamond completely groomed and in readiness for the opening.

One of the most progressive moves in the recent annals of water activities and sailing in this historic home of ships and ship's crews was undertaken last evening at the regular meeting of the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club with the proposal of District Scout Commissioner B. C. Sisler, manager of the Belleville branch of the Dominion Bank that a Sea Scout Corps be formed in Belleville.

Mr. Sisler received enthusiastic support of all members of the club who looked upon the formation of the Corps as a progressive step for junior residents of the city. To this end, in an effort to assist the immediate formation of such a Corps, the full facilities of the club has been extended Mr. Sisler and his associates, together with the use of the club house at any time needed for either meetings or regular practice periods.

In hearty support were Alderman Laurie Lewis, and Alderman Harry Rollins, well known for their interest in juvenile activities in Belleville, who moved and seconded that the South End Club accept the suggestion of Mr. Sisler that such a Corps be formed and that all facilities of the club be made available to the Scouts.

The progress of the meeting last evening and the suggestion of Mr. Sisler appears in a news article elsewhere in this issue. But it may be pointed out that the Sea Scouts Corps will be open to all boys of good character between the ages of seven and seventeen. Older boys may form their own Rover Club for extended activity upon the water.

The suggestion of Mr. Sisler appears to be a good one. Belleville has for generations been the home of good ships and better sailors. In past years this ancient sport has been neglected, and with the formation of an active, clean working club such as the Sea Scouts, immediate revival of all forms of sailing will follow, it is this column's belief. In the words Maurice Callaghan, president of Yacht Club, who is heartily in favor of the Corps formation. "It is just what is needed for our younger boys of Belleville who are at loose ends around the water, and who have in the past been unable to get together in this matter. I am happy to be able to assist in any manner I can," announced Prexy Callaghan. Also willing to assist in the formation of this boys' club is Mr. Chas. Jeffs, one-time Sea Scout of the English coast, and secretary of the South End Club.

All boys desirous of joining this organization are advised to apply in person to Mr. Sisler at the local Dominion Bank. Responsible citizens, who wish to assist and foster this move are also urged to communicate with him. With the facilities of the South End Club house now available, the path has been paved for immediate work in organization.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the summer sailing schedule of the South End Club. Races will be held weekly this year again, but it is the considered opinion of this column that such weekly races are too frequent, and that much interest is lost through the weekly repetition. It has been proposed that races be held on alternate Wednesday afternoons and Sundays. But at the meeting last evening the majority of the older sailors were in favor of the weekly race. Why, it was not discovered The club this year will hold a special regatta on August 7th off Massassaga Point in conjunction with the speed races being held under the auspices of the Belleville Rotary Club and will assist the Rotary in the holding of this event. That is real co-operation as asked for by Rotary president "Mac" Haig at last evening's gabfest of sailors and civies.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

3 CENT TARIFF ON CATTLE RESTORED

Buffalo, N.Y., May 18 (AP)—The regular tariff of three cents a pound on Canadian cattle has been restored, Customs Collector Martin Bement said today, in the expectation that the quarterly quota of 51,720 head soon will be filled.

The tariff was reduced to 1½ cents a pound April 1 under the reciprocal trade agreement. Bement said importers sending cattle to the Buffalo market would receive a rebate if their shipments were ruled within the quota.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 18 (AP)—A series of intermittent selling sorties blocked a modest rally in stocks today, making prices uneven.

After a slightly higher opening, transactions slowed to a minimum, but leaders retained their small gains. Then, near the final hour, offerings drove many quotations below their previous closings. Transfers were about 350,000 shares.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 18.— (CP)— Toronto stock listings trailed London and New York for narrow gains in the early session today and dropped most of them in the dull afternoon tempo. The close found prices just about where they closed on Wednesday except for a slightly better level for the golds. Volume around 240,000 shares was slightly better than in the previous session.

The weight of changes in the Steel, Food and miscellaneous industrial groups was on the up side at early afternoon and with exception of Smelters, Base Metal leaders were generally strong. Smelters eased off to 38 3-4, a new low for the year. Gold shares harbor minor gains for Kerr-Addison, Reno, MacLeod-Cockshutt and Kirkland Lake. Lake Shore was up 1-2 to a point.

MANY THOUSANDS

duced a mouth-organ and led six men and four women through the singing of "Annie Laurie".

"It's for the Queen," he shouted. "Come on, join in."

Small periscopes, brought along to afford a better view of the procession, appeared early. Cameras were everywhere. Many people carried newspaper photographs of the Royal couple, presumably for first-hand comparison.

First official arrivals at the station were Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The "Mounties" lined up, received instructions and separated. Several patrolled each section of the long platform. An underground passage leads from the tracks to the station proper.

Thick Red Carpet.

At one end of a brick express shed officials placed a thick red carpet over which their Majesties were to walk to their car a few yards away instead of through the underground passage. A long banner bore the message in silver letters: "God Save The King." A group of "Mounties" went on duty and received a cheer.

Dozens of youngsters congregated behind a gate leading to the railway tracks. It was directly opposite the spot chosen for their Majesties to detrain. They paid no heed to a policeman who said the Royal train would block their view. Five hundred members of the fraternal society, Sons of Italy, had a choice spot outside the station.

Officials closed all station doors to the general public immediately after departure of the last regular morning train to Quebec.

Children Carry Flags

Children carried small Union Jacks, tri-colors or papal flags. One little girl had a "super-super" turnout. She carried a flag, had her coat lapels covered with badges bearing pictures of their Majesties and wore a red, white and blue ribbon in her hair.

There were many Priests and black-robed members of Roman Catholic teaching orders in the incoming crowds.

May 24 Holiday For All Schools

Victoria Day, Wednesday, May 24th, is a statutory holiday and will be observed as such by all schools, Inspector H. J. Clarke, added to a statement today in which he declared that all public schools of the city and district will be closed on that date.

Monday, May 22nd, is a civic holiday, declared by the Mayor, Mr. Clarke stated, and as such city schools will be closed on that date. Schools outside the city however, are subject to the decisions of their various boards of trustees regarding the declaring of a holiday on this date, although it is understood that the majority of the schools in rural districts will close.

Empire Day, celebrated the last school day before the Victoria Day holiday will be observed in school this year Mr. Clarke said. Pupils will holiday on Monday and on Wednesday but on Tuesday will return to their classrooms for the observation of Empire Day celebrations.

POPE TAKES OVER DIOCESAN CHURCH

He Prays to Virgin to Preserve Peace on Earth

Rome, May 18 (AP)—Pope Pius, as Bishop of Rome, took formal possessin f his Diocesan Church of St. JJJohn Lateran today with an invocation to the Virgin to preserve peace on earth.

As the Pontiff was borne to the balcony to bless the multitude in the bright sunshine outside the Basilica at the end of a magnificent, four-hour ceremony, the choir intoned a hymn to the Blessed Virgin in accordance with his wish that prayers be offered to her during this month to spare the world from war.

The ceremonies, the first of their kind since 1846, included an evidence of friendly relations existing between the Italian Government and the Vatican.

Italian troops massed outside the Basilica, exchanged military honors with the Pope's Palatine Guardsmen and military bands played a hymn, the Royal March and Giovanezza, the Fascist air.

Trying to Persuade Russia

Every effort is being made to persuade Russia to accept the British plan which calls for an immediate declaration by Moscow that the Red Army would be sent to the assistance of Poland and Rumania if either country requested it and if Britain and France actually went to war as a result of their pledges to those two countries.

However, if Russia stands adamant in favor of a military alliance, it wouldn't surprise diplomatic observers here if Britain agreed. Meanwhile, negotiations between London and Moscow are proceeding on the British plans and its modifications.

It is understood that during the last few days Britain's military leaders have changed their views on Russian military assistance. They now believe, it is reported, that Russia could fill an important role in Eastern Europe in defeating any aggressive thrust against Poland and Rumania, particularly in view of the Soviet's unlimited manpower.

There are two other reasons why a military alliance may result in the end: 1. Pressure from France, which already has an alliance with Russia, and 2. Changing views in Britain regarding Spain and Japan.

MRS. JAS. FORD GIVEN LIFE MEMBERSHIP IN U. C. BIBLE SOCIETY

Life membership in the Upper Canada Bible Society, Belleville branch was given at their meeting held here last Sunday to Mrs. James Ford, widow of the late James Ford, former editor of the Belleville Intelligencer, and not to Mr. Gordon Ford as was formerly reported.

The Rev. A. L. Geen was elected as Honorary-President at the meeting.

R.C.M.P. CONSTABLE IN POSITION OF HONOR WAS BORN AT COE HILL

Six stalwart "Mounties" chosen from various detachments in the Dominion will act as riders and guards for Their Majesties, when they drive about Ottawa in the traditional Royal coach and horses.

Among the husky redcoated policemen will be Constable E. E. Muffitt, of Coe Hill.

Constable Muffitt, has spent three years in the R.C.M.P. service in the Arctic regions and this year "came out" for the traditional year's rest. He will return to his post on the northern regions at the expiration of his "holiday."

Brockville Prepares To Welcome King

Brockville, Ont., May 18 (CP)—Disappointed when a scheduled 10-minute royal visit to Brockville was cancelled last week, the city is preparing to welcome the King and Queen anyway.

Civic and other officials are proceeding on the assumption the royal train will not merely slow down and pass Brockville without stopping late Sunday afternoon. They hope it will stop for a change of engineers and train crews as it enters the Belleville Division of Canadian National Railways.

Proceeding on this assumption, they have made the Union Station gay with flags, bunting and other decorations. Arrangements have been made for school children to mass there at the arrival of the train. A Highland Pipe Band is also to be in attendance and a platform is to be erected adjacent to the tracks.

The city hopes the King and Queen will descend from the train and occupy the platform. But there is no official guarantee that Their Majesties will depart from their schedule to such an extent.

FAVORABLE COMMENT HEARD ON APPEARANCE OF AIRPORT BAND

In communication with the Ontario Intelligencer from Ottawa last evening, Mr. C. A. Cameron, whose efforts to have a stop of the Royal train made here on Sunday evening, and a personal appearance of Their Majesties at the North Station of the Canadian National Railways are explained in another column of this paper, commented upon the fine appearance of the Royal Canadian Air Force band from the Trenton base, and the Trenton detachment of the R.C.A.F. in Ottawa this week. High tribute has been paid the officers and men of the band, and detachmen, and their trim appearance compares most favorably with other crack soldiers from well known Canadian regiments now in Ottawa, it was stated.

HOPE OF FINDING BODIES OF DROWNED MEN DIMINISHES

Hope for the recovery of the bodies of Andrew Goodwin, 50 and James Miller, 24, Picton residents believed drowned when their eighteen-foot skiff capsized in Lake Ontario, two miles off Waupoos, Prince Edward County, a few days ago, is gradually diminishing as the eleventh day of search ended futilely yesterday.

The water and shoreline within a large radius of the scene of the fatality have been diligently searched by fishermen and parties of private citizens, police and others. A Royal Air Force plane failed to locate any sign of the missing men when it scoured the vicinity last week.

A reward of $25.00 has been posted by relatives of Miller for recovery of his body.

Belleville Police Pick Up 11-Year-Old Runaway Toronto Boy

Enroute to Montreal, where he said he was to get a job "begging", eleven-year-old Lewis Harrison of Toronto, was taken into custody in Belleville early today and held for Toronto police. The lad had run away from home.

Young Harrison, who had the misfortune to lose an arm in an accident some months ago, was being taken to Montreal by an unknown man, who escaped police here. Harrison today informed Chief Kidd he had met a stranger in Toronto, who told him it was "easy pickings" in Montreal in the begging racket, especially for so young a lad with only one arm. Young Harrison was enroute to Montreal, riding C.N.R. freight trains, when apprehended. The man with whom the lad was travelling disappeared upon the arrival of police however.

Another Boy Picked-up

Charles Bulpit, another teen-aged lad who recently escaped from the Boys' Training School at Bowmanville, was captured yesterday and is being held in Belleville pending the arrival of Bowmanville school authorities.

Police Blotter

After acting rather suspiciously while carrying a large grain sack, George Ricard, Montreal transient was stopped by city police for questioning this morning. The result of the investigation subsequently found Ricard arraigned in County Police Court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., at the Court House, on a charge of theft. Ricard was remanded for a week.

When the grain sack was searched it was found to contain two pairs of new overalls, two pairs of shoes, one rear vision mirror and two pairs of gloves. At first Ricard stated he found the bag of goods along the roadside on the second concession of Thurlow. Later Provincial Constable W. E. Smith ascertained the articles were the property of Robert Emerson, Thurlow farmer, and had been stolen this morning.

A teen-aged youth who gave the name of Frank Mullins, Montreal, was in company with Ricard, but later turned over to custody of Inspector Ruston of the C.A.S.

Inspector Herb McCabe, of the Games and Fisheries Department, presented a charge of trading in furs, without a licence, against Harry Yanover of this city. A week's enlargement was granted when Inspector McCabe informed His Worship that the accused man had requested a postponement.

Thomas Irwin, Thurlow, appeared on a charge of reckless driving. J. Goodman, local barrister appeared for the accused man and was granted a week's enlargement.

"Where is this man's driving permit?" asked Magistrate Butler before granting the request for a postponement.

"He hasn't got one", replied Mr. Goodman.

"I might say there are two other charges to be preferred by the city police," revealed Crown Attorney B.O. Donnan, K.C., as Irwin was released on the understanding to appear as charged on May 25th.

In yesterday's police court held at Picton, a resident of this city was convicted of an assault charge and fined $5.00 and costs. He was charged with assaulting Provincial Constable A. A. Stark.

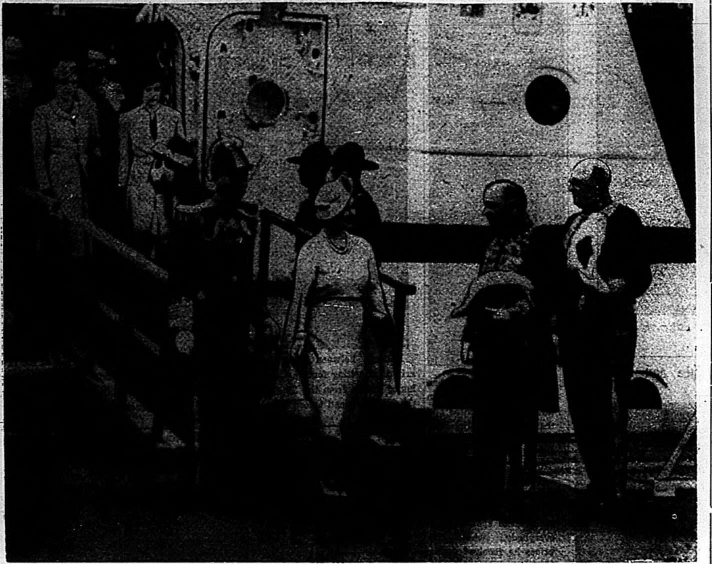
First British Sovereigns Touch Canadian Soil [illegible] Wolfe's Cove

HIS MAJESTY ARRIVES ON CANADIAN SOIL



The King made history as he put foot on Canadian soil, the first British monarch to visit the North American continent. The King came down the flag-draped gangplank in the full dress uniform of an admiral of the fleet. With him was his Queen, a gracious, smiling lady in simple pearl gray ensemble, with a long fox fur. The first person to meet them, bringing Canada's official greeting, was Prime Minister Mackenzie King (RIGHT).

Their [illegible]sties Drive to Chateau Frontenac

Followed by a police escort Their Majesties are shown as the royal procession drove to their suite at the Chateau Frontenac after the official reception at the Parliament Buildings, Quebec.

Welcome

Thunderous applause welled up from the hills surrounding Wolfe's Cove as Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth walked from the Empress of Australia accompanied by Canada's Prime Minister Mackenzie King, a few short seconds after they stepped on Canadian soil for the first time. The royal ceremonies commenced a few minutes after this photograph was taken and were carried through without delay.

Swedish Flyer Feared Lost

Smiling cheerily and waving at newsmen, Carl Backman, 25-year-old Swedish aviator, is seen as he set out for Newfoundland, starting point of what he hoped would be a non-stop flight to Stockholm, capital of his native land. He was flying a single-motored monoplane, capable of 110 miles per hour, but without a radio. When it was believed his gas supply would be exhausted he was still unreported and it was feared he had been forced down in the ocean.

He's Not Happy

Catching a fish like this one would set most fishermen talking for months and that's just what Jim Peck started doing. Jim was on the relief roles of New York's Jefferson county, but when he caught a 240 pound sturgeon in the Thousand Island channels his favorite spot, he told everybody what fine prices he received for it. Next time he went for his relief cheque he was told to "catch some more fish."

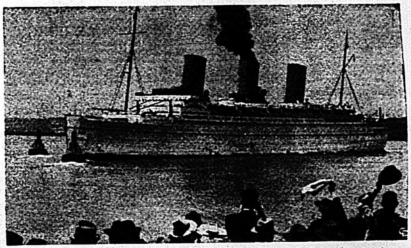
He gave no reasons for quitting as coach in Peterborough.

Reviewing The Guard of Honor

Passing between long busby-topped lines, King George VI, in one of his first acts after setting foot on Canadian soil at Wolfe's Cove, reviewed the guard of honor drawn from the 22nd Regiment of Regulars. Immediately after the review the King rejoined Queen Elizabeth to continue on to Quebec City

Sailing to be Prepared for King and Queen



While King George and Queen Elizabeth were being tumultously welcomed on Canadian shores, many were busy already with the return trip to England. Here the Empress of Britain is seen as it nosed its way out of New York harbor on the way to Southampton, where it will be over-hauled and refitted, and then return to North American shores to take aboard their majesties at Halifax for the return to England.

Water for Their Majesties' Use To Be Carefully Safeguarded

TOP: Safety and luxury feature the train to be used by Their Majesties in Canada.

BELOW: One of the filtering processes to be used in purifying water for the Royal party.

Travelers who have experienced the discomfort caused by differences in drinking water, even when it was pure, will appreciate the precautions that have been taken in behalf of their Majesties on their trip through Canada and the United States.

From the time King George and Queen Elizabeth arrive in Quebec until they depart from Halifax a month later, every drop of water used for their cooking and drinking will be supplied by plants of Canada Dry Ginger Ale Limited along their route. Even at official functions, such as those planned at Ottawa and Washington, only the special water from the beverage plants will be served to Their Majesties.

The purpose of this is not only to prevent all possibility of contaminated water from reaching the Royal couple, but also to ensure that the water will be of uniform alkalinity throughout the trip. The mineral content of water varies widely in different parts of the country, and it is this variation that often causes travelers to experience discomfort or even illness.

In acting to prevent this, health officials were faced with the identical problem that had been solved long before by the beverage company—that of maintaining purity and uniformity in all parts of the country despite variations in the water available. In supplying water for Their Majesties, therefore, Canada Dry is simply delivering to them the same water that it uses in making beverages, water processed to ensure uniform purity and alkalinity, under supervision of the company's staff chemists.

After water has had its sediment removed by settling hastened by chemical action, has been filtered under pressure and has been irradiated by powerful ultra-violet lamps it will be drawn off in sterilized gallon bottles, and rushed by express to Their Majesties' train. Sixty gallons a day, it is estimated, will be needed, and this water will come from plants in Montreal, Toronto, and Winnipeg, as well as in the United States when the Royal couple travel there.

Montreal, May 18—(CP)— First arrival at Park Avenue Station to await the coming of Their Majesties was Mrs. J. Morin, a cripple. Railway officials found her sitting on a stool at 6 a.m. EDT when they came on duty. English by birth, she was determined to see the King and Queen and left her home at nearby Outremont an hour previously to walk to the station. Both her legs were encased in plaster-of-paris.

Informal Political Twosome

To vary the usual presentation of grave faces worn by politicians and statesmen in these troubled times, here are Leon Blum, Socialist ex-premier of France, and Winston Churchill, pictured at the latter's home at Westerham, Kent. Blum pays the former British cabinet minister frequent visits for informal political talks.

HUMANS

The room is kept cold so that when the ice is removed they stay cool like a bear in his winter cave. They are kept thus for five days. At the end they are awakened by hot coffee, or warm applications. They arouse smiling, as if form sleep, and with no memory of what has happened different from completely dreamless sleep.

During the "hibernation" the pulse beat disappears. Only the electrocardiograph shows the heart is still beating. Their kidneys stop. Bowels and apparently all digestive works stop. But this, ordinarily a signal of approaching death, seems of no danger, because at the same time analysis of the blood shows it has ceased to fill up with waste products. There is nothing to eliminate.

Metabolism slows down 10 to 20 per cent. They should die of pneumonia but not one has ever shown a sign of pneumonia.

Speculating medical watchers say this is a new tool in the history of science. They say it ought to give the heart a complete rest, and so perhaps prolong life.

They point to the recent sensational treatments for insanity through insulin and camphor shock. There the patient sinks into a deep coma close to death and coma seems to be the cause of improvement. Here, the speculating doctors say, is a coma safer, longer and apparently more restful, for insanity.

PURPOSE OF VISIT

State, senior member of the Roosevelt cabinet.

No Press Conference.

There will be no press conference, he said. When a correspondent suggested that perhaps his Majesty might like to hold one, Sir Ronald replied, "I don't think so".

He said the King would not make any speeches here but would pronounce a short toast at the state dinner at the White House.

The ambassador cited history to explain why the King and Queen would be received in the Rotunda of Congress and not go into the Senate or House halls.

"The King cannot go to his own parliament except under very carefully laid down rules," he said. "This is owing to certain incidents in history of which you know. The parliament does not seem to have forgotten them.

"Because of the same sort of analogy, the King is hesitant about paying visits to other parliaments in an official manner."

Bowing To the King.

Asked whether American men should bow from the waist, Sir Ronald replied:

"I think they might do what I do when I meet the President. I behave in a suitable and respectful manner. I would certainly give a bow. Whether it comes from my waist or not, I don't know."

TWO SKELETONS FOUND IN ORILLIA

Bones Found on Surface of Ground Under Floor Boards of Shed

Orillia, Ont., May 18 (CP)—Two skeletons, one a man, the other a woman of approximately 55, were found today by workmen engaged in tearing down an ancient wooden shed near the town's main street. The bodies had not been buried and were found on the surface of the ground just under the floor boards of the shed, constructed prior to 1886.

Police Chief William Carson said the skeletons might be those of Indians but the possibility of their being white persons was suggested through finding of the remains of a woman's shoe and belt buckle beside the bones.

Belleville Sea Scout Corps Promised Yacht Club Support

B. C. Sisler, Prime Mover for Formation of Corps in This District

NO BOATS NECESSARY

Formation of a Belleville Sea Scout Corps, to be an affiliate of the existing Belleville and district Boy Scout Troop will be undertaken at once it was decided at a special meeting of sailors, boat owners and interested citizens at the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club rooms last evening following enthusiastic support of this movement suggested by District Scout Commissioner B. C. Sisler, manager of the local branch of the Dominion Bank.

Full facilities of the club house will be available for the Corps and every assistance will be given in the organization of this important adjunct to juvenile activities in the city, it was promised by president Maurice Callaghan of the club, and members.

"Belleville, blessed with such an excellent water front, and long as the home of good ships and sailors, provides one of the most ideal locations on the lakes for the formation of a Sea Scout Corps," declared Mr. Sisler in supporting this move. "It would be a crime not to have such a worthwhile organization here for our boys."

Simple Qualifications

"All boys of good character residing in the city between the ages of seven and seventeen are potential members of this Corps, and the movement is not to make a lot of sailors out of the lads, but to give them a club or association which would provide a healthy outlet for the 'steam' which boys must let off in one channel or another," spoke Mr. Sisler, who has been actively identified with scouting for many years in other centres of the province. "Not even a boat is necessary for this association. All we need is a place to meet and proper coaches or supervisors to teach them the rudiments of clean sport.

The Corps would be made up of four patrols or so, with each patrol numbering some six boys, it was further explained. Uniforms could be purchased piece by piece by the boys, and later if conditions warrant the possibility is entertained of a boat with which to enjoy regular short cruises.

"Once we get this thing started the difficulty will not be to find enough boys to keep it going, but rather our trouble will be in selecting the right boys for the Corps," explained Mr. Sisler.

Sea Cadets have been tried in Belleville in the past, but this is an entirely different organization, it was declared. This has the backing of other important Corps in the Province, and well qualified officials from Toronto will be available for the assistance needed in organizing.

Hearty approval of the movement was given by Alderman Laurie Lewis and Alderman Harry Rollins, present at the meeting, who moved and seconded a motion that the Belleville Athletic and Yachting Club act on the suggestion of the Corps' formation as made by Mr. Sisler and that the club house be available for this purpose.

"We will be happy to do anything we can to help this along," promised president Maurice Callaghan, president of the club.

Boys or parents desiring further information on this matter are advised to consult with Mr. Sisler at the local branch of the Dominion Bank.

SCHOOL CHILDREN

as Mayor Pitt presented his speech of welcome, inscribed on parchment.

On the dais, reached by a drawbridge that led from the platform of the train almost to the street, the Queen made a graceful gesture. As the crowd cheered and cheered, the Queen waved and smiled as the King, looking more rested than yesterday, saluted time after time. But her back still was to the greater part of the crowd, so she motioned the officials to stand the other way that she could see the crowd more freely. The crowd responded with a great roar as they obtained a perfect view of Her Majesty.

Their Majesties were accompanied here by the Prime Minister and Premier Maurice Duplessis, whose home city is Three Rivers.

Cheers Are Continuous

Only for seconds did the crowd take a breath long enough to silence the continuous cheers. There was a continual din of human voices from the time of the arrival until the royal train disappeared in the distance, the royal couple still on the rear observation platform, the King with his right hand at salute, and the Queen, still smiling and waving.

A guard of honor of 200 members of the Three Rivers' Tank Regiment —four companies in all—under Lieut.-Col. H. J. Keeting, with their band, was drawn up near the special stand erected at the station.

The King stopped for the quarter-hour in an industrial stronghold of French-Canada. From this town, erroneously named Three Rivers because its founders thought two branches of the St. Maurice River flowing into the St. Lawrence were separate rivers, Marquette and Joliet sailed to discover the Mississippi in 1673 and to make their historic discoveries in what is now the Canadian West.

Crowds At Station

Today was Ascension Day and its coincidence with the King's visit to this strongly Roman Catholic centre made it an occasion for double rejoicing. At the large St. Joseph's Seminary, Mass was celebrated at eight o'clock and then the 450 pupils with their 40 teachers, proceeded to the station.

Loud cheers rose from the crowds as the pilot train, bearing newsmen, photographers and officials passed through the station at 11.18 E.D.T. bound for Montreal.

Staff writers of The Canadian Press aboard the train reported that at every hamlet and town between here and Quebec hundreds waited for the royal train.

KING AND QUEEN

The pilot train, bearing newspapermen, photographers, railway officers and other officials, preceded the royal train by a half-hour.

Prime Minister King, Premier Duplessis and the Lieutenant-Governor had been at the station entrance to meet the King and Queen on their arrival from the citadel where they had spent the night in the quarters of Canada's Governor-General.

Cheering crowds lined a two-mile-route over which their Majesties were driven under escort of provincial traffic officers mounted on motorcycles.

Inspected Guard.

Before entering the station with her Majesty, the King inspected a guard of honor. While he did, the Queen stood chatting with Lieutenant-Governor Patenaude, and smiling and waving to a farewell throng about the station grounds.

The King wore the undress uniform of the Admiral of the Fleet and her Majesty a suit of a powder blue shade.

Despite a chill wind, they rode in an open automobile from the old fortress to the station.

A military band played "God Save the King" as the King and Queen arrived at the station. After the King's inspection of the guard, as their Majesties entered the station building, resounding cheers went up.

The departure of the Royal couple two minutes behind schedule, was carried out one hour less than a full day after their landing at historic Wolfe's Cove, spot where 180 years ago another historic landing led to placing of Canada's destiny in British hands.

King and Queen Wave to Crowd.

The large crowd, cheering and shouting "Vive le Roi et la Reine" swept around the station building and to the tracks as the Royal train started.

King George and Queen Elizabeth stood waving on the observation platform as the train rolled away. Her Majesty raised her hand to Lieutenant-Governor Patenaude and Mrs. Patenaude standing back on the station platform.

FARMERS FEAR FROST DAMAGE

Rapidly lowering thermometers caused farmers of the district to gaze with speculative eyes at thermometers this morning. With the mercury hovering around the thirty-six mark, four degrees above freezing, some apprehension was felt by agriculturists regarding possible frost.

No damage had been done in the rural districts as far as could be ascertained today.

Frost at this time of the year would be particularly disastrous, district farmers stated today. [illegible] grains, now showing promise of good crops, plants in cold-beds and other young greens are too tender thus far to ward off any attempts of Jack Frost should he decide to pay the district a visit.

Hidden Nest Holding Two Fledgelings of Mourning Dove Found

Rarer than a nice day in May, a nest of the beautiful mourning dove containing two fledgelings, was discovered this week in a pine grove on the farm of Ralph Grimmon, Black Creek, by Leslie Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Martin, 214 Church Street.

Martin was attracted by the sound of gentle fluttering of a bird's wings, as the mother of the two little doves endeavored to draw him away from the nest. Interest quickened he investigated the immediate vicinity and discovered the nest, one of the first to be found in this district for many years.

The Mourning Dove, commonly called the Wild Pigeon, is a very beautiful and graceful bird, slightly larger than a robin, and mourning grey in color. They are usually seen in pairs and small flocks, and are very shy in habit.

Over the Line

By RUBY H. MARTYN

Rolfe Knapp's muscles were tiring. This was the first day he had worked in the woods, and the exhilaration with which he had commenced to swing his axe began to ebb away in physical discomfort as the hours wore on. After the first dead pine crashed down he had rushed to fell the next doomed tree, and when Jack Arnold hailed him, several hours later, Rolfe paused, flushed and spent amid an unpleasant tangle of the hacked and broken branches.

"Heard the axe and came up to see what you were doing!" cried Jack. "Easy for you to get over on to our land along here!"

Cold as the winter day was, Rolfe wiped his sweating face.

"I don't think I have got over the line," he returned uncomfortably.

This wasn't the first time that Jack Arnold's air of scorn had disturbed him. Jack hadn't hesitated to make him appear at a disadvantage before Nora. More than once he had made Rolfe's ignorance of country ways seem ridiculous to her. More than once he had made game of the young farmer's mistakes when she was by to hear.

"Why don't you get a cross cut saw for the job?" demanded Jack, striking an attitude of superiority.

Tired as his muscles were, Rolfe meant to chop his way out of this barricade of fallen trees before the day was done. The jaggedly hacked high stumps silently rebuked a boyish voice.

Rolfe welcomed the lad with a laughing groan that betrayed his aching shoulder. Rolfe was thankful that he had managed to clear away some of the barricade of fallen trees before this boy came.

"I'm a good man for the other end of a cross-cut saw," declared Buddy, pausing with his overwhelming shoulder load.

"I suppose Jack Arnold's been spouting around your place," said Rolfe, bitterly.

"You said it" returned Buddy with disgust. "That's what got a rise out of me. Said he had you guessing whether you'd got over onto his father's land, too!"

"He'll get over the line himself sometime!" threatened Rolfe grimly.

"You said it," repeated the loyal lad. "He shoots off his mouth too much to suit me!"

Buddy was strong and his heart was brave. The little dead branches of the fallen pines crackled and snapped under their feet as they trod to and fro. As Rolfe watched the lad's eager face a glow of gratitude neighborliness that thrust Jack Arnold into a forgotten pit.

Buddy began to croon a chopper's chanty. The saw sang to and fro in the wintry sunshine of the waning afternoon. Suddenly the teeth grated on something resistant in the wood. The unexpected rasp of it tingled and stung Rolfe's tired arms. Buddy dropped the handle at his end and wrung his hands with a cry of pain.

"Gee, but that hurt," he grinned wryly, tears welling in his eyes.

The man and boy were staring at each other when Nora joined them. Rolfe wanted to groan as he greeted her. How dear and instant was her questioning. What had happened to make them stop so suddenly? Way down home she had heard the saw singing and had come to see.

"There's something like a stone in the tree," said Buddy, excitedly. "Something must have got grown over."

Feeling was returning painfully to Rolfe's stunned arms. He reached for his axe.

"I'll split it out," he said. "Perhaps it's a treasure, hidden for the princess."

They were all breathless with excitement when the corner of an iron box was laid bare. Another blow of the axe showed its twisted end, and through a broken corner showed a glow of color.

"Jewels!" cried Nora. "They were hidden in the tree long, long ago!"

"Pirates used to come ashore along here sometimes," added Buddy. "Probably one put his loot in the tree when it was young."

Rolfe leaned on his axe while Buddy loosened the twisted box with trembling fingers. They could hear the jewels rattle inside, and an easy ring set with a glowing emerald dropped through the broken corner.

"Treasure for the princess!" said Rolfe, softly.

Nora slipped her hand under his arm. Rolfe guessed that Jack Arnold had crossed the line of her patience by ridiculing him once too often, and that she had come to him before they found the treasure. That freed her to care now! Reverently, gladly, he bared the hand he laid upon her clinging fingers.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, me and pop eating everything and ma just eating spinnitch and salad on account of being serious about reducing this week, and she said to pop, There's one woman I definitely don't like, Willyum, I mean practically to the verge of definitely disliking, and that's Bee Seltzer.

I have no special fondness for her myself, pop said, and ma said, Why, you dont know her.

I suppose that partly explains it, because I have the same feeling tords the former King Zog of Albania, pop said, and ma said, She came out in her true flying colors today. I met her while I was shopping in Hookbinders, it was just lunchtime and I was on my way to the resterant on the 5th floor, more as a matter of routine than to definitely eat anything, and Bee Seltzer said that was just where she was going, as coincidence would have it, so we took a table together and I ordered a fruit salad without dressing and Bee ordered 2 pork chops with mash potatoes and apple sauce, and a cucumber salad and rolls and butter and a gigntic peach dumpling, ma said.

And you mean to say she let you pay the entire check, what schizzler pop said, and ma said, Why no, as a matter of fact she ostentatiously offered to pay for my little fruit salad, but I indignantly refused. Just imagine, sitting there eating that enormous meal while it was perfectly obvious that I was dieting, ma said.

Yee gods, is that all you've got against her? pop said, and ma said, Certainly not, It was the smug way the scrawny thing announced that the more she ate the less she seemed able to put on an ounce of weight. Under the circumstances, Willyum, with me sitting there trying to content myself with my little fruit salad, that amounted to pure hypocracy, dont you agree with me Willyum? she said.

Pop not answering on account of being behind the sporting page coughing to keep from laughing.

THE SHOW HORSE

We believe the heavy horse judges did their best to make fair decisions at the show in Stratford the other day, but we cannot remember seeing judges at any live stock show making as unpopular a decision as was made in one class. Why was the decision unpopular? We had no means of knowing why the two animals were actually placed as they were, but we do know that the show ring type of horse is getting to be too far away from the ground. Especially is this true of the grand Scottish drafter. And we notice that the Percheron breed is inclined to follow suit. As we stated above, the farmer is interested in a horse that stands a good day's work, and is an economical feeder. The farmers around that ringside could have overlooked a few blemishes on the deep bodied horse, but they could not overlook the fact that the other horse was not nearly as well suited to practical farm usage.

In our minds those "boos" from the ringside should have been the most educational feature of the spring horse show. Every breeder and owner of pure bred horses should have heard the disapproval of that crowd of farmers. It was the only way that crowd had of telling, not only the judges but the assembled horse breeders and importers, that they want a horse that has a good body close to the ground. A horse with a bread basket that doesn't wither away after a couple of hours in heavy harness.

Yes, they had a great show of horses. It is our hope that the spectators at more horse shows may do a lot of "booing," so that in time they may put the kind of horse at the top that suits the farmer.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Rawdon

Rawdon, May 18.—Mrs. R. A. McCreary spent a day recently with her grandmother, Mrs. Frank Potts.

About forty young people gathered Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith and tendered Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Smith a noisy charivari. A jolly evening was spent and the crowd enjoyed a treat of ice cream and peanuts.

Messrs. John Bailey and Allan Bailey received word of the death of their sister, Mrs. Sarah Archer of Havelock in her 84th year. The funeral was held Monday afternoon at Havelock.

Mr. David McAdam of Havelock is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Earle McAdam.

Born at Mount Pleasant on Friday, May 12, 1939, to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Scott, a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McConnell and Betty attended the funeral of their cousin, Mrs. W. McInroy on Wednesday.

Mr. Edward Montgomery has disposed of his small farm and will have a sale in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Smith, Messrs. Angus Johnson and Burton Sharp, Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Eileen and Ormel attended a miscellaneous shower Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith.

Mrs. Oscar Irwin of Swift Current, Alta., is holidaying with relatives at Mount Pleasant and Wellman's. Her daughter Margaret has just graduated at Montreal. It is eleven years since Nellie visited in this locality.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spencer have returned home after spending several weeks with Mrs. Alfred Merrills at Meyersburg.

Mr. and Mrs. John Morrison, Alice, Mildred, Mary and Frances, Bethel, Mrs. M. Potts, Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carr and Ernest, Mrs. Clarence Chard and sons of River Valley, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw and Dwayne and Miss B. Fleming, West Huntingdon ,were among those who attended the shower at Mount Pleasant on Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith.

Mrs. Thomas Andrews received word of the death of her mother, Mrs. James Liddle, Detlor, on Saturday. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews spent a few days at Detlor and attended the funeral on Sunday of Mrs. Liddle in her eightieth year.

Mr. Howard Cooney who has been spending the past week in Toronto visiting his aunts, Mrs. D. Reddick and Mrs. G. B. Richardson, returned home on Saturday.

Mrs. Ellen Sharp spent a few days recently with her daughter, Mrs. Will Johnson.

On Tuesday evening at the conclusion of the regular meeting of Laurel Rebekah Lodge the members enjoyed a social half hour. At this time Miss Evelyn Bailey read the following address to Mrs. Herbert Smith (nee Miss Nellie Morrison) and Mrs. Retta Wilson presented the bride with a silver dish as a memento from the members. Another presentation was also made to Mrs. Cora Waller who is moving to Roseneath. A dainty lunch of cake and ice cream was served and a pleasant time spent. The address follows:

"Dear Nellie: Hearing of your recent marriage, the members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge have taken this opportunity of expressing to you our heartiest congratulations.

"We are glad you are not leaving our midst so we will be able to meet you often and still enjoy your friendship.

"Let's live each moment to the full
For though they soon are gone,
Piled up they'll make us quite a part
To build our future on.

"We have brought this gift and ask you to accept it as a more substantial expression of our esteem for you than mere words can convey. When in future you use it may it serve to remind you of the sisters of Laurel Rebekah Lodge and their continued interest in your behalf.

"Signed: Sister Retta Wilson, N.G., Sister Evelyn Bailey, Rec. Sec."

Mother's Day Service.

On Sunday morning at Mount Pleasant United Church the annual Mother's Day service was held in charge of the superintendent of the Sunday school, Mr. James Sharp. The theme was "The Glory of the Nation" with a picture of the "Royal Family at Home".

A bouquet of white trilliums graced the altar and Mrs. Merle Spencer presided at the piano. Suitable hymns, invocations and responses were given. Master John Reid read a selection entitled "There is something about a mother that a boy can't explain". Mrs. Percy Williams gave the story entitled "The Room of Gold". Miss Gladys Summers read an appropriate selection, "I Love You, Mother", showing how one child showed her love for her mother by helping with the work.

Masters Ross and Ralph Jeffs gathered the offering which will be used by the Ontario Religious Education Council to carry on its varied activities including camps for underprivileged boys and girls.

Misses Marion Rose, Lois Weaver, Marion Phillips and Ruth Rose with Mrs. Kenneth Weaver as accompanist sang "Songs of Long Ago".

Rev. J. E. Beckel based his address on the subject "The Glory of the Nation Is Its Homes" and closed with an appropriate selection, "Oh Happy Home".

Mrs. John Rapson of Belleville spent Monday with her sister, Mrs. Thomas Andrews.

Stirling

Mothers' Day took place in the Stirling Church on Sunday with Baptismal services being conducted in three churches in conjunction with Mother's Day service.

St. Paul's United Church.

At St. Paul's United Church floral decorations on the day including a memorial basket placed in the church by Mrs. Nora Wescott and Mrs. Nina Morton in honor of their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Reynolds and a small rose tree placed there by Mrs. E. Stairs and Miss Charlotte McCann in memory of their mother, the late Mrs. William McCann. At the Baptist service conducted by Rev. W. J. Scott four children were presented for baptism by their parents. Barbara Anne Fair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Fair; Carol Adele Campion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Campion; Charles Edward Allan Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Reynolds; and Douglas Wannamaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wannamaker. Excellent messages were given at both services in keeping with the day by Rev. W. J. Scott with special music by the choir under the direction of Mr. G. L. Clute, musical director. William Reynolds was the soloist of the day.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

At the Baptismal service held in conjunction with the Mother's Day service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church the following children were presented for baptism: John Douglas McnItosh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh; Alfred Melville McGee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence McGee; Shirley Lancine Devolin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Devolin. As a special feature for Mother's Day the message was delivered by Mr. Lorne Johnson speaking on the subject "Mother".

St. John's Anglican Church.

Special Mother's Day service was observed in St. John's Anglican Church on Sunday morning when Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGee presented their infant child in Baptism which was performed by Rev. A. S. McConnell, the rector. His Mother's Day address was also one of interest and inspiration.

Personals.

Mr. Harry McGee of Detroit, Mich., spent a few days recently visiting his mother, Mrs. J. M. McGee.

Mr. Duncan Montgomery spent the week-end at his home in Stirling.

Mr. A. D. McIntosh of Toronto is spending a few days visiting relatives and friends in Stirling and district. At the present time he is the guest at the home of his daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Heasman of Oak Hills.

Mr. William Dermedy has returned to Stirling after spending the past month at Foxboro where he has been engaged in railroad work.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bennett, Joan and Roy of Frankford spent Sunday visiting Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Bennett, Ridge Road and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hulin, Stirling.

Miss Doris Cooper of the High School staff spent the week-end at her home in Toronto.

Miss Helen Lacey spent the week-end visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Lillian MacGillivray of Toronto was a week-end guest at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. E. Carleton.

Mr. H. L. Fair spent last Saturday in the northern part of the county on agricultural business.

St. Andrew's Y.P.G. Meeting.

With a good number of members and friends in attendance St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Young People's Guild held their final meeting prior to their annual summer recess. The meeting took place in the church parlors under the direction of Mrs. R. H. Williams, convener of the program committee. The meeting opened with the singing of Hymn 227 and the Scriptural passages were presented by Mrs. Harold Foster. Rev. W. H. Walker led in prayer. During the business part of the meeting Miss J. Dafoe gave the secretary's report of the previous meeting and the attendance recording system revealed a large number present.

Interesting Program.

The first musical number on the program was a vocal solo by Don Hulin. Misses Mary Tulloch and Doris Jandrews contributed a vocal duet; "Life's Railroad To Heaven". The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Louis Rodgers who delivered an excellent address on the subject "What Difference Does the Bible Make". The final number on the program was a selection by Donald Thompson and in response to hearty applause he gave an encore. His first selection was "Rescued From the Moose River Mine" and as an encore he sang "There's a Lamp Shining in the Window". He provided his own accompaniment on the guitar. This part of the meeting was closed with the benediction by Rev. Walker and a recreation period followed with Mrs. R. H. Williams directing an interesting contest, "A Musical Love Story."

Dsimiridium, produced solely from the refining of gold, brought $170,000 to mining companies of the Transvaal of South Africa last year.

Japanese activity in China has increased the number of news reels screened in Japan, many of them showing the military exploits of the Japanese.

Believed to be of record size, a mushroom 40 1-2 inches in circumference, nearly 14 1-2 inches in diameter and weighing 23 1-2 uonces, made a meal for four people in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Chester Morris and Wendy Barrie who are featured with Victor McLaglen in "Pacific Liner," now playing on the same program with "They Wanted to Marry," at the McCarthy.

Robert Montgomery, featured with Rosalind Russell in "Fast and Loose," one of two features at the Belle Theatre.

Britain Ready to Lay Down Long-Range Peace Policy

Chamberlain Says Germany Must Renounce Force

Denies Anglo - Russian Negotiations Are Being Impeded by Ideological Barriers in House of Commons

MAISKY HEARS SPEECH

Chamberlain Voices Regret That Foreign Minister Potemkin Will Not be at Geneva on Monday

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 19 (C.P. Cable) — Great Britain stands ready to lay down a definite long-range policy for European peace when Germany clearly demonstrates willingness to renounce aggression or the use of force in her relations with other countries.

Prime Minister Chamberlain made this plain in the House of Commons during debate on foreign affairs. He also denied that Anglo-Russian negotiations for inclusion of the Soviet in the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc were being impeded by ideological barriers.

The Prime Minister declared the British government always had desired reciprocal military arrangements with the Soviet.

Want Reciprocal Arrangement

"The British government have never desired to ask the Soviet government to do anything which

Why the Weather!

Spring and autumn! Spring is generally warmer than fall. The month of May, whose last day is only 21 days before the summer solstice (when the sun is highest and most heat is being received), is warmer in most places than September, whose first day is 71 days after the summer solstice. This phenomenon may be illustrated by the march of temperature through the ordinary day, the temperature at 2 p.m. is higher than that at 10 a.m. although most heat is received at midday. The snow cover is responsible for some of the lag, since much of heat received is used in melting the snow instead of warming the air. Some marine climates have cool springs due to the slowness of large bodies of water to warm up.

Horse Shies, Dignity Flies

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—A trooper of the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards' mounted escort lost every shred of dignity by tumbling ignominiously from his horse here today immediately behind the state carriage bearing Their Majesties triumphantly through lanes of cheering citizens.

Pennoned lance erect, chin up, and tall plume on his brass helmet waving gracefully, the Dragoon trotted smartly behind the Royal carriage along the Rideau Canal.

Siren on one of the boats in the canal frightened his horse. The horse shied and down went the Dragoon. He lost his seat in the saddle, his gleaming helmet, his lance, his dignity — and his nerve.

The troop trotted on and his mount followed them. The Dragoon ran back to pick up his lance, then dove into the merciful oblivion of the crowd.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

HONORARY DEGREES AWARDED TO PROMINENT CHURCHMEN

Kingston, Ont., May 19 (CP)—At the convocation of Queen's University today Rev. Dr. Robert Laird and Rev. C. E. Silcox of Toronto were recipients of honorary degrees. Rev. Dr. Laird, Treasurer of the United Church of Canada, received the degree of Doctor of Laws. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was awarded to Rev. Mr. Silcox, General Secretary of the Christian Social Council.

SAME ROBIN RETURNS

Caledonia, Ont., May 29 (CP)—A cheery robin, believed to be the same one which reared a family on the window sill of a railway track welders' tool car here two years ago, is busily building a nest today in a box car used by the same welding crew. The car is parked on the same siding as the one two years previous and the nest, started yesterday, is on a ledge behind the brake wheel.

VALUABLE METAL PATTERNS LOST IN FOUNDRY FIRE

Pittsburgh, May 19 (AP)— A spectacular fire that attracted a crowd of 5,000 persons last night destroyed the northside plant of the Pittsburgh Gray-Iron Foundry Company.

General Manager R. F. Holts estimated the loss at $1,250,000. He said metal patterns worth "a million dollars" owned by 85 other firms and stored in the plant, either were lost in the flames or damaged beyond use.

BUFFALO MOTOR COPS CHALK-TIPPED RODS

Buffalo, N.Y., May 10 (AP)—Buffalo's motorcycle police will sally forth like jousting knights henceforth, armed with chalked-tipped lances wherewith to tilt at automobiles parked overtime.

"The motorcycle man will save time and energy in this fashion," said Police Commissioner Glenn McClellan. "The chalk-tipped pole will enable him to reach out to auto tires without leaving the saddle of his motorcycle."

THEIR MAJESTIES LEAVE BANQUET TO GREET CROWD

Answering Call "We Want the King and Queen," Royal Couple Appear on Balcony

LEAVE DINNER TWICE

Witty Sallies and Quips by Camillien Houde Bring Smiles from King

By A. E. FULFORD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 19 (CP)—As though from a dream, Montreal awakened today.

The city still wore its dress of gala decorations. But gone were the King and Queen. And the picturesque events of the previous day and night seemed unreal.

It didn't seem actual that more than 100,000 persons jammed into Dominion Square last night and watched King George and Queen Elizabeth salute and wave from a little balcony of the Windsor Hotel.

But it was true. Their Majesties, even though tired after a train trip from Quebec and a four-hour motor procession through the streets of Montreal, twice appeared on the low-railed gallery, the King in evening clothes, and the Queen in a silvery white evening gown.

And Montreal never before had heard such response from a crowd which could only show its loyalty and appreciation by cheering all the louder. It was the insistent chanting of "We want the King" that made the royal couple leave a sumptuous banquet and acknowledge the thundered greetings.

OTTAWA CITIZENS, COUNTRY FOLK JOIN IN WELCOME

Small Groups Gather at 6 a.m. to Await Royal Arrival 5 Hours Later

RAIN FALLS

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—This staid, spired capital of Canada shook itself loose from its formality today as its citizens joined with the country folk of Eastern Ontario to whoop a joyful welcome to the King and Queen in the city's history.

A chilly, misty dawn broke over the city and later the skies clouded. A few drops of rain fell. Despite the dull weather, Ottawa's thousands from the boarding house district south of Parliament Hill to the swank suburbs of Ottawa south and west and Rockcliffe tumbled from their beds early to take up their places along the eight-mile royal processions route from the Island Park Drive railway crossing, where the royal train stopped, to Government House.

Hundreds of families from Eastern Ontario's lush farming land came to the city to join in the celebration of the royal visit. The population of Ottawa and Hull nearly doubled.

As early as 6 a.m. small groups planted their camp stools on the roadway along the canal for a five-hour vigil.

King and Queen Enter Upon Most Formal Phase of Visit To Canada at Ottawa Today

By NORMAN CAMPBELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—The King and Queen today entered upon the most formal phase of their visit to Canada, a week-end in the capital. State ritual was prescribed from the moment Their Majesties arrived from Montreal until their departure Sunday afternoon for the St. Lawrence River Valley City of Kingston on their way to Toronto

Festooned with banners and flags, alive with soldiers, the Parliament City had prepared a royal welcome. As befitting the Dominion's seat of Government, the Ottawa program was most formal, but probably more familiar to Their Majesties than the friendly calls they expected to pay to other Canadian cities. Pomp and ceremony are routine functions for the Empire's royal couple—such is part of their daily life at Westminster.

DIRECT PERSONAL PARTICIPATION OF KING IS AWAITED

His Majesty Will Give Assent to Many Bills Ready for Signature

SPEECHES TABOO

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Parliament arrayed itself in ceremonial attire for an historic occasion today, the direct personal participation by the Sovereign in its proceedings.

The one item of business was the giving of royal assent to a number of bills which have passed both Houses. The House of Commons last night adjourned until 2.30 p.m. today when most members will be in their places when the gentleman usher of the Black Rod summons them to the Senate Chamber to see King George in person nod his approval of their work.

Overnight the atmosphere of the House of Commons changed from one of strict business to one of pageantry and romance. In the long sittings of this week from 11.00 a.m. to 11.00 p.m. the elected representatives of the people ploughed through a mass of the country's business while many of their leaders travelled to Quebec to welcome the King and Queen to Canadian soil.

Yesterday was typical of recent days in the House of Commons. Flashes of partisan zeal were rare, long speeches were almost taboo. Questions to the ministers were to the point and answers were brief.

So it was that Defence Minister Mackenzie obtained approval for the remainder of his departmental estimates. The defence items passed aggregated $57,000,000, on top of a previous $6,000,000. The same minister saw the House pass a few

Public Relations Side of Royal Tour Is Stressed

London, May 19 (CP)—The Daily Mirror (Independent) in an editorial today said: "It will be a great shame if unintelligent handling of the public relations side of the royal tour leaves the American people with the wrong impression of the King and Queen."

The newspaper emphasized that only a very small percentage of the people in the United States and Canada would have an opportunity to see Their Majesties in person "while millions will form conclusions from the press, radio and cinema"

"It would be a thousand pities if the King and Queen who are indeed 'likeable people with human tastes and a human outlook' were presented to these millions, because of flat-footed and humorless publicity, as unapproachable figures with rather finicky ways," The Daily Mirror said. "That would be a misjudgment not merely of themselves but indirectly of the whole nation which they represent."

BOY SCOUTS FROM N. Y., TO JOIN IN WELCOME

Ottawa, May 19—(CP)—Converging on the capital by automobile and bus, more than 450 B[illegible] from upstate New York arrived in Ottawa to join in the [illegible] Their Majesties. The Scouts all were from the St. Lawrence Council of the Scouts of the United States.

WELCOME BY GIRLS' BAND

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Only girls' band out to welcome Their Majesties here today was that from Prescott. It took up a stand in the experimental farm grounds where thousands from the Prescott district found a place reserved for them.

LIBERALS SWEEP P. E. I. ELECTION FOR SECOND TIME

Only Three Conservatives Elected in House Containing Thirty Seats

2 MINISTERS DEFEATED

Charlottetown, May 19 (CP)—Political observers had to thumb back through close to a quarter century of ballot-box history today to find a parallel to the Prince Edward Island electin that sent a Liberal administration into control of the Province's Government for the second successive term.

Not in 24 years had the island's electorate prolonged a Government's mandate at a general election, as it did yesterday in re-electing Premier Thane A. Campbell and his Government with at least 25 of the Legislature's 30 seats Since 1915, it had been traditional that Provincial parties here must alternate at the helm.

The Conservatives' opposition, though holding only three seats on the basis of unofficial returns, took some measure of satisfaction at gaining a voice in the Legislature. Not since 1935 had thew had a member in the House, for the Liberals swept every seat that year.

Leader Elected

Conservative Leader W. J. P. MacMillan, Premier for two years before the 1935 avalanche, was established definitely as part of the new opposition yesterday with his Queens County running mate, W. A. Stewart The third Conservative, youthful R. R. Bell, had a bare plurality of one, nad the Cabinet member he led planned to demand a recount.

Ivory Miniature Of Princesses Presented to Queen

Montreal, May 19 (CP)—While Montrealers today cherished the memory of gracious Queen Elizabeth, the Queen had a souvenir of Montreal in the form of an ivory miniature of her daughters, the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

Following the civic banquet last night in the Windsor Hotel, the King and Queen, Mayor Houde and Mrs. Houde and Prime Minister Mackenzie King retired to the suite of Emile Vaillancourt, head of the committee in charge of the royal celebrations.

There Her Majesty viewed the miniature on Mr. Vaillancourt's desk. Noticing the keen interest shown by the Queen in the work, Mr. Vaillancourt asked that he be permitted to present it to Her Majesty as a souvenir of the visit to Montreal. It was accepted.

The miniature, in ivory and on a red plush base, is the work of Juliette de Lavoix and was made for the Earl of Bessborough when he was Governor-General of Canada.

1600 PEOPLE MISS SEEING ROYAL ARRIVAL

Ottawa, May 19—(CP)— More than 1,600 residents of Prescott and district missed seeing the King and Queen on their arrival in Ottawa. The second section of the Prescott special train arrived late at the siding near the Royal route and there was just time for the passengers to scramble from the coaches and spring to the driveway to catch a glimpse of Their Majesties.

THE KING ACCEPTS CREDENTIALS OF U. S. AMBASSADOR

First Time in Canadian History Such an Event Takes Place

GREETINGS FROM U. S.

His Majesty Refers to Forthcoming Visit to the United States

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Accepting the credentials of Daniel G. Roper, new United States Minister to Canada, the King today asked the American Government representative to convey "to the President of the United States my sincere thanks for the assurances of his friendship and his good wishes for the happiness and welfare of the Canadian people, which I cordially reciprocate."

In an unprecedented ceremony in the Rideau Hall study of the Governor General, Lord Tweedsmuir, the American Minister presented his credentials to the King. It marked the first time in Canadian history that a representative of a foreign government in the Dominion made the presentation to the British Sovereign.

In presenting his letters from his government, Mr. Roper said: "The President asks that I convey to your Majesties the assurances of his friendship and genuine good wishes for the continued happiness and well being of the Canadian people."

Close Friendship.

The King replied by also reading a message in which he expressed thanks for President Roosevelt's assurance of United States friendship.

PROTEST PARADES STAGED BY JEWS IN HOLY LAND

New Palestine Plan Bitterly Assailed and Campaign for Economical Pressure Started

STREET FIGHTING

Jerusalem, May 19—(AP)— With more than 150 Jews and British constables injured and one constable killed in the first day of protest against Great Britain's Palestine plan, Jews today mapped a campaign of non-cooperation and economic pressure.

Organized Jews who abandoned work yesterday for protest parades were busy this morning with a boycott plan. With the 24-hour strike ended, observers expected no further mass demonstrations likely to lead to violence.

The campaign against Britain's proposal to make Palestine self-governing, but with Jews in a minority through restricted immigration, called for:—

1. Refusal to buy British goods, with intensification of production and purchase of local products.
2. Encouragement of Jewish members of municipal councils in all mixed municipalities to refuse to participate in the governments.

Many Casualties

3. Encouragement of Jews to refuse payment of the usual municipal taxes and instead to contribute to the financing of Jewish resistance.

Scene is Historic As King Gives Assent to Bills

First Unpleasant Weather is Experienced by the King and Queen During Their Tour as They Reach Ottawa

SCENE ON PLATFORM

Their Majesties Greeted by Their Excellencies the Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir as Royal Salute Fired

By A. E. FULFORD

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Experiencing the first unpleasant weather of their Canadian tour, the King and Queen arrived in Ottawa today at 11 a.m. E.D.T.

The Royal couple stepped from their blue and silver Royal train at a temporary station on the south-westerly boundary of the city to the cheers of 6,000 persons as a drizzling rain fell. They were on time.

The first gun of a 21-gun salute boomed as the King stepped from the train, signalling the actual arrival to those on the outskirts of the crowd.

Sun Shines For Brief Moment.

The sun came out for just a second at the moment of arrival. The Royal couple, seemingly refreshed after sleeping for the first time on the Royal train, their official residence, at a secret spot somewhere along the line from Montreal, were smiling. They alighted from the rear platform on their train.

The Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir were the first to greet them and warm handshakes were exchanged. Agriculture Minister Gardiner and Transport Minister Howe, the two cabinet ministers not presented at Quebec, met their Majesties with their wives.

Mrs. Stanley Lewis, wife of Ottawa's mayor, presented the Queen with a bouquet of flowers as she and her husband were presented by Prime Minister Mackenzie King. Then T. F. Ahearn and J. A. Pinard, Ottawa Members of Parliament, and their wives, met the Royal couple.

The King As Field Marshal.

His Majesty was wearing a Field Marshal's uniform—red jacket, cocked hat with a broad blue band across the front of the jacket.

Her Majesty wore a mauve dress with a short jacket, a mauve hat with a bunch of violets and veil and carried a bouquet of red roses. Thin white fox furs were thrown over her shoulders.

As the train arrived and the sun came out mounted police and soldiers threw off their raincoats and greatcoats, adding color that had been missing earlier.

The top of the state landau drawn by four horses, which carried them along an eight mile route to Rideau Hall, was up as they arrived but when the weather cleared and the rain stopped it was put down and they started their drive in full view of the crowd.

Slept Under Northern Lights.

The King and Queen came to the capital after a night such as no other British Sovereigns in all history ever experienced.

In their blue and silver palace train they slept under the Northern Lights, glowing and darting like celestial fireworks. The display of Aurora was an unusual sight even for Canadians in late May.

As the train was pulling in her Majesty looked through the window of the last car and waved to the crowd, much as anyone else would in seeing friends at a station.

After the King had inspected the guard of honor from the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa under Major Harry Sloman and Mayor Lewis had presented members of the Ottawa city council, the party moved off down the driveway at 11.16 a.m.

BANK IS HELD UP

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—A bandit held up the Imperial Bank branch at Runnymede Ave., and Annette St. shortly after noon today and escaped with $300. The man was not masked but carried his hand in his pocket as though it held a gun.

BLUE-SILVER TRAIN ROYAL RESIDENCE

12-Car Train is Master-Piece of Canadian Railway Craftsmanship

Quebec, May 19 —(CP)— The King and Queen yesterday travelled into the palace-on-wheels that will be their home and "official residence" for all but a few days during the next months while they make a two-way tour of Canada from coast to coast and a side trip to the United States. The luxurious 12-car train will trace a history making course across more than 6,000 miles.

The blue-and-silver train is a master-piece of railway craftsmanship. It contains private suites for Their Majesties and attendants, bath rooms with showers, a small Royal dining room with seating for 12 persons, a large dining car for the staff, lounges and kitchens equipped beyond the fondest dream of any housekeeper.

Every car contains a radio and telephone. When the train stops, the main switchboard in the baggage room will be connected to land lines. From their suite, the King and Queen will be able to call their daughters in London, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

At only four points in Canada will the Royal party leave the train overnight. They are Ottawa, the Rocky Mountain resorts of Banff and Jasper, Alta., and Victoria.

Their Majesties' cars, the last on the train, are the cars used by Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada. The rear car contains a broad observation platform where the King and Queen will appear at station stops; a small sitting room and Their Majesties' suites.

Scouts of Canada and U. S. to Plant Trees Marking Visit of King, Queen

Gananoque, Ont., May 19 (CP)—On Saturday, May 20th, 400 Scouts, representative of Canada and United States will assemble at the International Rift Bridge on the Thousand Island Bridge and conduct a tree planting ceremony, as a gesture of loyalty from Canada and goodwill from the United States to King George and Queen Elizabeth, who pay an official visit to Kingston on Sunday, May 21.

Grant Mitchell of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., Secretary of the Thousand Island Bridge authority announced today that the United States Scouts will plant two walnut trees. The seeds came from Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington. The Canadians will plant two maple trees. It is proposed to plant one maple and one George Washington walnut on either side of the International boundary. The Canadian and American Scouts will work together in the planting.

Two flagpoles on either end of the International Rift Bridge which connects Canada and United States will be dedicated

Child Born as Royal Coach Passes, Named Margaret Rose Paquette

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Youngest person to attend today's Royal Procession and perhaps any other royal procession, was Margaret Rose Paquette. She was born in a boat house just as the King and Queen passed by along the driveway in their state coach.

Mrs. Vincent Paquette, the mother despite the expected arrival was determined not to miss seeing the King and Queen and accompanied by a sister, went to the boat house on Dow's Lake to see Their Majesties from an upstairs window.

She missed the procession but presented Their Majesties with another subject. As she has another daughter named Elizabeth the baby will be named after the Queen's younger daughter.

Dr. L. N. Pearlman, summoned from a first aid tent attended the birth and reported both mother and child were well.

DOG KILLED BY PASSING MOTORIST

A dog, the property of W. C. Rowsome, 85 Victoria Ave., was hit and killed by a passing motor car near its owner's house yesterday afternoon. The driver of the motor car, Gordon Blue, 276 Bleecker Ave., informed Thomas Thorne, local poundkeeper, that the canine ran out from the curb and directly in front of his moving vehicle without notice. The animal was subsequently disposed of by the city scavenger. Mr. Thorne also announced he had a Kairn variety dog in the custody of the city dog pound. The canine will be destroyed tonight unless otherwise claimed.

NICE SIZED PICKEREL CAUGHT IN THE TRENT

Fishermen are already reporting good catches of pickerel in the waters of the Trent River since the season for this fish started. One of the largest reported to date is a five-pound one landed by Clarence Alley of Trent River. Carl Ellis reports a second one weighing slightly over four pounds caught while casting from shore.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Gray To See King and Queen From Visitors' Gallery

If Wesley Gray, ex-warden of Hastings County, and prominent Thurlow Township farmer is showing a little more excitement than the average citizen over the forthcoming visit of Their Majesties to Toronto, he can scarcely be blamed.

For Mr. and Mrs. Gray, will occupy an enviable position in the gallery of the Assembly House of Ontario, Monday where King George and Queen Elizabeth will be entertained from 11.15 a.m. until 11.45.

"I also, received notice that free parking space has been allotted to me, while in the city," Mr. Gray said last night, his voice shaking with excitement. "We can hardly wait until the day arrives, as it will be the first time that we have ever seen Royalty. Mrs. Gray and I naturally are excited over the prospect, and are looking forward with eagerness to seeing the King and Queen."

GILEAD Y. P. U.

The Gilead Y. P. U. held a very successful meeting in the church on Monday evening, May 15, in honour of "Mother." Reserved seats were decorated for the mothers and each one received a red rose. The program throughout was along that same line consisting of hymn "Stand Up, Stand Up for Mother"; Scripture lesson read by Garnet Huffman; prayer—Mrs. Jas. Huffman; hymn —"I Love to Tell of Mother"; chorus by the school children—"What a Friend We Have in Mother"; reading—John Huffman; exercise by six boys—"Mother"; recitation—Wm. Baines; dialogue—"The Girl That Mother Used to Be."; reading—Mary Lawrenson; recitation—Barbara Latchford; reading—Miss Sweetman; duet—Annie Clare and Mary Hutchinson; recitation—Garnet Latchford; recitation — George Clare; reading—Annie Clare.

Mr. Armstrong made a few pleasing remarks and closed the meeting with prayer.

Colorful Decorations Beautify City Hall

With Union Jacks, Canadian Ensigns and streamers of red, white and blue bunting floating bravely in the breeze the facades and entrances of the city hall today presented a colorful appearance as city firemen completed the decorative scheme in honor of the visit of Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The Royal Crown of England in scarlet and gold, draped with Union Jacks gleams from the position of honor over the main entrance doorway. Streamers of bunting float from the eaves above the second floor while the main facade is also attractively decorated with three large strips of the same colors. Shields in red, white and blue also occupy prominent positions.

Eleven new awnings are in position over the windows, adding to the general attractiveness of the whole. The decorations were placed under the supervision of Mr. Hector Post, of the staff of the Canadian Department Stores, and Chairman of Market and City Property, Alderman Thomas Cushing.

POLICE COURT

His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler K. C. announced at the opening of today's local police court proceedings that no session of court would be held on Monday, which has been declared a holiday. The semi-weekly court will be held on Tuesday of next week, instead of Monday.

A number of motorists were summonsed into city police court today on charges of violation of the city's speeding bylaw and also for infractions of the city one-hour parking bylaw in the downtown area.

The speeders convicted were fined $5.00 and costs, while those in violation of the parking bylaw were assessed one dollar and costs when in default.

One local motorist stated the fine assessed him for parking over the hour limit was "unfair."

"There were not more than three cars within a stone's throw when I parked at the upper end of Front St., on business," complained the motorist.

"We have no restrictions in the matter. If you admit parking longer than one hour you naturally admit violating the city ordinance," concluded Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C.

Police Blotter

City police investigated the theft of four chickens early today. Mr. Charles Potter, 376 Front St., called the police shortly after 1.00 a.m. today to say he had heard disturbances in his rear yard. Subsequent investigations by Constables Arnott and Evans disclosed a lock on the chicken coop door had been broken and four chickens stolen.

A motor car driven by Edward Brethour, Bancroft, collided with a parked motor car on Pinnacle St., yesterday. The parked car was the property of Leroy Madden of this city. Slight property damage was reported, when Sergeant Arthur Booth investigated the case.

Several motorists, whose feet are alleged to have pressed on the accelerator too strenuously, were apprehended by Traffic Officer Doug Ellis and will be haled into court on charges of the violation of the city bylaw, contrary to fast driving within the city limits.

Eleven transients slumbered without interruption at the police station last night, no arrests having been reported necessary.

CONVICT ADMITS HITTING GOVERNOR WITH IRON BAR

Earl Sutherland Remanded After Witnesses State Convict Hit W. H. Roe Several Times

TO HEAR GOVERNOR

Napanee, May 19 —(Special) — Governor W. H. Roe, of the Lennox and Addington County jail, was struck on the head "five or six times" with an iron bar in the hands of Earl Sutherland, 18-year-old prisoner, three jail inmates testified in Magistrate's court in Napanee, Thursday.

Sutherland was remanded until May 26 after pleading guilty to a charge of unlawfully wounding the governor.

James Telfor, Elmer Patrick and Stuart Babcock, prisoners, all swore they knew of no condition or circumstances to prompt the brutal attack on the governor. Telfor said that Sutherland had intimated to him that he planned to hit the turnkey on the head and escape.

Examination by Jail Surgeon Dr. T. M. Galbraith and Dr. J. B. Willoughby showed a skull fracture and two cuts across the back of Roe's head deep enough to reach the bone. Roe's left jaw was bruised and both arms were marked from shoulder to elbow. Governor Roe is in Kingston Hospital but will testify before Sutherland is sentenced.

Employed in Garden.

The four prisoners were employed in the jail garden May 12, just before the assault, according to Thursday's testimony. Governor Roe and Turnkey Gordon McCabe were in attendance. Sutherland made on trip into the jail during the afternoon.

The blood-stained steel bar, used in the attack, was exhibited by Crown Attorney K. S. Ham and identified by the witnesses as one used in the garden as a stake to carry a line marking the rows. It was about two feet long and slightly bent in the middle. The prisoners could give no light on how the weapon was smuggled into the jail.

Babcock said he was sitting on a bench in the corridor reading, when Governor Roe entered to lock the men in their cells. He saw Sutherland strike Roe five or six times. As the blood started to flow, he testified, Roe fell, and the beating continued as he was falling and as he lay helpless on the floor.

Babcock jumped to his feet and shoved Sutherland back, yelling: "Get up, Harry, and get out of the corridor." Roe managed to struggle out and telephoned Police Chief Watts. Babcock dodged into Patrick's cell to get out of Sutherland's range, he said.

Police Chief Testifies.

Chief Watts testified that when he arrived at the jail with Traffic Officer Henry Jillings, he found Roe staggering from his office with blood from his head saturating his clothes.

"He's inside with a bar. Be careful," the wounded governor told them in a whisper. The chief went into the corridor and found a pool of blood on the floor.

"Who did this?" the chief asked. After a few moments' silence, Sutherland replied "I did."

Sutherland told the chief later he did not know why he attacked the governor. He had been feeling well, but was a little dizzy in the head, he said. He could offer no explanation to the court.

Magistrate E. J. Butler said Governor Roe's evidence was essential to the case, and he enlarged the hearing a week pending the jailer's recovery. Physicians said he would be released from hospital within a week or ten days.

During yesterday's hearing Crown Attorney Ham read a lengthy list of charges previously faced by young Sutherland. These included two escapes from industrial school and three convictions for theft. His last sentence was for three months for breaking and entering the Napanee creamery, and was dated March 30.

County Court

Milford Lucas, Tweed, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of keeping liquor for sale when he was arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in county police court held at Tweed yesterday. A second charge of obtaining liquor under false pretenses also saw a conviction registered and a one month's concurrent sentence imposed against Lucas.

Gordon Dennison, Flinton, appeared on a charge of assault causing actual bodily harm. The accused was given a year's suspended sentence and bound over to keep the peace. The charge arose out of a fistic outbreak in Flinton last week when Dennison is said to have administered a severe beating upon another resident of the village following altercations over a girl.

Arthur Huntingford, alias Burnace Noel who is said to have come from New Brunswick, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail after being convicted of the theft of two automobile headlights.

Several other minor cases concluded the proceedings with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., acting as Crown Prosecutor.

KNIGHT TEMPLARS ATTEND SERVICE

Knight Templars of King Baldwin Preceptory, No. 6, held their annual Ascension Day church Parade to Christ Church last evening. Wearing their long flowing Knight Templar garbs, the procession passed from the Parish Hall into the church, where Rev. G. G. Wright delivered a timely discourse upon the subject of "King and Service." The sermon proved interesting and most timely in keeping with the presence of Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth in Canada. The procession was headed by John Wilmick, presiding preceptor.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"I can't help France without helping England!"

"Can you? That strikes me as sophistry, Leonie—although perhaps it's a step in the right direction. In the meantime, here's your cocoa.

"Thanks." She sipped it slowly. "You're a good friend, Wilson."

"Friend. Oh! yes, someone you like....in a thoroughly tepid, sisterly way. Sometimes I'd almost rather you hated me, Leonie. There's something revolting in a feeling which is neither hot nor cold."

"You don't really mean that, do you, Wilson?" Her tone was almost wistful. "Because, after all, I believe I give you the best of which I'm capable—poor as it seems to you."

"It isn't. I'm ungrateful, Leonie; you make me ashamed when you speak like that," Hall said under his breath.

"You deserve more. Woud it make you in any way happy if I promised to marry you after the war?"

"Leonie!" Hall raised his head to stare at her in amazement, found her eyes regarding him kindly, almost tenderly.

"It would be easy enough for me, liking you as I do. For I do like you. And I shouldn't mind marriage. Oh! that's nothing!" She paused, shook her head. "But it wouldn't make you happy, Wilson...."

"Ah, Leonie....!"

"Oh, no, it wouldn't. You need something I could never give you or any man. And....the war isn't over yet. Goodnight; I'm glad that we shall be working together here for a while."

She had gone, but in going, left the memory of one of those rare smiles of hers. For long Hall sat motionless, gazing straight in front of him, that he might not lose that memory.

CHAPTER XXIV

Flower from a Battlefield

Wilson Hall was always to remember the weeks which followed as some of the most curiously contented, if not the happiest of his life. They were weeks of unceasing work, but for some hours of each day he had Leonie as a companion and it was that, as he perfectly well recognized, which was at the back of his peace of mind.

A good many of these days were spent by Hall sitting beside Leonie in the front of her ambulance. He took the place of a stretcher bearer and was more efficent than most, as his first-aid ability was already considerable. Gentleness and dexterity came naturally to this artist's hands, together with the technical skill acquired through his knowledge of anatomy.

One of the first of these occasions had been on New Year's Day, when Leonie's round had taken them over a considerable stretch of country behind the lines, in order to reach a point where a number of men had been injured the night before by a mine explosion.

At first their way led along a shell-devastated stretch of road, where the verging poplars in many places were splintered, or snapped off short like broken matches. Even whilst the ambulance sped steadily along, the road itself gave the impression of lapsing into a dawdle as though there was no longer any need for fear or haste.

When Hall spoke of it to Leonie, she nodded, her profile clear-cut against a pale-hued slope of downland, her hands controlling the steering-wheel steadily, as she gazed straight ahead.

"Yes—it feels that. And we're coming to an even more restful place directly. We'll stop there for a few minutes; it's a view worth looking at."

They swept round a curved elbow of down which seemed to rest upon the road's margin and drew up in a little cutting at a point where a streak of path ran upwards to the top of the left-hand bank of turf-covered chalk.

Leonie swung herself down.

"Come on," she said briefly, and led the way up to the track, pausing on the bank's summit as Hall joined her, and drew a quick breath of surprised delight.

A wide stretch of country lay beneath them, the valley between the two escarpments, along the ridge of one of which their own road ran. There was something appealing about the whole landscape in its very bareness; it offered itself to the eyes with such simplicity, lacking all the beauty of colouring which might have clothed it in summer.

Leonie stood very still, except for the slight movements of her head as her eyes turned from point to point. There was no sound except the faint, high song of an invisible lark, like the very voice of the silence. At that moment the war might have been a thousand leagues and a thousand centuries away, instead of only a few miles, beyond the hills.

Hall had seated himself on a yellow-lichened rock; glancing idly down, in a cranny near his foot, he caught a glimpse of pure purple against the greyness, a single violet flower, blooming in that sheltered niche as though for a premature spring.

Stooping, Hall gathered the whole tiny plant.

"A New Year's present for you," he said, holding it out to Leonie.

She turned and took the flower-tuft with a little drawn breath of pleasure.

"I'd almost forgotten that it was New Year's Day," she said. "And the violet ought to bring good luck, his own symbol, Caporal Violette. Don't you remember the old Bonapartist password, "He will return with the violets?" His followers wore it as a sign when he was in exile—even afterwards."

She fastened the flower into her coat and looked up to smile at Hall. I wish I could give you something in exchange," she said.

"Why, that wish is enough in itself," Hall answered. "Besides, you brought me here, gave me this view and the peace of it, to remember always."

"And I must take you away, too: It won't do to waste any more time. Only I hate to leave it.' '

Leonie swung round on her heel, leaped down into the road. As they drove away she did not turn her head again to look right or left.

More than six weeks had passed between that morning and another drive together, on a still, cold February evening, when the least sounds seemed to reverberate from the earth's frost-bound surface, as though from a metal plate.

The blunt nose of the ambulance was set straight towards the front lines. There had been another attack at zero hour that morning, not driven home by the enemy, but accompanied by a good many casualties.

"I wonder does all this activity mean that they are concentrating for the big attack here," Hall speculated.

"No," Leonie said briefly, avoiding a shell-pit in the road by a quick swerve.

Towards the Line

"You sound very certain," Hall laughed.

"I am. It sounds absurd, I suppose, but I've inherited instincts about that sort of thing. Anyhow, I know it isn't here that they'll strike.".

"Where then?"

"Verdun. I'm certain of it. Oh! I don't mean to say that I'm going solely by those instincts. That wouldn't satisfy you — or myself possibly. But I've studied the ground—I spent a month on that part of the Front last year."

"I suppose it is of immense strategic importance."

"It has been so always. Look at its position, dominating the highway from Rheims to Metz."

"And the French?"

"The French know that the fall of Verdun might be decisive, would at any rate entail the reorganization of the whole line. Yet they have not acted upon that knowledge. When one thinks of the network of communications behind the enemy lines and nothing done by France all these years....It makes one almost despair."

"You're afraid of the result if the attack develops there, then?"

"It will be men against machines—and the French are not at their best on the defensive. Attack suits them best. Ah! that was a near shave." again the car swerved violently. "I must attend to my driving now; this is a bad bit of road."

Leonie did not speak again as the ambuance lurched and bumped along, and Hal, silent too, watched, as he so often had before, the skill with which she controlled the heavy vehicle, driving it at a breakneck pace now, very different from the slow and careful method which she adopted when a cargo of wounded was on board.

In any case it would have been impossibe to talk, for the rattle and roar was unceasing, shaking the very ground beneath the wheels, and shells were falling uncomfortably near, as was announced by a thud and crash in a field to their right.

Hall, forced to hold on tightly to keep his seat, found himself trying to analyse his feelings, to decide whether he was afraid. On the whole, he thought not; there did not seem to be time for any such sensation in this mad clattering rush. He caught himself thinking, ridiculously, that they were really going too fast to be hit.

Leonie swung on two wheels round a corner, plunged through half frozen mud axle-deep, in the rear of a pile of bricks and debris which had once been a large building.

In the dubious shelter of this rubbish heap a temporary hospital of boards, canvas and sand-bags had been erected. Leonie drew up beside it, and descended, followed by Hall.

That dreary, draughty mockery of a building held a pitiful assemblage of dead and wounded, crowded together in that small space, the icy air almost unbreathable.

Leonie spoke to the brave, bearded young doctor in charge and he gave curt orders to the stretcher bearers, obviously relieved at the prospect of some of his charges being removed. The ambulance was quickly loaded, but at the last moment a poilu limped up.

He gasped out something to the doctor before collapsing, half unconscious, and the Frenchman spoke to Leonie and Hall.

"He says that there are some of his comrades, badly injured, just round the angle of ruin; a shell burst amongst them," he said. "It would be well that they should go back in the ambulance with you, if...." he shrugged his shoulders, "if any of the poor devils are still alive, which does not seem very likely.

"I'll help to bring them in," Hall volunteered, and lifting one end of a stretcher, plunged into the darkness of the shadows thrown by the ruin, stumbling over the rough ground, slipping on half-frozen puddles, following thel ead of the French stretcher bearer ahead of him, who was bending and peering here and there in search of the wounded men.

IMPRESSIONS

Unforgettable scenes are to be numbered by thousands as Their Majesties the King and Queen make their way across Canada from east to west and from west to east as they meet the people of Canada. Their Majesties have seen two large urban centres of Quebec, names almost as old as the New World, and a thriving centre, Three Rivers and have learned something of the spirit of the French Canadians in the cities and in the country, as they sped in their train through the countryside, picturesque as it is and as the people are. There they have seen a section of Canada whose life is still full of romance and whose spirit and inspirations date back to the earliest days of settlement while it enjoys the present and looks to the future. "Historic' is the word to be used .The King and Queen have been in storied Quebec and one of the greatest inland seaports in the world, Montreal. They have already met the city-dweller, and the rural dweller, who gave so fine a demonstration of loyalty and affection for their sovereigns as whole communities gathered on the road crossings along the track while the royal train of silver and blue was steaming westward not far from the mighty St. Lawrence River. These great cities whose roots are in the original foundation of institutions of government and civilization in Canada, deeply moved the King and the Queen who have captured, not by pageantry but by their loveableness and openheartedness, the hearts of all people. Such spontaneous outbursts of love for the sovereigns are the finest tribute to them as rulers and as individual man and woman.

From picturesque Quebec Province, the King and Queen have now come to the centre of Canada, Ottawa. Here is the heart of the nation today and Saturday and on Sunday morning they will feel the pulse beat of the nation. Yet they have seen only a portion of Canada. This is but the third day and they are to spend twenty-six days in Canada and four in the United States besides paying a visit to Newfoundland. Their lives will be enriched by the multitude of impressions they will gather.

Ottawa is in the unique position of a national capital, so that much of the ceremonial and spirit of the events there will be of a national nature. It is when they progress into Ontario and stop on the way at numbers of cities and towns on the way, that they will see and likewise learn much of the spirit of the people of English-speaking Canada. As they go west there will be other new experiences.

Canada's impressions of the royal visitors are profound. Fortunate is the empire and this land of Canada with a King and a Queen who are so human, so desirous to please those who owe them fealty, so unaffected and so appreciative of the people and their spontaneity of expressions of loyalty. Happy are the Sovereigns, whose every appearance binds hearts to them which are only to be bound by bonds of abiding love and affection.

A happy King and a happy Queen and a happy Dominion. They are triumphs of democracy.

WORLD TENSION LESSENS

The world has been feeling less tense than in past months. The possibility of armed conflict seems far more remote than for months. Before the royal tour was begun there was speculation as to whether the program of the voyage to and the tour of Canada would be realized. But in the wisdom of His Majesty and of those in high places and under the blessing of a kindly Providence, that tour has been auspiciously launched and will be carried out, Canadians and all other Britishers throughout the world confidently trust.

The very fact that the tour was begun and is such a triumph of loyalty has had a soothing influence upon the ruffled nerves of the world. The effect is as healing as rest from worry and confidence in affairs can make it.

In regard to countries which have been in the spotlight, even those which have been thought of at times as possible foes in warfare, it may be that the confidence which the making of the tour at this time has created, may soften their words and methods, may bring them to a realization that Britain's motive can stand the light of day and that Britain looks toward peace and is confident in the trust that the way of peace is best for all.

May these halcyon days, when a happy king and his gracious consort are crossing Canada, last all through their tour and long after it is closed with Canada and with the United States and with the Empire and all other nations blessed, by reason of the visit, and feeling a finer sense of international ethics abroad in the world.

How it could be otherwise is difficult to see. These days will leave abiding influences for good on many millions of men, women and children, and will demonstrate the unselfishness of democracy as a form of government.

Westerly is a lively old town of 270 years, population 11,000, lying beside the little Pawcatuck river, six miles back of the ocean, snug against most ocean blows.

x

One afternoon last September the winds blew and the floods came and houses built on the sand were hustled inland in pieces—garages and outbuildings, and steeples from churches were tossed about in the air like tumbleweeds in the wildest storm in the memory of the oldest living inhabitant.

x

Power lines in Westerly were crippled and store windows were blown in, including the windows of Montgomery Ward & Co's. store.

x

The radio and ice box salesman of Montgomery Ward was tall Wilson Everett Burgess, aged 29, an amateur radio operator in his spare time. Tre first whiff of the Big Wind told Burgess something, and he hastily gathered all the dry cells and radio "B" batteries he could find in stock, and battled his way home to find that the hurricane had blown his garage away with the aerial for his 600-watt transmitter. He slung a new aerial in a mile-a-minute gale and got busy with his transmitter working on five watts of dry-cell power. He sat down by kerosene lamplight, began calling the amateur's signal of distress QRR. W2CQD, Roselle, New Jersey, 165 miles away picked him up, turned him over to nearer W1SZ,West Hartford ,Connecticut.

x

For forty-six hours Burgess stayed with his radio transmitter, sending 900 messages, calls for rescue boats, Red Cross communications for medicine, food, doctors and nurses, order from local undertakers for coffins, advice to boil water, warnings to looters, instructions to rescue pilots, news details of the hurricane that killed 136 people in the Westerly and near-by beach areas.

x

When given the award and posed by press photographers, all Burgess could say was: "Golly, I feel like Clark Gable."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 19th., 1919.

Mr. Casey Wallbridge is home from Saskatchewan on a visit to relatives at Massassaga, Prince Edward County.

Mrs. P. J. O'Brien and sons, Wilfrid and Willard of this city are visiting friends in Toronto.

The annual meeting of the W.C.T.U. was held in the parlors at the Y.M.C.A. with the president Mrs. S. Gibson, in the chair. The reports submitted were very encouraging. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. S. Gibson, re-elected; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. J. Diamond; Recording Secretaries, Miss I. Jack and Mrs. G. Stewart; Treasurers, Mrs. W. E. Bonter and Mrs. S. Campbell.

Mrs. H. P. Knight and Mrs. L. C. Richardson left this morning on an extended visit to Western Canada.

30 YEARS AGO

May 19th., 1909.

At a meeting of the city council preliminary steps were taken for the submission to the ratepayers of two bylaws; one to raise the sum of $70,000.00 for schools and the other to ratify a new five year contract with the Trenton Electric Company for street lighting.

The bicycle road race in this city on Dominion Day should attract a large field of entries. It will be a handicap 10 mile race, under C.W.A. auspices.

Mr. James Wallace has returned home after spending several months in Bermuda.

Dr. and Mrs. Hunter of Orangeville, Ont., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Coppin. They are enroute to their home after spending several months abroad.

Mr. H. C. Gilmour of Picton, was in the city today on business.

40 YEARS AGO

May 19th., 1899.

The Rev. Canon Burke, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, and the Rev. Rural Dean Bogart, Rector of St. John's Church are attending a meeting of the Bay of Quinte Clerical Union in Napanee today.

Mr. W. S. Clarke, formerly of the firm of Messrs. Smith & Clarke, will open shortly an up-to-date photograph gallery in the premises at present occupied by Mr. T. P. Brown on Front Street, opposite Campbell Street.

Dr. R. B. Wells of Toronto is here on a visit to his brother, Mr. J. Walter Wells, of the Assay Office.

Mr. W. W. Pope has returned from Toronto.

The Rev. J. W. Callum, a former resident of Hastings County and a graduate of Albert College, has been appointed Principal of the Poynette Academy in Wisconsin, which is under the jurisdiction of the Presbyterian Church. His many friends will be pleased to learn of his success.

50 YEARS AGO

May 19th., 1889.

The Rev. Dr. George will occupy his pulpit in John Street Presbyterian Church on Sunday. Dr. George has been appointed a delegate to the Sunday School convention in London, England, in July next.

The Madoc passenger train was run into by a freight train loaded with timber near Corbyville yesterday. A number of passengers were injured, but none fatally. The passenger train was travelling towards Belleville and had just left Corbyville and was moving slowly when without warning the freight train rounded the curve near the junction of the gravel road and plunged into the rear of the passenger train, carrying it some 200 yards before it stopped. The interior of the coach was stripped of everything and the engine of the freight train was encased in the frame work of the coach. Some of the passengers managed to escape before the train stopped, but the majority were still imprisoned in the coach. As soon as possible they were extracted and medical aid summoned. Dr. Willson, Dr. Tracey, Dr. Farley and Dr. Eakins were soon at the scene. Some of the injured were laid upon the ground under trees and others were taken to houses in the vicinity. The injuries were mostly a few broken arms and legs and cuts, bruises and some suffered from the shock. There were 53 passengers in the car and 22 of them were injured. It would seem to be a miracle that no one was killed.

Retraction of Statement is Demanded of Synod

Kingston, Ont., May 19—(CP)—"I demand that Very Rev. Dean W. W. Craig of St. George's Cathedral retract his statement that the report on the rural deanery of Frontenac is false and was changed for a purpose," said Rural Dean S. E. Harrington of St. Luke's Church, Kingston, at the annual session of the Anglican Synod of the Diocese of Ontario.

The debate arose in a discussion of the report of the Deanery of Frontenac as compiled by Rev. Mr. Harrington. The report said that Kingston churches had received only 45 per cent of the Kingston Rectory Fund, while St. George's Cathedral had received their full share. Dean Craig said the clause which read "with the exception of two city parishes, St. George's and St. James, all the parishes are experiencing much difficulty in raising funds for their needs," was false. He said that St. George's was no more wealthy than any other parish and was having a hard time.

Rural Dean Harrington said that "this is no false statement and I believe that other parishes will not accept the statement of Dean Craig."

Bishop Lyons intervened to say that he did not think Rural Dean Harrington had made any inaccurate statement intentionally, but that the report gave an unfavorable impression. The report was then carried by the Synod.

Commenting on the report on social service, Bishop Lyons said that there is no place for lotteries, gambling, dancing or card playing in the life of the church. It would only lead to undermining the morals of the people.

At a Distance, But Not Missing Anything

Many and varied will have been the methods employed by hundreds of thousands of Canadian citizens in their attempts to get a good view of the King and Queen during their tour and this little fellow in Quebec was using one of the favorites, as, supported by his mother, he holds a pair of field glasses to his eyes, presses a flag to his side with one arm, and gazes in awe at the sight so many now have seen and so many more wait to see

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Meat or Vegetables

I watched two men exercising in a gymnasium and was struck with their excellent muscular development.

Noticing my interest, the instructor smiled and said he got a great "kick" out of hearing them argue about food. One was a vegeterian and the other ate meat three times a day. While friends in every way as they played on various teams together, they could not agree on the merits of meat or vegetables.

I told the vegetarian that he was really a meat-eater because he ate eggs and I told the meat-eater he was a vegetarian because the beef he ate was really the grass the cow had eaten.

What about meat or vegetables as the best food for man?

I have spoken before of one of the university exhibits at the Hall of Science, Chicago's Century of Progress. This particular exhibit showed the intestine of a cow, of a dog and of a man. The length of the intestine in a cow is nearly thirty times the length of the cow's body. It has to be this long because the food the cows eats is bulky and it takes a long time for the intestine to take the nourishment from this bulky food. "Such animals have been developed four-pouched stomachs and cud-chewing to absorb the nourishment from this food."

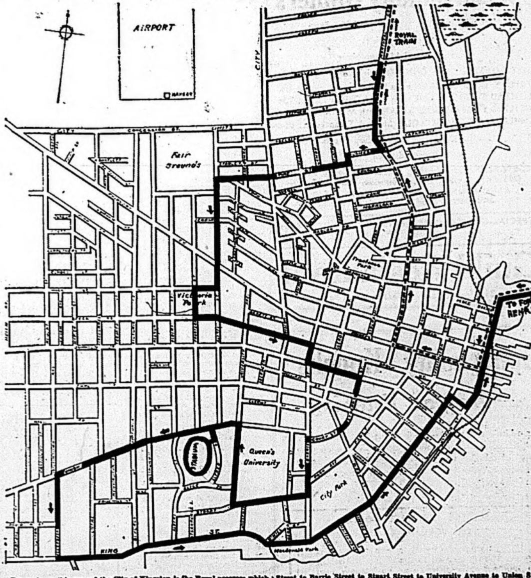
The intestine of the cat or the dog, meat-eating animals, is only three to four times the length of its body; meat is a rich concentrated food and is easily absorbed through the walls of the intestine into the blood.

What about the intestine in man? The length of the intestine in man is about seven times the length of his body (not considering head and legs).

I believe the above facts make it plain that as man's intestine is not as long in proportion to body length as is the cow's and not as short as that of the cat or dog, he should eat both meat and vegetables as at present.

Some of the foods which replace meat in certain countries—rice, soya beans, and others—are rich in protein, the body building and repair factor in meat.

Route Their Majesties Will Travel In Kingston May 21



Drawn in on this map of the City of Kingston is the Royal progress which Their Majesties will travel Sunday evening. The solid line shows the route from the Royal train to the Richardson Stadium and from there on to Fort Henry. The dashed line shows the route the Royal party will travel on their way back from Fort Henry to the Royal train. The route is as follows: Leaves the Outer Station proceeds along Montreal Street to James Street to Pine Street to rejoin the original route at Alfred Street and follows this route in reverse direction to Mack Street to Frontenac Street, down Brock Street to Barrie Street to Johnson Street to Sydenham Street to Court Street to Barrie Street to Stuart Street to University Avenue to Union Street to the Richardson Stadium, and circle the stadium and then continuing along the old route via Union Street to Ellerbeck Street and King Street, continuing along King Street to Market Street, then down Market Street along Ontario Street across the La Salle Causeway to Fort Henry. At Fort Henry it is now proposed that Their Majesties will enter the Fort by the northeast gate and after brief inspection (on foot if conditions allow) will leave by the southwest gate, returning eventually by Highway No. 2, the La Salle Causeway, Ontario, Princess and Montreal streets to the Outer Station.

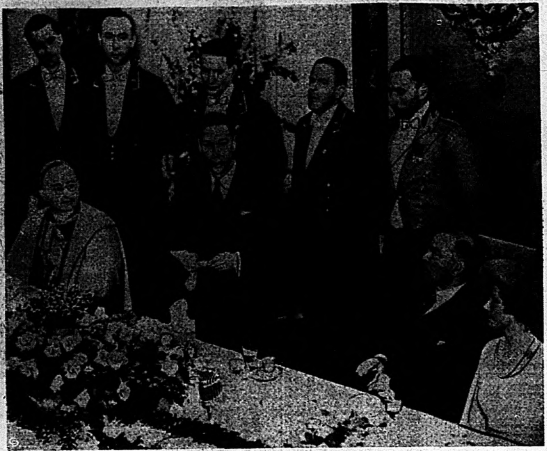
In Two Languages The King Expresses Anticipation of Canadian Tour



An historic moment for Canada is recorded by the camera as King George, the first British monarch to ever tread the soil of one of his Dominions, makes his first speech in Canada, delivered at a luncheon in Quebec's Chateau Frontenac, and, much to the delight of Canada's many French-Canadians, made partly in French. On the King's left i this picture are the nQuee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, while at his RIGHT, sits Cardinal Villeneuve, of Quebec. Their Majesties, although neither ate much during this, their first real meal in Canada, were completely at ease and laughed and smiled during the formal affair.

Shower for Mr. and Mrs. K. Pair, Rawdon, Attended by Over 300

Rawdon, May 19. — On Monday evening friends from Burnbrae, Hoard's and the William's School Section gathered at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Hay and honoured their daughter Florence and her husband, Mr. Kenneth Parr.

The young couple received the guests in the hall with the bride wearing her wedding gown of turquoise blue net over taffeta. After the vast crowd had been seated the program was staged.

Dr. C. S. Reddick of Seymour Circuit was master of ceremonies in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. A. MacMillan, Burnbrae. Misses Josephine and Doris Locke contributed a guitar selection. Miss Lois McAdam sang a solo with Mrs. Percy Hubble as accompanist. Mr. Charlie Carter gave current events in his usual humorous manner and Mr. Harvey Couch of Carmel contributed a musical selection. Mrs. Percy McMullen recited "Caleb's Courtship and What Came of It". Miss Jean Third sang a solo with guitar accompaniment.

A mock wedding was staged with the following cast: Pianist, Miss Ferne Weatherill; bride, Mr. Don Walker; groom, Miss Helen Murray; bride's father, Miss Thelma Wallace; bridesmaid, Miss Lillian Stollery; flower girl, Master Gerald Heagle; minister, Mrs. Walter Bibby.

Miss Maudie Hay read the address and a number of girls unwrapped the large array of gifts as they arrived and placed them artistically in one of the upstair rooms where they were on display.

Both Florence and Kenneth graciously replied thanking their friends for gifts and inviting all to pay them a visit in their new home at Hoard's.

At the close an appetizing lunch was served and all enjoyed a social hour. After lunch the young people enjoyed a few hours of dancing.

The address follows:

"Burnbrae, May 15, 1939.

"Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Parr.

"Dear Florence and Kenneth: We, your friends and neighbors have gathered with you tonight to wish for you the best of luck and good wishes on your journey of life together.

"Florence, you have proved to your parents a faithful and loyal daughter both in your home and church and we feel that Ken has made a wise choice and is to be congratulated for having chosen you as his bride.

"Burnbrae as well as your neighbors will miss you keenly for no one was ever more willing to help in all phases of the work than you have been.

"Kenneth, we your pals from Hoard's have found you a four-square fellow. Your cheery disposition has taken you far with your friends and we assure you we are glad you are bringing your bride to Hoard's and making your home among us. We extend to you both a right royal welcome.

"These gifts we ask you to accept and may each one bring fond memories of your large circle of friends as you use them.

"Again wishing you the best of everything on life's voyage.

"Signed on behalf of your neighbors and friends from Hoard's, Burnbrae and Mount Pleasant: Donald Walker, Maudie Hay, Mrs. William Stollery and Mrs. Percy Hubble."

Mr. Harold Bedford visited Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith on Sunday.

Miss L. Thompson spent a few days this week with her friend, Miss Anna Sharp.

At the Mother's Day service held at Bethel United Church on Sunday evening Mrs. Harold Elliott presided at the piano and Mr. Roy Welbourn the superintendent of the Sunday School, was in charge. Miss Lauren Scott gave "The Room of Gold" and Mrs. Sam Elliott's class gave a splendid dramatization. The junior choir sang a number entitled "Mothers of Salem". Misses Shirley and Irene Preston sang "Sunbeams of Jesus" and Master Bobby Elliott sang "There's Always a Mother Who Cares". Rev. J. E. Beckel gave an appropriate address and the offering was gathered by Messrs. Wesley Farrell and Walter Warren.

W.M.S.

The May meeting of Mount Pleasant Rawdon W.M.S. was held at the church with eleven members and two visitors in attendance. Quiet music was played by Mrs. Percy Hubble and the president, Mrs. P. McMullen, gave the call to worship from the monthly "Till the People Rise".

All joined in a hymn and Mrs. Don Campbell read the Bible lesson. Mrs. John Holmes gave a splendid devotional paper on the theme of "World Peace". The lesson was a picture of great blessings following great afflictions and so in these days individuals must wait on the Lord and have faith that there will eventually be a silver lining. Roll call was answered with the keyword "charity". In the business period plans were made to hold a quilting early in June. The program for May was arranged by Mrs. Frank Smith. Mrs. Frank Jeffs synopsized a part of the study chapter. Mrs. Arthur Phillips gave a stewardship reading based on "Possessions". Mrs. Percy Hubble sang "I Cannot Bear My Murdens alone" with Mrs. John Holmes as accompanist. Mrs. Percy MacMullen gave a report of the recent biennial meeting of the branch conference which was held in Lindsay. The offering amounted to $4.85 which was dedicated to the cause of missions.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson moved to their new home at Scarborough Junction near Toronto one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher and Mrs. Emma Summers spent Sunday at Ivanhoe and attended the christening service of Baby Dwayne Shaw.

Mrs. Ira David and baby Roy visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Barron last Wednesday.

Miss Frances Bertrand, Marmora, visited her sister, Mrs. W. Montgomery, over the week-end.

Mrs. Cyrus Summers attended the funeral of Mr. L. Maybee at Wellman's on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Weese entertained on Sunday Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Stacey, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Roberts and Jimmie, Mrs. George Roberts, Sr., and Miss Flossie Roberts of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey, Mr. C. U. Heath, Mrs. Celestine Snarr, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bailey were among those who attended the funeral of Mrs. Archer at Havelock on Monday.

Mount Pleasant boys have joined up to play baseball and had their first practise game on Tuesday evening.

KING AND QUEEN

the formal visit to Parliament this afternoon to give royal assent to bills passed by Parliament in the session soon to conclude and the unveiling of the National War Memorial on Confederation Square on Sunday. Other public functions included the trooping of the color by the Canadian Grenadier Guards on Parliament Hill Saturday and the laying of the cornerstone of the Supreme Court of Canada building by the Queen immediately to follow. Full ceremony of state will attend the state dinner tonight at Government House and the Parliamentary dinner Saturday night, when the Dominion Government will play host to the members of the House of Commons and Senate with Their Majesties as guests of honor. Society will have its opportunity to see Their Majesties at the garden party at Government House on Saturday afternoon.

Visitors Linger On

Visitors who started to pour in last week-end have lingered on. Today highways to the city were crowded. Special trains arrived with hundreds of visitors. It was a civic holiday. The city's populace was free and with the daylight hundreds started to take up preferred positions to await the royal arrival along the route from the specially-erected railway platform at the southwest corner of the city to Government House.

The eight-mile route skirted stretches of the mighty Ottawa River, the Rideau Canal, the majestic Parliament Buildings and the humble dwellings and shops of "lower town."

Tourist business, especially from the United States, was, if anything, swelled by the delayed arrival, and thousands of cars were expected to cross at various points along the St. Lawrence international boundary. Late inquiries mounted at the Ottawa Civic Tourist Bureau, which today was still hard at work finding accommodation for the visitors.

The pace of the Ottawa program was quickened considerably by the elimination of more than a full day from the schedule. Extension of the program to Sunday, with the apex that day being the Memorial Dedication, will cause churches' in most cases to substitute earlier Sabbath services for the usual 11 a.m. worship.

To Give Royal Assent

First official act scheduled in Canada's capital for His Majesty was his reception of letters of credence from Daniel Roper, newly-accredited United States Minister to Canada. This official, but private, ceremony at Government House was followed on the program by the reception of the heads of other diplomatic missions.

This afternoon in the Senate Chamber, where a special canopy has been put over the throne chairs, was the formal royal assent to legislation passed at the session of Parliament, which has adjourned, while Their Majesties are in Ottawa. Adjournment came after a futile speeding up in an effort to conclude business so that the King might prorogue Parliament.

Brief respite from public gaze will be Their Majesties' for a few hours Saturday afternoon. They will lunch privately with Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Laurier House. For the garden party that concludes the daytime program Sunday, 5,000 guests are expected at Government House.

Eight hundred have been invited to the Parliamentary dinner Saturday night. It has been decided that the originally-scheduled individual presentations of those at the dinner to Their Majesties will be cancelled.

Farewell to the capital will be said at 2.15 p.m. Sunday as the royal train moves off for Kingston.

Runners-up were Miss Joan McNichol, Miss Mary and Miss Patty Harrison. Mr. Ed Buckley was the judge, with whom the final decision lay. "Miss Parkdale's" selection brought much satisfaction to her many admirers and the decision was apparently very popular. She is in her eighteenth year, and in June will write her senior matriculation at Parkdale Collegiate. "Miss Parkdale" is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Holton.—Globe and Mail.

Mrs. Leonard Tisdale, who with Mr. Tisdale, is leaving shortly to take up residence in Vancouver, B.C. was guest of honor at a delightful surprise party arranged last evening at her home, 70 South Front Street, by Mrs. F. Keegan. About twenty-five of her friends gathered to honor Mrs. Tisdale at a farewell party. Euchre was enjoyed during the earlier part of the evening, the prizes being won by Mrs. W. Carter, first, Mrs. R. Dunlop, second, and Mrs. F. Keegan, consolation. Mrs. Tisdale was asked to accept as a token of the esteem and affection of a wide circle of friends, a handsome leather purse. The sincere regret felt by all in the departure of a popular neighbor was expressed by the gathering. Mrs. Tisdale, who had been completely taken by surprise by the event, made a gracious reply thanking the guests for their gift and the sentiments expressed. A delicious lunch brought the interesting occasion to a close.

Miss Kitty Hoyle, bride-to-be and Mrs. J. Diamond (nee Dolly Canning), a recent bride, both popular members of the staff of the Loblaw Store, were entertained at a delightful party at the home of the manager, Mr. George Fordyce, Grove Street, on Wednesday evening. An enjoyable time was spent playing games while a mock wedding added to the amusement of the guests. During the evening the guests of honor were presented with trilite lamps, for which they thanked their friends in a charming manner. A delicious lunch was served.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A Postponed Proposal

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I'm very much in love with a girl, but I hesitate to tell her about it, because I don't have steady work, and if I told her I loved her she'd expect me to ask her to marry me. I get so desperate sometimes, sitting around and waiting for a good job to turn up.

Marc

Instead of sitting around and feeling desperate, why don't you use your spare time to advantage? The public libraries are full of text-books waiting to be used by those who wish to improve themselves. If you will tell me what your special line of work is, and what your last job was, perhaps I can help you out a little with information about the kind of books that will be of benefit to you.

As for the girl, I'd suggest you take her into your confidence. Tell her you can't make any definite plans now, but that as soon as you land a permanent job, you have something important to ask her. It looks to me as if things will be picking up soon.

Her Young Man Listens to Gossip

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I have been going with a young man of 29 for the past year. He is the first man I ever loved. About three weeks ago we had a quarrel, and we broke up and I feel as if I'll never be the same again. He's always in my thoughts. He told me his married sister did not approve of me, and that he had heard things about me he didn't like, which made him decide we'd better part. I begged him not to believe these untrue stories, but to no avail.

I'd give anything to get him back. I'm only 21, and am sure I can never love anyone else.

Lonely Heart

I'm afraid you will not like what I'm going to say, but a man of 29 who gets his married sister to decide about his love affairs, and who listens to gossip about a girl, does not appeal to me as a perfect lover. I'd much rather you had said he settled the tattlers himself and that he told the married sister he was capable of picking out his own girl.

If you really want him back, perhaps it might comfort you to think that a man who is so easily swayed is just as likely to come back to you the first time he gets mad at his big sister or discovers that gossip is so undependable.

Why Doesn't He Ask This Girl to Marry Him?

Dear Miss Fairfax

I find myself becoming involved in the love affair of a friend of mine. She is very sincerely in love with a man who is 31 years old, and who has been attentive to her for the past seven years. He has an excellent position, and owns property, so there is no reason why they should not get married. But he has never asked her, although he is extremely jealous if anyone else tries to 'date' her.

He has often tried to make love to me, and he says my indifference to him is very unflattering. I ignore him as much as possible because I think that since he's been taking up the best years of my friend's life, he ought to marry her. At the same time, I confess that I feel that I'm beginning to like him a little, and it surely would make me happy if I could see more of him. But here again I am restrained by a feeling of responsibility and loyalty to this other girl. Do you think I am right?

Vera M.

Fairminded women, it is understood, agree that as far as husbands are concerned, it should be 'hands off' policy. At least, that's the code, whether women live up to it or not. But when even an engagement does not exist, as in the present case, it seems to me there are no restrictions whatever.

You say the man has been taking up this girl's time for a number of years, that he is now 31. Perhaps he's one of those strange creatures who prefer being just 'attentive' rather than married. No one knows why, but the pathway of life seems to be paved with the wreckage of feminine hearts taken up and thrown aside by these incorrigible celibates. Be sure he doesn't belong to this type before you yourself become more deeply involved.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

At Your Club Meeting. . . Listen!

The role of the president of a club, or the role of a speaker, is not an easy one. The despair of every president and of every speaker is the inattention of those who should be listening. If you have ever tried to conduct a meeting, or to make a speech on which you have worked hard and faithfully for more hours than you care to admit, you know this. If you have not, think how you would feel if you were called on to make a speech. How often have I heard a woman say, "I just couldn't conduct a meeting . . . and as for making a speech, I'd die if I had to do it." And, perverse as it may seem, since her words indicate that she realizes the difficulties, she is often the very woman who will not take thought to contribute what she can to ease some other woman's difficulties.

A friend of mine, very wise and witty on the subject of books, told me recently that at a time when she was asked to give a talk at a woman's club in a large town proud of its love of culture, one of the members passed the entire hour drawing sketches in her sketch-book of this and that in the room . . . a vase of flowers on the piano; a pleasantly curtained window; the posture of a listener in a row in front. That woman, more ambitious as an artist than sensitive as a woman, made the speaker's afternoon doubly difficult.

We are all familiar with that club pest, the member so thrifty of her time that she simply cannot pry herself away from her knitting needles, no matter how distinguished the speaker, nor how important the business before the meeting!

On the other hand, there is the woman who is such a courteous and considerate person what she naturally does unto others as she would have them do unto her. She stimulates the speaker by paying alert attention. Even if she is not particularly interested in the subject of the speech, she pays respect to the sincere effort of the speaker by looking at her with a friendly expression that cheers the speaker to her best effort. She does not make any side-comments to her neighbor, not even whispers. To her it is more polite to let the speaker see her face rather than her prowess with knitting needles. She takes the point of view that she is a co-hostess of that club, and she gives to the guest of honor the same attention and consideration that she would give to a guest in her own home.

If you have ever been a speaker at a club or anywhere else, you will know the joy of a mannerly, intelligent, enthusiastic listener.

Queen Mary Visits Chelsea Flower Show

London, May 19—(CP Cable) — Queen Mary, assuming her share of Royal functions during the absence of Their Majesties in Canada, walked over the muddy grounds to view exhibits at the Chelsea Flower Show yesterday and admired a disabled soldier's tattooing.

When Queen Mary insisted in making a complete tour of the flower show despite a heavy rain, officials appointed two "Sir Walter Raleighs" to precede her with planks to bridge the muddy pathways.

Visiting the Disabled Soldiers' Exhibition with other members of the Royal Family, the Queen Mother asked A. Markham, Royal Irish Regiment veteran, to roll up his sleeves so she could better see the tattoed decorations on his arms.

"The Queen was very interested in them and thought they were fine," Markham said.

HOLLOWAY ST. WOMAN'S ASSOCIATION

The monthly meeting and afternoon tea of the Holloway Street Woman's Association was held on Thursday afternoon, May 18th., in the church parlours. The meeting opened with the President, Mrs. A. Sills in the chair by all singing "Take Time to be Holy" followed by prayer by Mrs. Mason. Scripture lesson, Psalm 34 was read by Mrs. G. Kerr. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Treasurer's report and reports of various secretaries were given. Several matters of business were then discussed. The members were favored with a duet "Pilot Me" by Mrs. C. MacDonald and Miss Phyllis May very ably rendered. A reading "Mrs. 'Arris at the Telephone" by Mrs. J. Cordes was very much enjoyed by all. The meeting closed by all repeating the Mizpah benediction. Mrs. Hitchon and her group served very dainty refreshments. The tea table looked most attractive centred with lovely Spring flowers. Mrs. G. Kerr and Miss S. McCroddan pouring tea. Those assisting with serving were Mrs. A. Hitchon, Mrs. C. MacDonald and Mrs. A. Sills.

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, May 20

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EVENTFUL, stirring and productive day is forecast, with affairs moving at high tension, despite certain depressing and menacing lunar aspects. If the mind is alert to fraud, duplicity and subtle "boring from within," even audacious propositions may have conspicious success. A change of plans or location may bring benefit.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of important accomplishment in productive lines in spite of menacing, depressing and undermining conditions. With alertness to sinister situations, treachery, fraud and peculiar pitfalls which may involve mental and nervous reactions, major programs may be successfully launched. Reorganized plans or new environs would prove of benefit.

A child born on this day, although versatile, original and audacious, may also have peculiar or deep-seated undercurrents which may undermine its success. Intrigue, expediency, craftiness and sensationalism may prove detrimental unless early direction be exercised and high principle inculcated.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. WILLIAM H. LUFFMAN

The funeral of Mrs. William Henry Luffman took place from the family residence, 213 Dundas Street East, on Thursday afternoon, May 18th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, pastor of Bridge Street United Church and the Rev. L. S. Wight.

The bearers were Messrs, Armour Reid, Stanley Luffman, Gerald Luffman, Glen Luffman, John Luffman and Dr. A. W. Brown.

LATE MRS. BERTHA McWILLIAMS

The funeral of Mrs. Bertha McWilliams, widow of Norman McWilliams, and a former resident of this city, took place from the Belleghem Funeral Home, Peterboro, on Thursday afternoon, May 18th., to the Belleville Cemetery where interment was made. The service in the chapel at the funeral home and at the graveside was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Patterson of Peterboro.

The bearers here were Messrs. Charles Ostrom, R. H. Ketcheson, George H. Thompson, Isaac Sills, S. Charlton and W. H. Brooks.

The late Mrs. McWilliams was visiting her son, Mr. Claude McWilliams in Peterboro and passed suddenly on Monday, May 15th.

IF YOU FEEL SUNK
Read this and cheer up

Are you so blue that life is no longer worth living? Do you cry easily? Do you feel low, mean, depressed—just absolutely SUNK?

Then here's good news for you in case you need a good general system tonic—Just take famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Let its wholesome herbs and roots help Nature build up more physical resistance and tone up your system, so that it can more easily throw off the "blues" and give more energy to enjoy life.

MILLIONS of women have depended upon this Compound and have passed the word along to friends and neighbors, and to their children.

Why not take Pinkham's Compound and go "smiling thru"?

NEW FLORAL BEDS AT CEMETERY ENTRANCE

New floral effects now in the process of installation will add to the attractive appearance of Belleville cemetery according to Mr. Arthur Thomas. Banks of petunia and tulips have been placed near the main entrance in unique designs, while many additions have been made to other flower beds in the cemetery.

Roadways and paths have received the Spring tuning up and the cemetery generally presents a fresh appearance.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Pacific Liner"

"Pacific Liner" featuring Victor McLaglen and Chester Morris, is one of the two feature attractions now playing at the McCarthy Theatre and for two-fisted action, high adventure and exciting film entertainment "Pacific Liner" is the most powerful dramatic story to reach the screen this year.

The doctor-nurse theme is given a novel twist in this entertaining story by the unique background. The entire action transpires on board an ocean liner bound for San Francisco from Shanghai, with Morris playing a ship's doctor and Wendy Barrie his assisting nurse. McLaglen is cast as a hard-boiled chief engineer whose tyrannical rule over the engine room has won him a wide reputation as a belligerent bully, but of inestimable value to any steamship line.

The romantic triangle involving the doctor, his nurse and the engineer; the conflict between the two strong-willed men, an epidemic that takes a terrific toll in the grimy stoke-hold, and the efforts of the engineer to bring the stricken vessel into port on schedule, represent the foundation of the story's sweeping drama.

McLaglen's performance as the bullying officer ranks is one of his best characterizations. His role is unusually difficult because of the necessity of injecting sympathy into his portrayal of a dictatorial, almost brutal engineer. Morris, as the easy-going but determined doctor, and Miss Barrie, as the cool, efficient nurse, make a noteworthy romantic team, and their roles require deft, dramatic delineations.

Others in the cast who stand out prominently are Barry Fitzgerald, Alan Hale and Allan Lane. Lew Landers is credited with the direction of "Pacific Liner," which was produced by Robert Sisk, while Anthony Coldeway and Henry Robert Symonds turned in a highly original story for John Twist to adapt to the screen.

The companion feature "They Wanted to Marry," featuring Betty Furness and Gordon Jones, takes the prize for being one of the best romantic-comedy features to come from Hollywood in a long time. The story deals with the repeated attempts of a newspaperman and an heiress to get married, which roles Miss Furness and Gordon Jones in truly one of the peppiest laugh-fests portray to perfection. On the program in addition to the feature presentations, another episode of the serial "Flying G-Men," is also shown.

AT THE BELLE

"THE HARDY'S RIDE HIGH"

The screen saga of a family against the world, yet with it and distinctly a part of it, continues in "The Hardy's Ride High", sixth of this remarkable series, which is next at the Belle Theatre. Successful primarily because of their human qualities, none of the five Hardy pictures which have gone before, had more of human nature in it. Here, the Hardy family acquires riches. Every normal family has dreamed of wealth and what they would do with it. Not many have actually acquired it. The Hardys leave their little town of Carvel for a mansion in Detroit. Their charge account is unlimited and only the Hardy conscience is their guide.

Lewis Stone as always the philosophical Judge Hardy, keeps his feet on the ground when the Hardys ride highest. So, too, does Fay Holden as Emily Hardy, the wife and mother. When the fortune eventually dissolves her sole loot is an old-fashioned iron frying pan which she has always wanted. The Judge has a new silk hat which she brought for him but which he doesn't want and for which he has no use back in Carvel.

Mickey Rooney, swept by the sudden turn of events, becomes a young man-about-town for one night only, and his acting in this sequence alone qualifies him for the stardom which he recently rated. Sara Haden, as the maiden Aunt Milly, blooms with new glamour as she encounters a middle-aged business man whose object, apparently is matrimony. Her romance crashes the night he proposes an adventure in real estate—with her money and his real estate.

The story, briefly, takes the Hardys to Detroit to claim a fortune left by an ancestor. They move into the estate and are greeted by a butler, impeccable in the person of Halliwell Hobbes. Cecilia Parker, as Marian Hardy, immediately buys lavish gowns and charges them. Mickey is enamored of a cabaret girl, portrayed by the lovely Virginia Grey. But when she permits him to call on her at her chromium apartment Mickey, terrified, turns and runs out. Judge Hardy delves into his private papers to learn that he is not the legal heir. He may, if he chooses, destroy the evidence and keep the fortune. But he does not hesitate. The wealth is renounced and the Hardy family returns to Carvel, Mickey to resume where he left off with Polly Benedict, played by Ann Rutherford.

The popular Belle Newsreel and an extremely funny Walt Disney cartoon "Goody and Wilbur" will be presented on the same program, with another of the Crime Does Not Pay stories entitled "A Criminal Is Born."

The romantic stars of "Alexander's Ragtime Band"—Tyrone Power and Alice Faye—are joined by Al Jolson in this new 20th Century-Fox film which comes to the Belle Sunday midnight for a special preview presentation. A great surrounding show is also announced for exhibition.

Value of Musical Training of Children Stressed in Address by Geo. Maybee

King George Home and School Association Entertains Visiting Members

The regular meeting of the King George Home and School Association was held Wednesday evening, May 17 in the Auditorium with the President, Mrs. R. Ashbury in the chair. The meeting opened by singing "O Canada" after which the president welcomed the visitors, the members and guests.

The Association was privileged to have as guests the Queen Alexandra and the College Street, Trenton, Home and School Associations. Community singing of patriotic songs led by Mr. G. Maybee met with enthusiastic response. Mrs. J. Arnott then read the creed of the Home and School Association. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were read and approved.

Mrs. W. Harrison gave an informative report on the committee that was appointed to obtain a list of pictures coming to the two theatres. Letters of acceptance to invitations extended were read from the Queen Alexandra and College St., Trenton, Home and School Association and regrets from the Picton Home and School Association.

Mr. George Maybee, guest-speaker, was then introduced by the President. He said that music is one of our most cultural arts and to have an understanding and love of good music brings much happiness to the individual. Through his music classes throughout the city, Mr. Maybee teaches an appreciation of good music by means of gramaphone records and the radio. He described the different instruments used and demonstrates their tones. Many of the pupils have shown their interest by reporting hearing these instruments afterwards. A sense of rhythm is present even before melody. Modern music is based largely on this. Music is a common language all may understand and has an appeal even to a most uneducated person. Our system is not as highly developed as in England. There the children are taught at an earlier age. The subject is carried on from day to day by the music teachers in our schools. Mr. Maybee stated that in a recent test in the higher grades of the school the question was asked "What is Your Favorite Piece and Why?" Almost ninety per cent. selected a classical number.

A number of Mr. Maybee's pupils demonstrated the splendid results of these music classes. On behalf of the club a hearty vote of thanks was given by Mrs. C. Bankey for the instructive address and the singing by the pupils. Appreciation was also expressed by the presidents of the visiting associations. The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem after which refreshments were served in the Teachers' Room by Mrs. Little, and her capable refreshment Committee. Mrs. L. A. Kells and Mrs. C. Brown poured tea and a social hour was spent.

"WE USED TO LOOK TRAGIC"
"THERE'S NOW NE'ER A TRACE OF THAT YELLOW"

The "Blue magic" that restores whiteness to white things is a swish or two of Reckitt's Blue in the last rinsing water. No extra effort and it costs only a cent or two a month.

White is actually made up of seven colours, one of which is blue. Without Reckitt's Blue, white things, after repeated washings, turn to a faint yellow.

Madoc

Madoc — The members of Trinity Women's Club met in the parlors of the United Church with a fair attendance on Wednesday evening.

During the devotional period conducted by Miss K. McDermid, the thought of fitting praise and thanksgiving for the miracle of Spring, in all its beauty, was evident in the selection of hymns, Scripture passages and in prayer. Also was one appropriately reminded of the divine guidance being sought for the welfare of our King and Queen in this, their momentous visit to their largest Dominion. A brief outline of the important requisites for a wider life, through Christian methods was in conclusion presented by Miss McDermid.

The president, Mrs. R. C. R. Cummings, with the assistance of the secretary, Miss M. Ferguson, and the treasurer, Mrs. Jas. Irwin, conducted the business period. Progress in a financial standing and the manner in which assistance has been proffered needy families is indeed pleasing to note. That the last meeting of the term should be held at the cottage of Mrs. Robert Bristol in June for all mmebers and those interested was heartily agreed upon.

Led by Mrs. Murray Smith a lively contest was enjoyed after which much merriment and amusement was created by the costumed orchestra under the enthusiastic leadership of Miss Bronson, having as its members Misses M. Ferguson, E. Salisbury, Mesdames W. Hulin, T. Jones, B. Tanner and L. Ashley.

Miss Doris Broad pleasingly offered two humorous recitations.

Hospitality in a social half hour was extended by Mrs. R. Bristol, Mrs. Murray Smith and Misses Sadie and Anna Smith.

Quick Relief From STOMACH PAIN

To neglect pain and distress in the stomach, however slight, is to court serious trouble. Such disturbance is usually due to excess acid attacking the delicate stomach lining. At the first hint of pain or distress, take Maclean Brand Stomach Powder. Its four properly balanced and potent alkalies neutralize the excess acid, sweeten the stomach, stop pain, aid elimination of fermenting waste and protect the stomach walls against the biting attack of the acid. Get a bottle and keep it handy. Be sure to ask for Maclean Brand Stomach Powder, which is only genuine if the signature "Alex. C. Maclean" appears on bottle and carton. It is not sold loose, but only in bottles in cartons, of powder or tablets—at druggists—75c; family size, $1.75. 137

Plainfield

Plainfield — The United Church Young People held their closing meeting for this term in the church on Tuesday evening with an attendance of eighty. Rev. D. T. McClintock of the Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, assisted by Mr. Edmison, presented pictures of a trip across Canada combined with a number of views made from pictures which Mr. McClintock had taken himself some years ago during his term of work in Fernley, British Columbia and during the time that he was Secretary of Social Service and Evangelism for the former Presbyterian church. Mr. McClintock showed pictures of the ship which is to convey Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth on their return journey and of several of the hotels where they are to be entertained while making a trip across Canada. Systems of irrigation in British Columbia, of mountains, mountain climbing and western agricultural and industrial life were very interesting and instructive. The dangers connected with mining, especially with coal mining, were quite evident from some of the views shown.

Mrs. Everson presiding opened the meeting with "Ye Hosts of Christians," after which all joined in repeating the Lord's prayer. Mrs. Arthur F. Hall presided at the piano. The order for the worship service was followed from the blickboard. Quiet music was followed with singing, "Yield Not to Temptation." The Scripture lesson from St. Mark was read by Mr. Allan Deid. Mr. Everson told the story, "Settling the Muddy Waters" from "The Armour of Youth." Mrs. Arthur F. Hall sang "I Will be True." Rev. Mr. McClintock offered prayer. The offering was received by Mr. Oscar Moore and Mr. Fred Prindle and dedicated. Mr. Everson introduced Mr. McClintock and at the close of his lecture on behalf of the Young People, thanked him for his trouble in coming to Plainfield and for the very interesting way in which he had explained the views. The service was closed by singing the National Anthem. The offering amounted to $2.91.

Since January first the Young People have held ten meetings with an average attendance of thirty and have raised $5.54 for the Missionary and Maintenance work of the church.

His many friends extend congratulations to Mr. Robert A. Hall, who on Thursday celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Garrison are preparing to vacate the Tummon house and intend to move into the home across the river owned by Mr. Norman Hall.

Miss Verna Prindle, of Corbyville, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Prindle.

The Latta Post Office was officially closed on Monday evening and on Tuesday the Inspector transferred the Plainfield office from Mr. Frank Creeper's to the store of Mr. Clarence A. Platt, who now does the work the two offices did previously. The rural mail delivery begins now at Mr. Platt's instead of from Latta as formerly.

Miss Stapley, of Brighton, is at present staying with Mrs. James Gilbert, Latta.

Marmora

Marmora — Mr. R. G. Winters of Port Perry has been appointed station agent at Marmora C.N.R. station and assumed duties on Thursday.

Tweed

Tweed—On Sunday evening the C.G.I.T. group under the direction of their leader, Miss Bessie Gordon, participated in the service at the United Church. The girls with their mothers occupied the front seats. Shirley Leal and Audrey Dales acted as ushers and Helen Orr read the Scripture lesson. Rev. H. L. Morrison gave a special address to the girls, referring to an Old Testament Jewish girl, whose admirable qualities would have entitled her to membership in any C.G.I.T. group.

Owing to the curtailment of the Royal Visit to Kingston to a brief thirty-five minutes, the C.N.R. special train which was scheduled to run from Tweed has been cancelled and school children generally from this district will be denied the privilege of seeing the King and Queen. A number are motoring to Ottawa or Toronto with their parents for that purpose.

The pickerel season opened on Tuesday, May 16th and a number of fishermen report excellent luck.

Deseronto

His Majesty Finishes Inspection of Guard of Honor at Historic Quebec

This excellent close-up shows the King as he turned from his inspection of the guard of honor drawn up at Quebec, to rejoin the Queen, who had remained on a dais during the review. A detachment of the guard marches with him, while behind him, in the plumed hat, walks Col. Percy Flynn, commandant of the citadel in Quebec. The guard of honor was drawn from the 22nd Royal Regiment of Quebec.

Pupils of Centre Hastings Schools Participate in Music Festival

Tweed, May 19.—A musical festival was held in Tweed on Tuesday, May 16. This event, the first of its kind ever held locally, was the object of keen interest not only to those who participated and their parents and teachers but also to the general public.

Too much praise cannot be given to Mr. W. G. Morris, teacher of music in some twenty rural schools of Centre Hastings, through whose efforts this festival was made possible. Mr. Morris was most loyally supported by the teachers of the schools in which he gives musical instruction.

Mr. G. Roy Fenwick, Musical Supervisor for the Province of Ontario, acted as adjudicator and complimented the participants and their instructors on the excellent progress which they had made during the few brief months of training since the teaching of music had been introduced into the schools.

Mr. Fenwick suggested that an improvement in the tone quality would be a decided advantage. There are two types of voices, the singing voice which is beautiful to hear and which should roll out "like smoke from a chimney", and the shouting voice which is not beautiful to bear and which comes out "like bullets from a gun". There should be no straining or forcing of the voice when singing.

The Minister of Education is very anxious that music should be taught in all the elementary schools of the province. In fact it is practically a compulsory subject. Liberal grants are paid to school boards to encourage them to introduce the teaching of music. Four years ago music was taught in 42 per cent of the classrooms of the province. It is now taught in 80 per cent of the rooms.

Mr. Fenwick was introduced to the audience by the chairman, Rev. H. L. Morrison.

The festival which was held during the afternoon at the Auditorium and Opera House drew large crowds especially from the school sections in which the schools are situated.

The following is a list of the schools entered in the competition, and their teachers.

In the evening a grand concert was held taxing to the utmost the capacity of both halls, with even standing room being at a premium. The program featured the winners of festival numbers and also a miscellaneous program of singing games, instrumental numbers and choruses. A choir of sixty pupils of Tweed Consolidated School sang two very fine numbers at the Auditorium. The selections given were "Dear Canada, Dear Land o' Mine" and "Land of Glad Tomorrows"? Miss Lois Richaruson, teacher of music in the school, played the accompaniments, while Mr. S. H. Connor, the principal of the school, directed the choir.

Mr. A. W. McGuire, B.A., I.P.S., acted as chairman of the concert at the Opera House. The program began here at 7.30 and most of the numbers were repeated at the auditorium where the program began at 8.15. Rev. H. L. Morrison, B.A., was chairman.

The following is the program as given at the Auditorium:

County chorus; senior girl, vocal solo, Teresa Wannamaker; junior girl, vocal solo, Dorothy Cooney; senior boy, vocal solo, Francis Mulroney; junior boy, vocal solo, Gene Mulroney; piano solo, Thomas Cassidy; piano solo, Bobby Elliott; violin solo, Stafford Cassidy; guitar solo, Earl Curry; ungraded school chorus, Miss Stillman's school; graded school chorus, Sulphide (O. minor Senate amendments to the bill to create a defence purchasing board.

Defence Estimates Complete

When the defence estimates were completed, Finance Minister Dunning introduced the resolution on his bill to amend the Income Tax Act to exempt industries to the extent of 10 per cent of new capital expenditures undertaken this year, the exemption to be spread over three years.

Broadening of the original scheme was proposed by the minister so that if an industry did not earn enough income within the three years to permit its full exemption, that tax credit would be available up to the end of six years.

R J. Deachman, (Lib.-Huron North), submitted that this whole scheme was a "rear door approach" to the problem of increasing employment. The Government might better lower the sales tax and so increase consumptive demand.

Mr. Dunning said the plan was entirely experimental. Parliament would watch closely to see how industry responded to this opportunity. As to the Sales Tax, it was a curious phenomenon that every increase in the tax had been followed by a more than proportionate increase in the aggregate return from that source. Debate on the resolution was not concluded.

Against Commissions

A protest against commissions and inquiries which were vexatious to business men and achieved no useful purpose, was voiced by Dave Spence, (Cons. Toronto-Parkdale) as a bill to regulate stockyards and livestock exchanges received third reading. He was the only speaker.

The bill contains a clause authorizing the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the livestock industry or any phase of livestock marketing Mr. Spence said that as a business man he had some knowledge of inquiries conducted by lawyers and he hoped the clause would either be struck out or ignored.

"If you appoint this commissioner," he said, "it will be a waste of public money and just giving a job to some fellow who will make a lot of money for nothing"

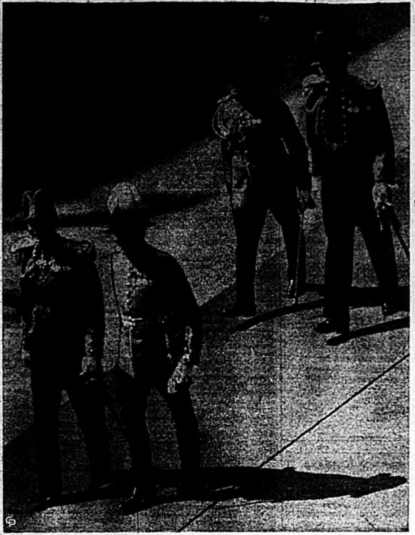
Commandant Accompanies His Majesty to Quebec Citadel



Smiling, dignified, and at the same time as informal as the occasion would allow, the King, attired in the full dress uniformof an admiral of the navy, strides beside Col. Percy Flynn, commandant of the citadel in Quebec, following the debarkation of Their Majesties at Quebec, starting point of their triumphant tour of the Dominion. Behind the King, who chatted with Col. Flynn, is Capt. Poirier, M.M., captain of the royal guard, wearing a huge bearskin busby and beside him one of the equerries accompanying Their Majesties on the tour

Rural Quebec Honors Rulers

Montreal, May 18 (CP)—On their 186 mile trip from Quebec City to Montreal in their magnificent royal train, the King and Queen today saw Quebec painted on a broad canvas, compared with the miniature they witnessed in Quebec City yesterday.

Industrious habitants dropped their farm work and gathered at every crossroad along the route waiting to cheer Their Majesties even though they often were given only a glimpse of them through train windows. They came in trucks, in buggies, farm wagons and afoot.

Each station was decorated, each farm house had its flags over haystacks—Union Jacks mixed with the tricolor of France and the Papal flag but all were meant as a welcoming sign for Their Majesties.

Sometimes the groups at crossroads held only five or ten persons. Sometimes, as at Three Rivers, there were thousands. But everywhere, including as they did grandparents and babies in arms, they gave indication of including every member of the community.

Advice on Fatigue Fine News for Children

If Belleville children, or children from any other city or town who are to visit Kingston on Sunday afternoon, feel like munching candy bars, popcorn or peanuts in the crowd they will be wise to do so, a Kingston doctor has advised the committee at Kingston in charge of arrangements there.

A hint for crowds in other places as well as Kingston is contained in the advice given by the Kingston medical man.

"Keep munching away while waiting for the King and Queen, for it keeps the stomach occupied and keeps a person from getting faint. Candy or sugar of any kind, and carbohydrates are the quickest sources of energy," he stated.

The fatigue of standing can best be combatted by eating candy, drinking soft drinks or other fluids, for they give off a great many calories. People who intend standing in crowds for any lengthy period are also advised to fortify themselves with a heavy meal beforehand composed of proteins contained in meats and fats. If a person is going to stand for a long time they are advised also that milk, vegetables and fruit are also the best of foods.

Hurled Bodily From Moving Car

When the automobile in which he was riding turned over twice into the ditch, Lee Duguette, Flinton, was hurled bodily from the front seat into the rear and was practically out of one of the broken windows when the car came to rest. Fortunately the passenger, as well as the driver of the vehicle, Wilfred Duguette, also of Flinton, escaped unscathed.

The Duguettes were proceeding southerly on the Tweed road when another motor car, driven by J. W. Maines, Roslin, came out of the third concession of Huntingdon road and was in collision with the Duguette vehicle.

Provincial Constable D. Carruthers investigated the accident and found little damage resulted to the Maines car, but the Duguette vehicle was badly damaged as it rolled over in the west ditch. All of the windows in the latter vehicle were broken, Lee Duguette being hurled through one window in the rear without sustaining injury. Lee Duguette was riding in the front with the driver at the time of the impact.

West Huntingdon

West Huntingdon—The farmers would welcome a warm rain. The recent cold winds and also frosts have retarded the growth of meadows and pastures.

Extra large crowds attended the Mothers' Day services in both the St. Andrew's and United Churches on Sunday. At St. Andrew's the program as prepared by the Board of Education was followed. Rev. W. H. V. Walker gave an excellent address on "A Mother's Secret Longings For Her Child." Mr. Walker also conducted a baptismal service when Robert Wayne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw, was baptised. The choir rendered an anthem. Mrs. K. Nickel and Miss Annie Fleming gave a duet.

At the United Church the program as prepared by the O.R.E.C. was followed. In the absence of the minister, Rev. W. R. Tristram, Mr. Arthur Wilson had charge of the service, giving the address on the subject, "Silver Threads Among the Gold." The text was from Genesis, "And Adam called his wife's name Eve, because she was the mother of all living." The hymn recently composed by Mr. Geo. A. Kingston of Toronto to Their Majesties, was sung at this service. Miss Irene Elliott presided over the music for the entire service. The story, "The Room of Gold" was told by the Misses Annie Cooke, Georgia Pitman, Kathleen Moorcroft and Marjorie Hammond. Mrs. W. J. Fitchett gave a solo. Recitations on Mother's Day were contributed by Dorothy Tristram and Marjorie Wright. Mr. Clifford Elliott also assisted with the service.

Mr. Philip Carr gave the special Mother's Day address at Moira on Sunday morning.

A large number of friends called to see Mrs. Sarah Stapley on Mother's Day.

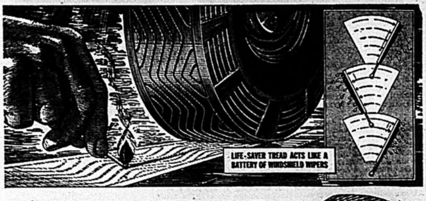
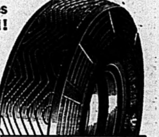
NEW KIND OF TIRE
SWEEPS WET ROADS SO DRY
YOU CAN LIGHT A MATCH ON ITS TRACK!



LIFE-SAVER TREAD ACTS LIKE A BATTERY OF WINDSHIELD WIPERS



Read How This Road-Drying Sensation Gives You Quickest Non-Skid Stops On The Road!

SENSATIONAL? You bet! For here at last is a tire that automatically sweeps wet roads dry—so dry, in fact, that after a quick stop you can actually light a match on its track—convincing proof that the new Goodrich Safety Silvertown with its scientifically designed Life-Saver Tread will stop you quicker, straighter in wet weather driving emergencies than you've ever stopped before!

Turns "Skid Trap" Under Your Car Into Dry Track

And here's the secret of this tire's amazing road-drying ability: As the never-ending spiral bars of the Life-Saver Tread roll over a dangerous film of water, they act like a rapid-fire battery of windshield wipers—sweep the water right and left—force it out through the deep drainage grooves—make a DRY TRACK for the rubber to grip. The very first time you've experienced a SILVERTOWN STOP on a wet slippery pavement you'll realize that you have found a new kind of protection.

Only Silvertowns Give You Golden Ply Blow-out Protection

And as you speed over today's faster highways what a blessed relief to know that Silvertowns also give you that other great life-saving protection—the famous Golden Ply. By resisting internal tire heat, this exclusive Goodrich Golden Ply invention provides you with scientific protection against dangerous high-speed blow-outs.

NO EXTRA COST—But remember, to protect yourself against a possible skid or blow-out tomorrow, you must act today. For safety's sake come in and have your car equipped with streamlined Goodrich Safety Silvertowns. There is no extra cost and they may save your life!

BEST LAST YEAR—BEST THIS YEAR!
● In two series of non-skid tests the regular and premium-priced tires of the six largest tire manufacturers, including new tires which have just been introduced, were tested by the famous independent Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory. Here's their report.
"The new Goodrich Silvertown with the Life-Saver Tread gave greater skid resistance than any other tire tested, including not only the old established tires of these manufacturers—some listed up to 40% higher in price—but also the new tires which were recently tested under the same road conditions."

FREDDIE VASIL SUSPENDED BY SOFTBALL LOOP

Alleged Player Signed Two Certificates Contrary to Regulations

LOOP OPENS MONDAY

Three Int. "A" Teams to Play Series to Determine Squad for Playdowns

Freddie Vasil local softball pitcher was indefinitely suspended from softball at an executive meeting of the Belleville Softball Association last evening. When the softball executive met to pass on the question of playing certificates it was disclosed that Vasil had signed two O.A.S.A. playing certificates, both of which were subsequently found to be invalid and were ordered destroyed, but Vasil was declared suspended and must appear in person to state his actions before the league executive before he may be reinstated. The two signed certificates were declared null and void as one had not been signed in ink by the player, according to O.A.S.A. regulations while discrepancies were alleged in the second certificate.

Considerable business was completed by the local softball executive last evening prior to the official opening of the Belleville Softball League at Coleman Flats diamond on Monday when the 'Oilers' and Corbys meet in the league opener with Don Thomas and Al Ethier being appointed as umpires of the evening.

In the matter of the determination of representation of Belleville in the intermediate "A" series of O.A.S.A. playdowns, the executive decided to terminate Belleville's entry into the provincial intermediate "A" playdowns by a best in three playoff bewteen the Intermediate "A" clubs in the league finishing first and second irrespective of the city league standings, which mean only Dracups, Shell-Aajmaa and Corbys A.C. will be affected in this play-off series, which will be played at the termination of the regular schedule with the executive naming the play-off dates for the intermediates "A" group play-offs.

An assessment of 50c per game played at Coleman Flats diamond was ordered as a rental for the grounds and to meet the oiling expenses levied by the city on the street adjacent to the park. All accounts were passed and President Clem Bowler announced additional grandstand seats were being erected for the accommodation of the patrons of softball this year at Coleman Flats. The diamond has been improved, levelled and ready for the opening game on Monday.

DAVE SCHRINER COMES TO LEAFS FOR 4 PLAYERS

Jackson, Boll, Fowler and Romnes Will Go to the Americans

NATIVE OF CALGARY

Schriner Voted Best Rookie in First Year and Named on C.P. All-Star Team

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—Vern DeGeer, sports editor of the Toronto Globe and Mail, in a newspaper story today said that Dave Schriner, left wing star for New York Americans in the National Hockey League, will come to Toronto Maple Leafs next winter, in one of the biggest deals engineered in Major professional hockey in recent years.

The article said that Harvey Jackson, Buzz Boll, Jimmy Fowler and Doc Romnes, members of the Leafs last year, will go to the A's in return for Schriner, N.H.L. scoring champion in 1935-36 and 1936-37.

Schriner, 26-year old product of Calgary amateur hockey, for years has been ranked with the smartest left boardsmen in the game. He turned professional with Syracuse Stars of the old International League in 1932-33.

Joined Amerks in 1934

He joined the Americans, to whom he belonged, during the 1934-35 season and was voted the N.H.L.'s outstanding rookie. The following year he was voted to the left wing position on The Canadian Press all-star team, being named on the alternate team in the same poll in 1936-37.

Of the Leafs involved, Jackson and Romnes are the most prominent. Romnes, a centre, came to Toronto last year from Chicago Black Hawks, in a trade for Bill Thoms. Jackson has been the ace left winger with the Leafs since the heyday of the famous "kid" line on which he worked with Charlie Conacher and Joe Primeau.

Boll was injured early last season and saw little action. A left-handed shot, he plays either left or right wing, and is considered among the fastest skaters in the league. Fowler, a utility with the Leafs last campaign, plays either defence or forward.

Alice Marble Will Compete At Wimbledon

Chicago, May 19 (AP)—The lure of Hollywood is strong, but thus far not as strong as the lure of Wimbledon in the life of Alice Marble, California's curvacious tennis star.

Miss Marble, United States singles champion, says she has won all the titles she's interested in except the women's championship at the time-honored British tournament.

She now is en route to England, making the trip by easy stages. Miss Marble left Chicago today for Cleveland after spending several days here tuning up her game. She was defeated yesterday in an exhibition match by Chet Murphy, No. 1 man on the University of Chicago teaf, 6-4, 6-2.

"Say, these young fellows are too steady for me," she said, after the match. "Just when you relax, thinking you have a shot laid away, they bang it back at you."

Miss Marble has been toying with the idea of getting into the movies ever since she did a successful turn as night club singer in New Yorb last winter.

"Maybe yes, maybe no," she said, in answer to whether she would turn working gal for the cinema regardless of her success in England this time.

"Ever since I competed at Wimbledon the first time I have had my heart set on winning that championship," Miss Marble explained. "I think this is my year if I do win I can quit if I want to."

"Dead" Ball Does Not Show Reputed Hitting Superiority Enjoyed by American League

Junior League's Margin in Home Runs is Only Fourteen

206 HOMERS HIT

Practically All Games in Either Circuit Yesterday Decided by Homers

(By Judson Bailey Associated Press Sports Writer).

The "dead" baseball which both Major Leagues are using this semester apparently has as many lives as a cat, but bringing the two circuits into conformity on an official ball has, at least, impressed a damper on the American League's reputed hitting superiority.

In the first month of the baseball campaign 206 home runs have gone into the records and the junior league's margin is only 14. The American League averaged 46 homers a month more than the National League last year in arriving at respective totals of 864 and 611.

However, there are even more surprising aspects of the first month's slugging. Cincinnati Reds have hit more home runs than New York Yankees, 24 to 23.

Mize High Socker

Leading individual socker is Johnny Mize of St. Louis Cardinals with seven. There are two other leaguers, Mel Ott of New York Giants and Dolph Camilli of Brooklyn Dodgers, who have hit six, which is the number made by Hank Greenberg, the American League leader.

Bill Herman of Chicago Cubs has uncorked five triples and two other players in the senior circuit have four to their credit. The most any batter in the other loop can boast is three.

Ival Goodman of the Reds has batted in 25 runs already and two others have knocked in 23, which is the figure giving George Selkirk of the Yankees and Gee Walker of Chicago. White Sox the American League lead.

Thus in spite of efforts to help the pitchers, it is obvious both leagues now are pretty much slugging circuses and the best pitchers in the won-and-lost columns are those with the best hitters behind them instead of in front of them. Yesterday's program illustrates the point.

Two Homers in Innings

In the National League, for instance, the Reds beat Boston Bees 3-2, in a hurling duel decided in the first inning when Buck McCormick and Ernie Lombardi homered. The Pirates passed the Phillies, 5-4, in the 10th on Johnny Rizzo's single with the bases loaded. Gabby Hartnett's double with three on in the sixth broke up a hot pitching battle between Bill Lee and Van Mungo to give the Cubs a 4-2 margin over the Dodgers, and the Cardinals showed the value of a steady drumming by distributing six runs through four different innings and beating the Giants, 6-1.

It was the same way for the Yanks who won their eighth consecutive American League game and handed the Browns their fifth straight setback, 8-1, although they did have one typical big inning, when Joe Gordon tripled with the bases loaded.

Homer Wins Game

Bob Estalella stepped to the plate in the last of the ninth with two out and one on and homered to give Washington a 3-2 victory over the Tigers and save a polished four-hit performance by Al Alexandra, and manager Joe Cronin decided a tough contest in favor of his Red Sox, 5-3, by slamming out a triple with two on in the seventh against the White Sox.

There also were two homers in Cleveland's battle with the Athletics, but this one was decided in favor of the A's, by 4-3, when catcher Rollie Hemsley dropped a throw at the plate in the eleventh inning.

Utica Braves Have Hard Time To Win in Can.-Am.

(By The Canadian Press)

First-year ball club or not, Utica Braves must have discovered by now that victories don't come on a silver platter in the Canadian-American League.

The outfit from Utica, N.Y., replacing Auburn Bouleys of last season have played five games in the class C circuit. A casual glance at their win column lends no support to the fact—it needs the one headed "lost" to prove it.

The Braves dropped their fifth straight yesterday a 13-1 setback from the bats of the loop-leading Oswego Netherlands.

Yielding only three hits, Walt Duda subdued the visiting Uticans while his mates crashed through with 21 base hits off the offerings of Horsington and Kane. Outfielders Conlan of Braves belted his third homer of the season to pace the barrage.

The only other squad without a victory, Cornwall Bisons remained in a last place tie when cold weather postponed their scheduled clash with Amsterdam Rugmakers. The postponement also forced Rugmakers, previously tied with Nets, back into second place.

Even here Rugmakers were not alone, for a 6-0 triumph over Ottawa Senators gave Gloversville equal rights to the berth. Bill Gorman blanked Senators with four hits while his mates came through with a five-run rally in the fifth to gain a notch in the standing.

In a battle of extra-base hits, Rome Colonels rounded out the day's play by whipping Ogdensburg Colts 12-7. Colonels picked up six runs in a second inning outburst, then outlasted Colts until darkness halted the game at the end of the eighth.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Bob Estalella, Senators: With two out and Washington one run behind in ninth inning, he homered with one man on base to beat Tigers.

Frank McCormick and Ernie Lombardi, Reds: Hit successive homers to account for all of Cincinnati's runs in 3-2 victory over Bees.

Gabby Hartnett, Cubs: Doubled with bases loaded to drive in three runs to beat Dodgers.

Johnny Rizzo, Pirates: Singled with bases loaded in tenth inning to defeat Phillies.

Joe Gordon, Yankees: Tripled with bases loaded for New York's biggest blast against Browns.

Bob Johnson, Athletics: Homered wit one on in sixth and hit grounder which resulted in error and winning run in tenth inning against Indians.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Today's mail brought a letter from Rotarian Ross E. Neal taking us severely to task for suggesting the members of the Belleville Rotary Club were old men, too old to play softball in the proposed city inter-service club softball league. Mr. Neal points out the Rotarians played a game of softball versus the boys at Moira Lake last summer and fared very well indeed, despite the fact Morley Duff and Harry Ackerman were the umpires. "All we got out of it was a lot of sore muscles, while Charlie Dolan reported the best day's sale of liniment since 1929—or was it before prohibition," says Rotarian Neal, who adds his Rotary contemporaries go in for such strenuous sport as African dominoes and checkers. however, Apparently our original statement, re the Rotarians not being desirous of playing in an inter-service club softball loop was well founded, as they were not represented at the recent meeting when this loop was organized. Frankly speaking we do not blame the Rotarians for not wanting to fraternize with the younger Kinsmen, etc. on the diamond.

"There is one sport in which we do intend to specialize, namely speed boat racing," pointed out Mr. Neal in reference to the forthcoming Gold Cup speed boat races to be held off Massassaga Point this year and sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club in connection with their crippled children's fund. Mr. Neal points out that the best power boat drivers on the continent will be entered in this Gold Cup race, with Belleville's own Rotarian Lloyd Hicks at the helm of his speedy craft. "Instead of softball you might get some member of each local service club to enter a special Belleville "service club" race and if any of the other service clubmen beat our driver (Hicks), they will have something to talk about," challenges Rotarian Neal. It appears as though Mr. Neal is treading on most certain ground, as Lloyd Hicks is an outstanding speed boat operator, but the suggestion is a splendid one and would prove popular if put into effect as a special event.

Three Canadian bicycle riders will be selected from the Canadian Wheelmen's Association to race in South Africa this summer. The trio of Canadian cyclists to make the trip will have all expenses paid by the South African Amateur Cycling Association. With the marked revival of cycling in Canada this year the sports spotlight will at the time be centred on these trio riders. The Canadian riders will leave early in August and will be gone for 96 days. Prior to the selection of these riders a series of events will be held throughout Ontario after which the more proficient cyclists will be named to represent Canada down under.

Jimmy Powers of the New York News reveals: "Bill Killefer was beefing: 'Games nowadays take to long. When Alex (Grover Cleveland Alexander) was out there, one hour and 15 minutes later we were home eating'....I hear Bob Feller won't pitch all those night games for Cleveland....Bob'll have to share with Bill Zuber, Indian rookie with a terrific fast ball .... Minor leaguers who faced it said, 'It doesn't look like an aspirin — just plain millet seed'....Boots Poffenberger says he is glad to be with the Brooklyns on account of they have a smart catching staff."

Minus his two ace moundsmen of last year when they won the league honors Walt Gerow's Napanee Gibbards will have to depend on his junior moundsman of last year, Jack Jacks to stop the Belleville sluggers when the Bay of Quinte League swings into action on Monday morning here. Jack Spratt and Bob Bell, last year's Napanee hurlers, have severed their connections with the Gibbards but knowing Walt Gerow's past baseball history we can warn the local diamond stars not to sell the Napanee nine short for the league opener. Fortunately the Belleville nine is fortified with five hurlers, all of whom are reported to be in exceptionally fine condition following a strenuous spring training period. The local pitching staff include Keith Weeks, Bert Noakes and Sammy Ellis, all lefthanders and Joe Kelleher and a lad named Johnson to look after the other side of the pitching staff.

Monday is to see the official opening of all local sporting activities baseball at the Fair Grounds in the morning, yacht races on the bay in the afternoon, softball in the evening at Coleman Flats as well as golf and tennis at the two local clubs.

When the local softball executive indefinitely suspended Freddie Vasil last night the local "mushball" heads let it be known they intended to operate the local softball realm in a businesslike manner and according to rules. Vasil was found to have signed two playing certificates in the same year, both were declared invalid, however, as one was not signed in ink and the other was not in order either. Two separate play-offs were arranged for softball, one for the city league championship and a second the best in three series, to determine what intermediate "A" club will represent Belleville in the O.A.S.A. playdowns. This latter series will include the two highest Intermediate "A" clubs in the final league standing. Don Thomas and Albert Ethier were named as the umpires for the opening game here on Monday evening.

We're Telling You That they're shuffling up the players in the N.H.L. these days to such an extent that we won't recognize the various uniforms to bedeck some of the players next year....Connie Smythe must have wanted "Sweeney" Schriner badly to trade four players for him, but like the Tigers of earlier in the week who got Buck Newsom, maybe the trade was worthwhile after all....Jack Adams grabbed off Cecil Dillon from the Rangers and at last we find Col. McLaughlin going in for the kids, having purchased several promising minor leaguers yesterday... There'll be many new faces around the N.H.L. next winter... Pittsburg and the Giants are decided disappointments in the National League, while the same holds good for Detroit in the junior circuit....The Reds and the Cards are staging quite a dogfight, but the Yankees steam roller has got under way to win their last eight starts....Tomorrow is our pre-King's Plate day, with all the dope and sure-fire (?) predictions.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—Sentiment improved as the session advanced today and index gains were boarded throughout with the golds getting the main attention and displaying the best demand. Volume crowded the 300,000 share mark, the best in several sessions. Today's session winds up the Toronto Exchange activities until next Tuesday. The King's birthday will be observed on Saturday and Monday is a legal holiday in Toronto for the Royal visit.

Consolidated Smelters backed down to a new low and recovered while Nickel and Noranda firmed fractions Waite-Amulet also was strong. In the gold section moderate gains appeared for Lake Shore, McIntyre and Dome and Kerr-Addison featured the cheaper group with an advance of 7 cents to 1.72 on fair volume.

Western oils, including Home, Anglo-Canadian and Calgary-Edmonton were steady to slightly stronger. Royalite was unchanged. Steels, foods, oils and utilities were strong spots in the industrial section

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 19 (AP)—After an early sell-off in steels, the selected stocks, led by motors, put on a quiet recovery move in today's market for gains running to a point or so.

Volume was a bit larger than in yesterday's sluggish session, but the ticker tape occasionally came to a standstill. Prices were under the best in many cases near the final hour. Transfers were about 450,000 shares.

HOG QUOTATIONS

ONT. MOTOR LEAGUE'S ROAD BOOK CONTAINS MUCH INFORMATION

Crammed full with information of invaluable aid to the tourist and motorist the 1939 edition of the Ontario Motor League's Road Book is just off the press.

Customs regulations of both Canada and the United States, first aid instructions, emergency road service notes, 1939 color schemes for motors in the U.S. and Canada, indexes of routes, cities, towns and villages, districts, the King's Highways in Ontario, maps showing various routes in Canada, the route of the Royal visit, routes, running from Ontario to the New York World's Fair are but a few of the salient features of the book.

Accompanying the publication is a handsome colored roadmap of Ontario and parts of the northern districts of New York State. The map is indexed and can be easily read. This addition will in all likelihood be welcomed by potential tourists and motorists of the district.

MORE PROTECTION FOR LIVE STOCK PRODUCER

Ottawa, May 19—(CP)—Increased regulation over the marketing of live stock and poultry, and especially over the yards operated by packing plants and stockyards, was approved by the House of Commons in committee as the Government's stockyards and live-stock bill was reported for third reading.

Greater protection for the producer in the weighing and grading of his live stock at the stockyards or packing plants was held a necessity by several members. Education of farmers to space their production was also urged so that the market would have a continuous supply, instead of having live stock maturing at only two or three seasons in the year.

Butter Firmer, Eggs Unchanged

Toronto, May 19—Prices were firmer for butter during Thursday's session of the Toronto open produce market, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Cheese was weak and eggs uneasy.

Light arrivals of fresh receipts and more demand combined to tighten the butter market. Buyers proaching holiday .It is expected cover requirements for the apapparently were in the market to that week-end consumption will be increased due to the large number of visitors to this city to witness the royal procession here next Monday. Offerings of the first grade Ontario product were readily absorbed. Prints traded at the unchanged levels of 22c to 22 1-2c for top grades.

Demand was centred principally on grade A-large on the egg market and undergrades were stubborn in clearing. Quotations generally were unchanged, but B and C grades in the graded division eased. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large; 18c for medium, an 16c for B and C grades.

The Montreal open produce market and commodity exchange were closed yesterday, the day the King and Queen visited that city.

700 EXCURSION TICKETS SOLD

Success of the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on Sunday afternoon, May 21st was indicated by the report this morning that to date an estimated total of 700 tickets have been sold to the children by the office of the Canadian National Railways. Sales will be continued by Mr. K. M. Dyson up until five o'clock on Saturday afternoon, or until the quota of 1,000 tickets is sold, it was stated. Accommodation on the special train has been limited to this number.

WARMER WEATHER AND RAIN NEEDED FOR PRODUCE GROWTH

Spring growth has so far been slow in the rural areas of Belleville district, and warm weather and soft rains are needed badly, according to local agricultural officials. The weather has been decidedly backward and cool nights, with int of frost have been holding up growth of most grains. Pastures are good, however, and the fall wheat and clover crops are coming along satisfactorily.

"There is an old saying 'a dry May and a dribbling June makes a farmer whistle a tune" stated a Sidney resident this morning. "And this still holds good. If we get enough rain next month crops will likely turn out all right, but right now is when we need it."

Royalty Sleeps Under Glittering Skies In Luxurious Palace-on-Wheels

Caledonia Springs, Ont., May 19—(CP)—The luxurious palace-on-wheels that is the official residence of Their Majesties in Canada rested last night beside the railway station in Caledonia Springs, and the King and Queen slept aboard their train under glittering skies.

For the first time a British monarch was spending the night in the open Canadian countryside. Overhead the northern lights flashed a brilliant aurora display. Tired from their hectic day in Montreal, the King and Queen may have already been asleep when the royal train reached its stopping place here, 65 miles east of Ottawa.

No sound disturbed the night scene. A few passing trains were under orders to slow down as they passed. No patriotic engine crew was to greet Their Majesties with a whistle blast.

Near the cars stood searchlights, like floodlights for a movie set, ready to make any point as light as day.

When the 12-car special rolled to a new, specially-built siding, switches were thrown and spiked. A Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer was assigned to guard each Switch.

All night long police guarded the train, walking beats along either side of the train as if on a city street. Further back from the train, at the nearest roads, other police stood guard. The station and its platform were closed to local use.

By the side of the royal train stood the pilot section in which slept newspaper correspondents, some protective officers and royal visit officials, but no cars stood directly opposite the two coaches occupied by the King and Queen.

Nothing untoward was expected to happen in the night; nothing did.

Day revealed gray skies with splattering rain and chilly wind. From their observation car, the Royal Couple could see flat green fields and in the distance low rolling hills, a scene not unlike the Queen's native Scotland.

Heaviest Passenger Traffic Expected Over the Weekend

Heaviest traffic in the history of the local division of the Canadian National Railways over the week end is anticipated by local officials who are preparing for the greatest number of passengers probably ever registered. Several trains have been arranged for the east and west trips out of Belleville during the day, to Kingston and Toronto.

Two Toronto Specials

Two specials will be run to Toronto on Monday, May 22 from Belleville according to a full schedule which has been announced. Trains No. 9 leaving Belleville for Toronto at 5.50, and train No. 10 leaving Toronto at 1.55 for Belleville have been cancelled. One special leaving Belleville at 8.00 a.m. will arrive in Toronto at Riverdale Park substation at 10.50 a.m. Another special will leave Belleville at 6.00 a.m. and arrive in Toronto at the Union Station at 9.00 a.m. Above schedule is standard time.

Obituary

LATE FELIX DORAN

(Stoco)

The funeral of the late Felix Doran of Stoco, took place this morning from the residence of his sister, Mrs. D. Donoghue, 161 William Street. Father J. J. Collins celebrated Requiem Mass at St. Michael's Church and conducted the rites at the graveside.

During the offertory, John Fahey sang "Pray for the Dead" and following Mass Harold Barrett sang "Nearer My God to Thee".

Pallbearers were Messrs. Hugh Reid, D. Culhane, J. McCabe, J. MacAvoy, Dan Gallagher, J. Fleming.

PROTEST PARADES

In three hours of street fighting last evening—a clash between some 5,000 Jewish youths and police on Jerusalem's Jaffa Road—these were the casualties:—

Dead:

A constable, shot with a Mauser pistol.

Injured:

A constable, in serious condition from bullet wounds.

Ten constables, under hospital treatment for various injuries.

Fifteen constables, treated at hospitals and released.

About 130 Jews, most of them between the ages of 10 and 16, perhaps a dozen of them still under hospital care.

THE KING ACCEPTS

He added that "the cloce friendship between my Canadian people and their neighbors makes us look forward to the visit (to the U.S.) with particular pleasure."

His Majesty was escorted to the study by Lord Tweedsmuir after the Royal procession arrived at Rideau Hall from the Island Park Drive railway platform where they stepped from the Royal train.

It was the first official function for the King in the capital. Prime Minister Mackenzie King, as Secretary of State for External Affairs, witnessed the ceremony with the American Legation staff.

Mr. Roper first paid his respects to his Majesty and then proceeded to read the message. The King read his in reply.

Following the presentation, the new minister joined other foreign diplomats in Ottawa at a reception given by the King. The Queen received the Ministers' wives.

Text of Mr. Roper's message follows:

"Your Majesty:

"I have the honor to place in the hands of your Majesty the letter whereby the President accredits me as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Sanada.

"The President asks that I convey to your Majesty the assurances of wishes for the continued happiness and well-being of the Canadian people.

"At his request, it is also my duty to deliver to your Majesty the letter of recall of my distinguished predecessor, Mr. Norman Armour, whose term of office in Canada was the source of deep satisfaction to my government.

"It was the privilege of Mr. Armour to assume his duties as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Canada at a time when all British peoples were engaged in celebrating the silver jubilee of his late Majesty King George V. It is a source of equal gratification to me that my mission in this capital will coincide with the first sojourn of a reigning Sovereign among his Canadian subjects.

"The American people could not fail to be conscious of the anticipation with which this significant event has been awaited throughout the length and breadth of Canada and at the request of the President I am happy to convey the best wishes of the American people for the unqualified success of your Majesties' journey.

"The President and the people of my country are likewise looking forward with keen pleasure to theh visit of your Majesties to the United States next month In addition to personal considerations the feelings of the American people toward their Canadian neighbors will be reflected in the warmth of the welcome which will be accorded your Majesties."

The King's Message.

Text of the King's message follows:

"I am greatly pleased to receive the letter of the President of the United States of America appointing you to the position of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States to Canada and to extend to you on behalf of my people in Canada a very cordial welcome to our country.

"Would you convey to the President of the United States my sincere thanks for the assurances of friendship and his good wishes for the happiness and welfare of the Canadian people, which I cordially reciprocate.

"I thank you for bringing the letter of recall of your distinguished predecessor, Mr. Norman Armour, who, during his stay in Canada, was held in high esteem and regard.

Mr. Armour's Mission.

"It is pleasant to recall that the beginning of Mr. Armour's mission coincided with the Silver Jubilee of my father. I am happy that your own mission should begin at this time.

"I thank you warmly for the good wishes for the success of our journey which the President has requested you to convey to the Queen and myself on behalf of the people of the United States.

"I also highly appreciate your references to our forthcoming visit to your country. The close friendship between my Canadian people and their neighbors, to which the President refers, makes us look forward to the visit with particular pleasure.

"I trust that your term of office will be marked by happiness and interest and that the friendly ties and associations between our peoples may be further strengthened by your presence in Canada."

SCENE IS HISTORIC

Five minutes later they were driving through the Experimental Farm. Large waving and cheering crowds lined the beautiful driveway through the farm.

Postillions Ride Horses

Two postillions rode the horses of the carriage, wearing long black coats, white breeches and black silk hats adorned with white cockades. Riding behind their Majesties were scarlet-coated coachmen.

As they entered the coach neither had any protection for their dress from possible rain but grey carriage robes were placed over their knees.

The Queen stayed under the station canopy out of sight of the crowd while the guard of honor was inspected and the thousands yelled for her appearance and cheered lustily as she emerged.

Several people fainted as those behind pressed forward for a glimpse of their Majesties.

At the station a Royal Standard was hoisted above the canopy as soon as the King stepped from the train. As the state coach moved away a naval officer lowered it.

Ten thousand school children and aged and crippled persons greeted their Majesties at Lansdowne Park, two miles from the station. They arrived at 11.40 a.m., E.D.T., ten minutes ahead of schedule. The King and Queen drove into the park and their landau was stopped for two minutes while the children rose and sang "God Save the King." There were two stretcher cases among the convalescents.

The royal couple drove slowly around the football field and then headed down the driveway toward the centre of the city.

Pass War Memorial

The royal couple passed the War Memorial in the centre of the city at 12.03 p.m. E.D.T.

Those clustered around the national monument had the advantage of a vision which embraced the broad sweep of the driveway. At the stroke of noon the brilliant red tunics and the flashing helmets of the escort emerged from under the Laurier Avenue bridge. But their Majesties appearance had already been heralded with roars of cheering which ruffled along the whole line of the procession.

From the bridge to the National War Memorial a crowd estimated at between 10,000 and 15,000 thronged the driveway, lined six and eight deep.

Through these lines trotted the royal escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons, who had picked up that duty from the Princess Louise's Dragoon Guards at Lansdowne Park.

Arrival at Rideau Hall

The royal couple arrived at Rideau Hall on schedule at 12.20 p.m. E.D.T., to hear the band of the Royal Canadian Air Force playing the National Anthem.

Immediately after arriving at Rideau Hall his Majesty accepted the credentials of Daniel C. Roper, new United States Minister to Canada. It was the first time a representative of a foreign government in Canada had presented his credentials to a British King.

Diplomatic representatives were then received and their Majesties had luncheon privately with Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir before preparing for the ceremony of assent in the Senate this afternoon, a reception for newspapermen and women accompanying them on their tour and the state dinner tonight.

The King To Give Assent

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—Men in morning attire and women in many shades of lovely evening dresses began to assemble early this afternoon in the richly adorned Senate Chamber to witness the picturesque ceremony of the King, for the first time in history, give assent to the bills passed by Canada's Parliament.

In the past such assent has been given by the Governor-General or his deputy, usually the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

The desks had been removed from the Chamber to provide room for the Senators and their wives, Members of the Supreme Court, distinguished clergy and officials in the high brackets of the Canadian Order of Precedence with their wives and daughters Those who could not be accommodated on the Senate floor occupied the galleries.

At the usual Parliamentary opening many sit in seats in the Square before the Chamber and in the corridors, but today no one was permitted to be seated outside the Chamber. Accordingly the number of invitations issued was much less than at an opening.

Time-Honored Ritual

The time-honored ritual of royal assent is always closely followed. All the guests were told to be in their places along with the Senators at 2.20 p.m. E.D.T., 40 minutes before the King's arrival and shortly before the Speaker's entrance. The Speaker's procession is headed by Gentleman Usher of Black Rod, Major Drew Thompson, and Speaker Foster, accompanied by Clerk Claire Moyer and Clerk Assistant Dr. L. P. Gauthier.

The Speaker occupies a seat on the floor level in front of the throne and reads the prayers. Government Leader Dandurand gives notice of the length of time the Senate would adjourn after the ceremonies and the Senate adjourns until shortly before the arrival of Their Majesties. When Their Majesties are on the throne the Black Rod goes to the Commons to summon them to the Senate to witness the royal assent. Then follows the ritual for royal assent.

Holding seven public bills in his hand the clerk assistant bows low to Their Majesties and says "May it please Your Majesty the Senate and House of Commons have passed certain bills to which they humbly request Your Majesty's assent." He repeats it in French.

The King Nods Assent

After the King nods assent or gives it verbally the clerk says: "His Majesty doth assent to these bills" in English and French. To emphasize that the Commons alone has the power to vote money for the maintenance of His Majesty's Government in Canada, Speaker Pierre Casgrain of the Commons then says, "May it please Your Majesty the Commons of Canada have voted certain sums required to enable the Government to defray expenses of public service. In the name of the Commons I present Your Majesty a bill entitled an act granting certain sums of money for His Majesty's service to which I humbly request your assent." The clerk then reads the title and says 'His Majesty thanks his loyal subjects, accepts their benevolence and assents to this bill."

Later His Majesty will sign the bills, probably tomorrow. On the private bills will be written, "I assent to this bill" after which the King signs "George R.I." In the case of the supply bill there will be written "I thank my loyal subjects, accept their benevolence and assent to this bill."

CHAMBERLAIN

they were not prepared to do themselves," he insisted. "They have always wanted the arrangement to be reciprocal."

The Prime Minister spoke in reply to David Lloyd George, wartime prime minister, who demanded speedy conclusion of a pact with Russia, and Clement Attlee, Labor opposition leader, who urged a clear cut foreign policy.

Mr. Chamberlain admitted the colonial question must form a part of any long-range peace plan, but he added this warning:

"We, in this country, are not prepared to buy these (peace terms) at the price of concessions which would only lead to further demands."

Mr. Chamberlain said the German government was responsible for a lack of faith in its assertions of non-aggressive intentions. He added:

"If we could have such a renunciation (of aggressive aims), if we could have the conviction that there was no intention of aggression or the further use of force in the relations between Germany and other countries, then I think we would find we would not be backward in stating what is our view of the lines on which we would discuss the terms of permanent peace."

Ambassador in Gallery.

As he spoke, the Soviet Ambassador, Ivan Maisky, and other diplomats listened from the diplomatic gallery.

Earlier Maisky delivered a note to the foreign office. It was understood that this expressed again the Russian position in favor of a triple alliance among Britain, France and the Soviet involving definite military commitments and general staff talks.

Mr. Chamberlain told the House that "the idea we despise the assistance of the Soviet Union is without foundation."

"We are concerned with building up a peace front, and if we can get the cooperation of the Soviet Union building up that front we want it," he added.

The Prime Minister described the guarantees Britain and France gave to Poland, Rumania and Greece as "first aid treatment given to avoid any further deterioration of the situation."

"It still remains to strengthen them by more permanent arrangements and to try to get additional support for them from any quarters which are willing and able to give that support."

Not Concerned With Doctrine

Britain is not concerned with the Russian International doctrine, he said. But "we would rather have a delay of a few days than take a step which might result in the work already done crumbling before our very eyes."

Mr. Chamberlain said Britain had asked Russia to make a declaration to aid Poland and Rumania similar to the pledges given those countries by Britain and France.

When this was not acceptable to Russia, he said "we tried again. . . We were anxious that we should be able to come to an agreement quickly."

He referred to the conference planned Sunday between Premier Edouard Daladier, Foreign Minister George Bonnet of France and Viscount Halifax, the British Foreign Secretary. He expressed hope a definite agreement with Russia could be announced soon.

Mr. Chamberlain denied any effort was being made to divide Europe into opposing blocs of nations. He said the pledges given to Rumania, Poland, Greece and Turkey were aimed only at aggression in an attempt to stabilize Europe.

The government had hoped, the Prime Minister said, that Russia might have been willing to "declare its agreement with us on those matters on which we could agree" and to continue discussions at greater length on subjects where there were difficulties.

Disappointed at Action

He expressed regret that Russia had decided not to send her first assistant Foreign Commissar, Vladimir Potemkin, to Geneva for discussions with Lord Halifax and Bonnet at the League of Nations Council meeting opening next Monday.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Opposition Leader, asked Mr. Chamberlain: "Would it not help the House to break down the veil if he would tell us what the British Government's objections are to the Russian Government's proposals?"

"I have made it perfectly clear," the Prime Minister replied. "I cannot go any further than I have gone already. I am sure the House will realize I must walk warily."

When Mr. Lloyd George protested it was vital for the House to know what stood in the way of an agreement with Russia, Mr. Chamberlain retorted:—

"It may be vital to Mr. Lloyd George but I think it might be deadly to the negotiations."

Long Term Policy

He said he was confident that, with the help of the French government, "it may be found possible to overcome those obstacles which have hitherto prevented us from finding agreement with the Soviet Union."

The Prime Minister referred to the necessity for a "long term policy which would envisage terms on which a settled peace might be established."

He said the Colonial question—Germany's demands for the restoration of her war-lost Colonies — undoubtedly would play a part in such a peace but added:

"Surely that does not mean that we will refuse to discuss any method by which we can satisfy reasonable aspirations on the part of other nations even if it meant some adjustment of the existing state of things."

Important Time

Mr. Lloyd George told the House that negotiations among Great Britain, France and Russia had reached a point where decisions taken in the next few days might be "the most important since the decisions taken in 1914."

The veteran leader said—"There is tension and strain. There is a general feeling of dread. We are all very nervous and anxious."

"I think everyone is contemplating another blow from th dictator powers", Lloyd George said. "No one knows where it will come, but there is a general feeling of dread that it is coming somewhere."

At present, he said, every country is speeding up arament at an unprecedented rate, causing much concern.

Apparently referring to Germany, he said, "We know they are fortifying fresh positions that will give them strategic advantages in a war with France and ourselves."

No Attack Planned

"I have never heard any hint or suggestion that we were contemplating an attack upon either Italy or Germany and they know it quite well.

"Therefore all these preparations are not for defence. They are preparations for some contemplated offensive scheme against someone or other in whom we are interested".

He declared the way to stop any plans for attack was to assemble such forces in Britain, France, Russia and Turkey "as will make the dictators who are shrewd men, realize they cannot run the risk of another act of aggression without facing the possibilities of perhaps not immediate but ultimate disaster to themselves.

OTTAWA CITIZENS

Cameras Set up

Dozens of camera fans set up their tripods along the route to snap pictures of the royal party.

At eight a.m. military units trundled around the city in trucks and took up their alloted posts. Military bands were posted at intervals along the driveway, at the Dominion Government Experimental Farm and at Lansdowne Park.

For a few minutes sleet bounced on the city streets. Nearly all men wore topcoats. Women did not get a chance to display their spring finery.

Hundreds of ex-service men, sporting maroon berets, were scattered along the route from Confederation Square to Government House.

Rain Falls Steadily

Rain began to fall steadily shortly before nine a.m. and dampened the spirit and the clothes of the crowds.

Hundreds who had planned to watch the royal procession from the sidewalks and lawns along the driveways and avenues looked around for adjacent homes and buildings where they might catch a glimpse of the King and Queen without being soaked to the skin.

Columns of khaki-clad troops led by bands marched down Queen and O'Connor Streets in the downtown district to line sections of the route.

Thousands of school children from Eastern Ontario communities gathered at the Experimental Farm grounds and in spite of the rain their enthusiasm ran high. At the exhibition grounds local children piled into the Lansdowne Park stadium where they were comparatively sheltered from the rain.

The Island Park Driveway area was crowded early. Squads of "Mounties' stood at the special railway platform, covered with the bright red and yellow canopy.

More school children, led by their teachers, jammed the little parks in the residential area near the spot where the royal train stopped and even overflowed into the backyards of some of Ottawa's finest homes. Nearly everyone carried box lunches and thermos bottles.

Boy Scouts Present.

A troop of Boy Scouts from Renfrew, Ont., camped in the Experimental Farm grounds all night and joined other Scout troops from Ottawa district and even from Upstate New York as they lined the route around Dows Lake at the east end of the farm.

Vast Confederation Square, graced with the white shafts of the National War Memorial and the dozens of Royal banners hanging from the towering white poles, began to fill up an hour and a half before the Royal train was scheduled to arrive.

Bemedalled army and air force officers rode by and young boys in the crowd set up a great practice cheer to the delight of the crowd.

R.C.M.P. officers patrolled the steps of the National War Memorial, carrying long riot clubs. A platoon of khaki-uniformed guards took up positions on the south-east side of Confederation Square 100 yards from the memorial. Hawkers were on dozens of street corners selling portable seats, periscopes and gadgets to aid in watching the arrival.

Decked With Flags.

Parliament Hill, decked out with flags, was the loneliest place in Ottawa. It is off the pathway of the procession and there was scarcely a soul on the hill but the "Mountie" guard.

Taking advantage of the open waters of the Rideau Canal, many yacht owners anchored their boats near the canal wall and crowded their families and friends aboard.

Hon. James G. Gardiner, Federal Agriculture Minister, and Mrs. Gardiner, arrived early at the Island Park Driveway railway platform. He wore a silk topper and morning clothes while Mrs. Gardiner was dressed in a dark coat and hat.

At 10.20 a.m. the rain stopped but it still was cloudy and there appeared practically no chance of the sun shining for the Royal show.

Says He Spoke Recently With Youth Believed Killed in 1937

Relatives of 'Red' Valliere Positive It Was His Body They Identified

Windsor, Ont., May 19 (CP)—Leonard Aldous, 20, said today he spoke recently with Roy (Red) Valliere, supposedly killed in a train accident at Princeton, Ont., on October 7, 1937.

Aldous said Valliere, 16, when he was believed killed, approached him on the street and talked with him for several minutes.

The body found nearly two years ago on the Canadian National Railways tracks was badly mangled. There was some doubt as to its identity at the time as it bore a metal disk with the name "Martin Cameron."

Three weeks after burial, the body was exhumed and was identified by the boy's father, stepmother and step-sister.

Aldous said a shabbily-dressed young man came up to him on the street Tuesday night and told him he was Red Valliere and said, "you know my father, he delivers bread on your street."

"As soon as he said his name, I recognized him," Aldous said. "I knew him also by the way he talked. He used to stutter and still talks slowly.

Aldous said the youth walked away with a companion, saying he was going to Port Colborne. "I was shaking like a leaf. It was like seeing a ghost," Aldous said.

The father and step-mother of Red Valliere said they were positive it was their boy that was buried. "It is impossible he is alive," Valliere said.

STORE OWNER SHOOTS NEGRO ROBBER DEAD

New York, May 19 (AP)—Last Thanksgiving Day, Samuel Giblan 37-year-old delicatessen operator, was held up and robbed. He bought a revolver and carried it under his apron. Last night, a negro strode into the store, levelled a gun and ordered Giblan and his 16-year-old daughter Phyllis to the rear of the place.

"Have you got anything on you?" demanded the negro.

"Yes," said Giblan. His hand moved under his apron. Four shots sounded, and the robber fell dead.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Montreal, May 19 (CP) — What price business! Onlookers reported yesterday the case of an uptown hawker of grandstand seats along the royal route whose zealous salesmanship cost him a view of the King and Queen. His back to the roadway, the hawker continued to offer the seats "at 25 cents apiece" until a passerby pointed out that their Majesties had passed the spot five minutes before.

MICKEY WITEK OF NEWARK BEARS TO PLAY SHORT

Joined Team as Second Baseman but Never Got a Chance to Shine

PLAYING WELL

At Present Hitting .300 and Yesterday Aided His Team With Three Singles

(By The Associated Press)

It's high time Nicholas Joseph (Mickey for short) Witek forgot all ideas of being a second baseman and resigned himself to playing shortstop. Whether he likes it or not, fate seems to have decreed that that's the position Mickey should fill for Newark Bears.

Witek joined the International League champions last season all set to play a fine game of second base. But an injury to Buddy Blair sent him to short, and he stayed there the rest of the season. With a .295 batting average and a fielding figure of .944 he was a big help in the Bears' pennant-winning drive.

The start of the current season saw the young Pennsylvanian back at his favorite spot. Blair was still on the hospital list, but manager Johnny Neun had Claude Corbitt up from the South Atlantic League to take his place and Witek thought he was all set.

It didn't last long though, Corbitt turned up with a sore arm, and Leo Norris went in at short. Corbitt came back, split a finger, and Norris was in again. But the infield didn't click so well, Herman Schulte was brought back to play second base and Witek, of course, was shifted back to the other side of the keystone sack.

Playing Well

For a man who doesn't like the job, he's turning in a handsome performance, he's batting .300, fielding perfectly, and has given the team a "lift" that has brought it into second place.

The Bears got there yesterday, in the only game played, by drubbing Baltimore Orioles 6-3, and a young man by the name of Witek led the way. He drove in three runs with as many singles and crossed the plate once himself while John Haley was going the route for the first time in four starts with a six-hit pitching job.

It took all sorts of complications to disrupt the rest of the program. The visit to Montreal of King George and Queen Elizabeth brought about a postponement of the Royals' scheduled game with the Red Wings. At Syracuse, cold weather froze out the Chiefs and Jersey City Giants. They will play a double header tonight. Buffalo and Toronto were not scheduled.

Thirteen Expected To Face Barrier In King's Plate

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—A field of 13 thoroughbreds was forecast today for the 80th running of the King's Plate Monday as trainers and owners completed training trials for the classic before the King and Queen.

Harry Giddings' Sea General, a big brown gelding, was backed to the limit to gallop to victory in the mile-and-a-furlong battle of stamina and speed for the King's 50 guineas and the major portion of $10,000 added purse. The General was quoted at 21 odds in the future books.

Not since Horometer romped to victory in 1934, setting a record of 1.54 1-3 for the distance, has a thoroughbred been backed so heavily. Impressive early morning workouts and the will to run has drawn the faithful.

Giddings noted for his ability to train Plate victors, has brought the gelding up in fine form. He didn't rush him through preliminary trials or weaken him in an attempt to set pre-race speed records. He brought him gradually to top form.

Jelwell a Threat

Cosgrave stable's Jelwell, a filly, gradually rose in the ranks as a possible threat to the General, as C. George McCullagh's Archworth took a sudden reversal of form. The filly has worked well in early dawn trials, but has not been pressed for any show of speed.

Here's the probable starting field —C. George McCullagh's Archworth; Cosgrave Stable's Jelwell; J. E. Smallman's Millus; H. R. Bain's Rye Grass; J. E. Frowde Seagram's Saragossa; Mrs. R. E. Webster's Syngo Bay; . Rogers' Ensign Mary; Harry Giddings' Sea General; J. G. Fair's McMark; Parkwood Stable's Sky-Runner; H. C. Hatch's Budsis; Erinsdale Stable's Erinsdale Miss and Bill Raine's Sea Cadet.

Thousands Disappointed in 1860 When Prince Advised Not to Land

Incident, Which Stirred Up Controversy at Time, Recalled by Present Visit of Their Majesties

STREETS DECORATED

Loyal Bellevillians and residents of the district, disappointed it is true, at the inability of their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth to visit this city, may take consolation in the fact that their forbears, seventy-nine years ago, suffered a much keener disappointment on the visit of the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VIIth, when he was prevented from landing here by his advisers following partisan demonstrations, after the city and its residents had, in the parlance of newspapermen of those days, "outstripped every other place with the beauty and grandeur of its decorations."

Kingston and Belleville, after days of elaborate preparation for the Prince's visit, suffered keen disappointment when his Royal Highness acting under the advice of the Duke of Newcastle and the then Governor-General of British North America, did not land at either of these places.

The Prince, who sailed on July 10th, with his entourage aboard the "Hero" which as it is described in the Weekly Intelligencer of July 14, 1860, "was a frigate of ninety-one guns and one of the finest line-of-battle ships of her class, and escorted by the 'Ariadne' 26 guns, one of the finest, fastest, most heavily-armed frigates in the navy, and the 'Flying Fish', 6 guns, screw steam-sloop," arrived in Canada some thirty days later. The "Hero" and her escort was met off the coast of Gaspe by the Canadian Government ships "Lady Head" and "Victoria," the former carrying aboard her the Governor-General of British North America.

Scheduled arrangements were carried out from this point and the Prince was given a royal welcome until his arrival off Kingston when the partisan trouble developed, which as has been stated before, prevented his Royal Highness from landing at that point and at Belleville. The Prince, who journeyed by water aboard the steamer 'Kingston' from Brockville stayed aboard that vessel until its arrival off Cobourg. The royal party went ashore at this point, and from then on the original itinerary was carried on without untoward incident.

A Bower of Beauty

A graphic detailed description of the decorations that wrapped Belleville's public buildings, private residences, and thoroughfares in a colorful array of patriotic festoons, flags and green arches is given in the edition of the Weekly Intelligencer of September 7th 1860. It says in part:

"The wharf where the Prince was to have landed was beautifully decorated with evergreens and banners, and a roadway leading out to a platform was constructed. It was lined with an avenue of small green balsams and was covered with scarlet cloth. Trees circled the platform with evergreens stretching from tree to tree, and in the centre was a dais from which floated the Cross of St. George. Union Jacks and streamers were floating in every direction with fronts of houses decorated with evergreens and other decorations."

"The arch outside Dr. Ridley's residence on Front Street, presented a fine appearance. It was a triple arch formed of evergreens, in the centre of which was a large "V" above which was a sheaf of wheat and evergreens formed in such a manner as to represent the Prince of Wales' feathers. The arch was handsomely festooned with flowers."

"The residence of Mr. Wallbridge at the junction of Front Street and Bridge Street was also decorated with a hansome arch. It was from 25 feet to 30 feet wide and 25 feet high. Balsam, tamarack, and cedar were used in its construction while from its top floated a white ensign flanked with various flags."

"The Arch of the Town, erected near Bridge Street, was the most handsome one in the city. The design was a mixture of the old English arch with castellated style and presented a solid massive appearance. From the small towers small flags waved gracefully in the breeze, and the centre of the large arch was surmounted by the Crown Royal of England. The main arch was supported by two smaller ones with the whole being covered by evergreens. On both sides of the arch, stretching across its whole length, were the words: 'Welcome, Albert Edward, Prince of Wales.'

"At this point looking up the street," the long-dead reporter of the Intelligencer writes, "the eye is greeted with a most splendid sight. Every few feet, flagstaffs 30 to 50 feet in height are placed, and Union Jacks and Royal Ensigns, and streamers of various colors float from their tops, and from housetops; stretching across the streets are wreaths of evergreens adorned with flowers from which hang numerous banners, while all the houses are more or less decorated, some of them magnificently. All along the street on the houses and on the arches are handsome crowns in gold and flowers of every hue, innumerable A.E.'s, V.R.'s, and P.W.'s in cloth and flowers, and Prince's Feathers without number, some of them beautiful and costly."

Children Disappointed

Waxing a little satirical, the reporter continues: "We now come to the Grand Pavilion where fifteen hundred children were to have seen his Royal Highness, sing the National Anthem and to greet him with a merry peal of welcome. But the children, poor things, were disappointed—sadly disappointed, and although they sang the National Anthem there was a gloom over all the proceedings, for the Royal Visitor did not land."

"From this point to the Upper Bridge the scene was a magnificent one. Banners stretched across the street, floating from a hundred housetops and flagstaffs. Crowns of flowers handsomely formed. Prince's crests and mottoes and devices were to be seen everywhere. It was a lovely sight and one imagined himself in fairyland."

"At the railway station decorations were on an extensive scale. A magnificent arch had been erected near the front entrance, and from this arch to the street were arranged tiers of seats for the accommodation of the Masonic body. About half-way from the street to the arch, a fountain was erected, and from the arch to the station and through to the platform was a crimson carpet where the Prince was to walk, but which was destined not to be trodden on by royal feet. Numerous flags floated from various buildings and the station-house was prettily decorated."

"The whole town presented a very enchanting scene. We walked along avenues of evergreens, under costly triumphal arches, amidst a perfect garden of flowers, while over our heads floated hundreds of Union Jacks and Royal Ensigns, and streamers of various colors floated gracefully in the breeze. But Royalty did not come. The Prince, to whom we wished to do honor—for whom we had hearty songs of welcome, and hearty loyal British cheers—for whom we had decorated our homes and streets—whom we were waiting to receive with all the gladness, all the heartiness, all the enthusiasm that could be conceived of, anchored in our harbor, but was prevented from landing by his advisers."

Many Rumors

Rumors that the Prince would not land in Belleville caused great excitement here, the reporter of those hectic days states in his story. "For two days there had been rumors that the Prince would not land here," he writes. "When the stand taken at Kingston became known here it was generally believed that the same thing would happen in Belleville. The excitement respecting it was great. Telegraph offices were open all the time and wires were kept busy continuously."

"His Royal Highness left Kingston in the steamer 'Kingston' about half-past three on Wednesday afternoon and reached here about eight o'clock in the evening, the boat anchoring about one hundred yards from the wharf. It took the people by surprise for he was not expected here until noon of the next day. Bonfires were made. Bells were rung and other demonstrations of joy took place."

The writer at this point takes the then Mayor of Belleville to task for his conduct at this period of the Royal visit. "The Town Council met in the evening and had a stormy session which lasted until nearly midnight, all about the addresses. A duplicate of the address adopted by the Council had been engrossed on parchment and was presented to the Mayor for signature, but he refused to sign it although he had signed a copy of the same address before. Councillors begged and entreated him to sign it but he was adamant. He told five of the oldest members of the council they were liars."

"Never did the Mayor," continues the writer, "act the thorough partisan as he did that evening—never did he display such a factious spirit. But the Council were not to be deprived of their rights, they appointed by a vote of 10-2 the reeve to sign the address and appointed a deputation to wait on the Duke of Newcastle, stating the facts."

Deputation Waits on Governor General

"The deputation, consisting of Messrs. Corby, Jellett and O'Hare, went on board the 'Kingston', and were received by the Governor-General. His Excellency told them there was no possibility of the address being received. While the deputation was on board the orders were given to get up steam, for the Duke of Newcastle had already decided the Prince would not land as long as any evidence of partisanship demonstration was in sight. The Hon. E. Murney then went on board in an effort to conciliate matters and was granted a half-hour audience, and the same time to report. Before Mr. Murney could return, the boat was gone."

"A general feeling of indignation was manifest among the residents against the Governor-General for leaving with such indecent haste," the writer adds.

"The Prince had gone and thousands of people who had come to see their future sovereign, walked up and down the streets admiring the arches and decorations, and ever and anon giving utterances to their feelings in no choice language. They walked up and down trying to enjoy themselves amidst the beauty of the decorations, and hundreds did for they were in a fairyland—but a gloom overspread the whole town—an indescribable feeling of disappointment was experienced—and of course there was no little excitement."

"Jackson's Artillery Company of Kingston were here—and a fine looking body of men they were. They fired a salute when the Prince left. The procession of ladies and gentlemen on horseback came off under the supervision of George Taylor, Esq. There were about forty ladies and four hundred men and they presented a fine sight. The children sang the National Anthem but their little hearts were sad because the youthful Prince was not there to hear them."

Fine Display of Fireworks

"In the evening there was a display of fireworks given by Mr. Starling at his residence near the railway statoin. It was grand and attracted a great number of spectators. His residence was handsomely decorated and all the bushes and trees in his garden were illuminated with Chinese lampoons. Mr. Starling opened his house to a large number of visitors and his hospitality was unbounded."

"The great torchlight procession of that great order—The Physiogs'—came off in the evening and certainly was a grotesque affair. There were about 100 horsemen and about fifty on foot dressed in every conceivable style and form. Their performance was certainly comical. The town was crowded, but we have heard of no accident—no fighting—nor of anything to mar the festivities of the day, excepting the picking of a few pockets, and that great mar that cast a gloom over all, and which marks the day as an important epoch in our history," the writer concludes in this particular despatch.

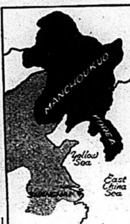
ADMIRAL SIR PERCY NOBLE



Map shows location of Amoy, in the harbor of which Kulangsu is situated. Shaded portion indicates approximate area of China held by Japanese. Philipine Is. (U.S.) are to the south of Formosa (Japanese).

Latest focal point of international developments in the east is the tiny island of Kulangsu situated in the harbor of the international settlement of Amoy on the coast of China. Kulangsu is a foreign settlement, and it was here that Japanese troops landed, only to be followed by an equal number of British, French and American forces from naval vessels standing by. Japan is reported to have expressed dissatisfaction with the attitude of the municipal council of Kulangsu, but Admiral Sir Percy Noble, commander-in-chief of Britain's China station, conveyed to them the council's refusal to yield to Japanese demands for administrative control and warned them that British naval forces would remain on the island as long as the Japanese remained. American naval forces had orders to defend, by armed action if necessary, citizens of United States in the international settlement. The action of the British, French and American forces is believed to have prevented Japan from securing a hold in the international settlement that might have had much importance in the near future.

THEIR MAJESTIES

Applause Not Confined

The applause was not confined to any particular spot along the 23-mile route followed by the royal procession after arrival of Their Majesties from Quebec. It started from the time they alighted from the train when more than 100,000 persons set up a rousing cheer that brought repeated response from both the King and Queen. And it continued until they left Windsor Station last night for Ottawa.

Even after the royal train, its puffing drowned by the crowd's farewell, slipped swiftly out of the station, it was met by rows and rows of men, women and children who lined crossings, backyards and galleries overlooking the railway tracks. They maintained a prolonged farewell until the train was beyond the city limits.

A Gracious Act

But it was the gracious act of Their Majesties in leaving their unfinished dinner that climaxed the day for the crowd. Some of them had stood on the spacious lawns of the Square since early morning. All day they waited for the King and Queen to arrive at the hotel for a civic banquet. It was eight p.m. before they reached the hotel, and they went immediately to the balcony. The crowd waited for more than an hour and a half, until their shouting had reached a steady, rhythmic chant: "We want the King."

Finally, the King and Queen rose from the table, and returned to the balcony, bowing and smiling continuously until they stepped back inside a few moments later to take coffee in another room.

The crowd continued to roar. "We want the King." "We want the Queen," "God Save the King." Even after the royal couple drove in their car a short block to the station and disappeared from the view, the shouting continued. Inside, others joined in the cheering.

Many Faint In Crowd

So great was the crowd at the Square that women and children fainted and had to be given first aid.

Mayor Camillien Houde, host of the evening dinner, whose witty sallies and quips brought smiles repeatedly to the faces of Their Majesties, proposed the toast to the King. He did it in two languages.

"The King," he said, and repeated, "Le Roi."

Then he said "The Queen" and added "La Reine."

The guests sang "God Save the King."

The great banquet hall was sumptuously decorated with a great bouquet of buttercup orchids. The royal standard hung from the walls behind them.

The royal standard also was flying from the hotel, fluttering in the breeze as a spotlight illuminated it.

Her Majesty was gowned in a regal model of white and silver satin, embroidered with crystal beads and diamante and falling into a graceful train.

Coat of Arms Mounted

In front of each of the three sections of the head table, large bowls of buttercup orchids had been placed. Behind the centre, where the King sat, the royal coat of arms was mounted.

The Menu:

La Tortue Claire Printaniere (Spring Turtle Soup)
Les Paillettes Au Parmesan (Parmesan Cheese Biscuits)
Le Medaillon De Fletan a La Normande (Halibut)
Le Poussin Poele (Squab Chicken)
Les Petits Pois (Green Peas)
Les Pommes Noisettes (Small Potatoes)
Les Sorbert Au Curacao (Curacao Sherbet)
Le Foie Gras Truffle An Porto (Goose Liver Paste with Truffles in Port)
La Salade Princesse (Princess Salad)
Les Fraises Rafraichies (Iced Strawberries)
Les Frivolites (Assorted Cakes)

The beverages were:

Le Vieil Amontillado "Reina Victoria"
Cold Amontillado "Queen Victoria"
Le Champagne Pommery Brut 1929 (Pommery Champagne 1929)
Le Champagne Mumm "Cordon Rouge" 1928 (Mumm Champagne "Cordon Rouge")
Le Porto Et Les Liqueurs (Port and Liqueuers)
Me Moka (Coffee).

A Solemn Welcome

A solemn welcome, with reserve traditional of the race, was given by 200 Indians from the nearby Caughnawaga Reserve.

The Iroquois-Mohawks lined in full regalia on a lawn 50 feet from a point passed by Their Majesties in a triumphal procession through Montreal streets. The King saluted as he and the Queen were driven slowly by.

Moving through their crowded program with quiet ease, the royal couple were unmistakably happy in the welcome given them. As they rode through the streets in the royal motor car and as they made their various stops the joy they felt was evident in their faces.

Their 23-mile route through the city was lined five and six deep at all places and thousands were congregated in squares, on bleachers, in vacant lots, in windows and on roof tops.

More than 48,000 Roman Catholic schoolchildren presented Their Majesties with a vocal bedlam little more than an hour after their arrival. Jammed into Montreal Baseball Stadium, the youngsters stood up as the royal couple rode slowly around the cinder path, cheered, waved Union Jacks, Papal flags and school banners and shouted "Vive le roi et la Reine."

The "Hall of Honor" at the City Hall was a blaze of brilliant decoration as they walked through it on their way to Mayor Camillien Houde's office with Prime Minister Mackenzie King who accompanied them as minister in attendance to the King.

Sign in "Golden Book"

Later, both the King and Queen signed Montreal's new "Golden Book" and received an address of welcome in the "Hall of Honor."

Aldermen and their wives, church dignitaries, judges and Victoria Cross holders were presented. In all the royal couple shook hands with 156 persons.

Montreal's Protestant children had their chance to greet Their Majesties when they drove around inside Molson Stadium.

The car slowed down at Place d'Armes before the monument to Paul de Chomedey Sieur de Maisonneuve, who founded the city just 297 years ago. Police cleared a space before the monument to afford Their Majesties a view as they drove by.

In the brilliantly-decorated station concourse, a guard of honor was formed by members of the Montreal Division of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve and the Royal Canadian Air Force.

After meeting Sir Edward Beatty, President of Canadian Pacific Railways, and some of his directors, the King and Queen, accompanied by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, and their retinue, were escorted to the train, destined for a secret siding so that Their Majesties might sleep, before continuing to Ottawa.

PAINFUL TO BEND A JOINT

Hospital Case of Rheumatism

The value of perseverance with Kruschen, in the treatment of some cases of rheumatism, is proved by this man's experience. He says—

"I was abroad for over seven years. When I returned I began to suffer from rheumatic pains — particularly in the feet and arms, and I was eventually taken into hospital, unable to move without groaning with pain. When I left the hospital after two months, I was somewhat better. I was recommended to take Kruschen Salts, have taken them continuously, and until now I am entirely free from pains. I would not be without my Kruschen Salts for anything." — M.B.

Two of the salts in Kruschen are effectual solvents of uric acid the excess of which is decidedly injurious. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the painful crystals — the cause of pain and stiffness — and convert them into a harmless solution, which is then expelled through the natural channels.

FRANCO'S ARMIES MASS FOR PARADE

140,000 Troops to be Reviewed by General Franco at Madrid

Madrid, May 19 (AP)—General Franco's armies massed today, 140,000 strong, for a spectacular parade of the military might which vanquished the republican regime — a celebration intended as a farewell to Franco's Italian, German and Moorish helpers.

Probably 2,000,000 persons jammed the war-scarred capital to acclaim the general when he strode over a palm-strewn path to Victoria Tribune, his reviewing stand for the six-hour parade.

Prior to the march of the troops, Franco went to the Temple of Madrid to give thanks for victory, while a bodyguard of Moorish cavalrymen waited to escort him to the tribune, near the Columbus monument. The Moors carried lances and the hooves of their prancing chargers were gilded.

Blue-uniformed Falangists (national syndicalists) and red-bereted Requetes (Monarchists) were given palms to strew along the way to the tribune while 200 planes were loaded with roses from Levante to be dropped over the tribune and the paraders.

Given a place well up in the parade were smartly-uniformed Italian Legionnaires commanded by Brig.-General Gastone Cambara. The Germans, mostly fliers and technicians, took 25th. place.

It was announced the Germans, numbering between 5,000 and 6,000 would receive another farewell on Monday at Leon before sailing homeward aboard German liners from Vigo May 28. An estimated 12,000 Italians are scheduled to sail from Cadiz and Alicante May 28, while the Moors will depart from Cadiz before June 5.

Empey Hill

Empey Hill, May 19.—Mrs. Roy McMath spent Wednesday with her sister, Mrs. George Dupre.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Denison of Selby, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Craig, Paul and John were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hutchinson.

Mother's Day service was observed on Sunday. The printed programs were used and Mr. George Stapley, Sunday school superintendent, took charge. Miss Delma Kimmerly read the story "Golden Windows" and Mrs. Hutchinson's class put on a drama entitled "Glory of the Nation". Those taking part were Ralph Abbott, Roy Stapley, Alfred McKeown, Meryl Kimmerly and Charlie Taylor. Rev. W. Merrick told the story of "Mother, Worth Her Weight in Gold". The choir was composed of the grandmothers and were Mrs. T. J. Russell, Mrs. John Craig, Mrs. William Alexander, Mrs. E. Whittington, Mrs. Fred Kimmerly, Mrs. Byron Storey, Mrs. Herb Kimmerly, Mrs. Schuyler French, Mrs. Ernest Waddingham and Mrs. Robert Harvey.

Friends are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bartlett from our community. They have moved to Vine's Corners, Napanee. Their sale was held on Friday. Mr. Percy Vanluven purchased the farm and moved in last week.

Mr. and Mrs. James McMath, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Roy McMath and Mack called on friends at Selby and Forest Mills on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Winter, Mrs. Baker and Miss Martha Penny spent Sunday at Arden with Mrs. M. Detlor and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Alexander.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Osborne, Melrose, Mrs. E. Whittington were dinner guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henderson.

Miss Bea Mowers was chosen to represent the County W.I. at Guelph. She spent the past week there attending the girls' conference.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Grooms and Bobby were Sunday visitors of her mother, Mrs. Robert Harvey and Delbert.

Miss Maggie Sexsmith and Mr. Henry Sexsmith were tea guests on Friday of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McMath.

Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Ashley were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. G. Winter on Sunday.

Mr. L. Laundrie visited Messrs. Jim and Roy Stapley on Sunday.

On Monday at noon the house of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McMath was discovered to be on fire. The chimney and pipes burned out and caught in the wooden shingles. The alarm was given and a large crowd assembled and formed a bucket brigade and succeeded in putting the fire out. The roof was badly burned and will have to be replaced but they are fortunate in the house being saved. A very high wind was blowing but the shingles were laid in mortar and that accounts for saving the house.

The regular meeting of the Mount Pleasant Loyal Temperance Legion was held on Friday afternoon in the school room with a record attendance of 27. The president, Gary Smith took charge of the program which opened with a song, "Onward Temperance Soldiers" followed by the pledge repeated in unison. Eric Root read Psalm I after which the minutes were read by the secretary, Arthur Stevens, and the fees received by the treasurer, Isabel Hogaboon. The speaker was introduced by the Literary Secretary, Rose Hawley, and a splendid health talk was given by the past president of the W.I., Mrs. Arthur Sexsmith. A vote of thanks was tendered by Mary Root, secretary, by Rita Sexsmith and the meeting closed with the children's benediction and the National Anthem.

Mrs. W. H. Merry, Misses N. P. Merry, Jean Williamson, Mr. Arthur Moon of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Husband, Mr. and Mrs. William Penny and Miss Margaret Murphy were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Akey on Sunday.

The cast of players for the drama to be put on at Marlbank at the L. A convention met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Winter on Tuesday evening and Mrs. Winter served a dainty lunch.

Good-Will Tour Arranged Thru Hastings by C. of C.

Madoc, Bancroft, Marmora, Tweed and Stirling to be visited on Separate Days

DINNERS ARRANGED

Under the sponsorship of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce a Good-Will and Better-Acquaintance Tour of North Hastings is being arranged.

The Tour will involve visits, at weekly intervals, to the five incorporated villages of North Hastings with evening dinner served at the community hall in each place at a charge of 50 cents for each plate. The dinners will be for men only. The party of visitors will be known as the Belleville-North Hastings Cavalcade. The dates arranged for the various visits are as follows:

Madoc—Tuesday, May 30th, dinner served in the Masonic Hall.

Bancroft—Wednesday, June 7th, dinner at Community Hall.

Marmora — Wednesday, June 14th, dinner at Town Hall.

Tweed—Wednesday, June 21st, dinner at the Pavilion.

Stirling—Visit will take place in late September or early October, dinner at the Community Hall.

Dinner will be served promptly at each place at 7 o'clock, p.m. standard time.

The Belleville Municipal Band, under the leadership of Mr. Fred Jobson, will accompany the party to each place and will give an open-air concert from 6.45 p.m. to 7 p.m. and will render selections during the evening.

Brief addresses will be given at the banquets by men prominent in business and the public life of the city and county. There will be an entire change in the speaking program at each place.

The first party of the Cavalcade will assemble at the Market Square promptly at 2 o'clock, daylight-saving time, and go in procession to the place visited. Here calls will be made at mines, factories, scenic points of interest and there may be fishing parties or outdoor games.

The Cavalcade will be open to all citizens of Belleville. Each host village will invite residents of all other four villages to attend the banquet.

LIBERALS SWEEP

A fourth Conservative was leading in one of the two seats that remained in the doubtful column when tabulation ceased in the 3rd King's district late last night. Here H. Francis McPhee, a former Minister without Portfolio, was leading S. S. Hessian, speaker of the last Legislature, by 68 ballots with two of the riding's 11 polls still unreported.

Cabinet Ministers Defeated

The three Conservative wins took a toll of two of the 44-year-old Premier's Cabinet Ministers. Bell, a young Charlottetown barrister making his bow to politics nosed out Bradford W. LePage, President of the executive council and Stewart's win was marked up at the expense of T. W. L. Prowese, Minister without Portfolio.

But otherwise it was a Liberal sweep Of the 15 councillors elected by the vote of property owners, the GGovernment brought home a dozen. It held the seats of another 13 assemblymen, for whom both ordinary taxpayers and property owners may vote.

The Legislature is divided evenly between councillors and assemblymen. Each of the Island's three counties—Queen's, King's and Prince—elect 10 members, a councillor and assembly member for each of five ridings. Each seat was contested this year by one Liberal and one Conservative.

The Premier and the Opposition leader ran for council seats. In the 1st Prince Drdstrict, Campbell leading his party through an election for the first time, had no trouble gaining re-election by a 629 plurality over George Matthews. It was one of the widest margins of the election.

The Little Voice

By EDITH LOCKETT ROSMER

"You did right, you did right," insisted the little voice, but Alice Ripplan was trying hard not to listen to the little voice. Yet, as she sat there in the doorway of her old-fashioned country house, she heard again that persistent tongue of the conscience within her.

It was just last night she had told David Farnsworth what the little voice had directed her to say. "I can't marry you now, David," she had stated firmly

"You mean 'won't'," he had replied shortly. "You can't sacrifice your life for your sister. Someone else can care for Rita. Why, Alice, we have planned so long that when the time came that I must make this South American trip we would make it our honeymoon trip. I shall be gone so long. I—."

"That's just it, David," she had interrupted him. "Don't you see that something might happen while I am gone? Why Rita's my only sister! Why, I couldn't leave her when she needs me the most. Oh, David, don't tempt me. It isn't going to be easy, but it's my duty."

"Don't you owe me—us, anything? You'll ruin both our lives Would you throw love away? Do you remember that passage we read together: 'There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune?' Don't decide foolishly," David begged.

"I'll not change my mind," Alice had smiled sadly.

Why hadn't he helped her? She had had to fight him as well as herself to reach this decision to remain, at whatever personal cost at the side of her sick sister.

"Perhaps Doctor Oliver is wrong." David had seized on the idea eagerly. "The specialist who is coming tomorrow may find that Doctor Oliver is wrong."

"Doctor Oliver told me not to hope too much, and the way he said it I can't hope at all. Dear David, don't question my love." Alice had faltered, tears in her voice. "It's the only thing I can do—to stand by Rita. It may be years before I can leave her, for I'll never leave while she needs me"

"It may be years before I can return, but then I don't count, do I?" Bitterness had crept into David's voice. Then he had pleaded, had argued, had entreated, had threatened, had stormed, and had finally left her in anger.

Alice had stood as unmoved as a rock, for the little voice had spoken for her. "It's the right thing to do. The only thing to do," it had told David. But when he had gone the little voice had forsaken her, too; she had been suddenly dreadfully alone—desolate. She was the girl with a broken heart, a girl whose life seemed like a broken wheel.

Rita had not been able to make the long trip to see the specialist, so the specialist had had to come to her. He was now up in Rita's room with Dr. Oliver and Alice, seated in the doorway, was waiting for them to come down.

All at once there came from the room above the sound of laughter; Rita's voice filled with a happy lilt. Breathlessly Alice went flying up the stairs.

"Oh, Alice, good news," announced Dr. Oliver as she entered the room. "I was much mistaken about Rita."

"A very natural mistake, under the circumstances," explained the specialist. "But absolutely she has not the disease. I certainly expect the young lady to have 50 or 60 active years before her."

"Dear Rita!" exclaimed Alice. Tears of joy shone in her eyes as she thought only of her sister.

Sometime later Alice slipped downstairs to sit for a moment in the doorway again. Now that her heart was at rest about Rita, the thought of David came back. She was not sorry she had chosen as she had, but now that Rita did not need her, her own life seemed to extend before her a meaningless matter of years.

Suddenly she gave a little gasping cry as unexpectedly David, himself, came into view up the garden path.

"Alice, my dear!" He caught both her hands in his. "Forgive me. How could I hurt you so when I love you so? Remember that other verse: 'Though the walls of my heart crumble and molder in dust away?' It is like that with me and always will be, no matter how long I must wait."

He did not know about Rita! He had reached this unselfish decision in an agony of forlorn hope, even as she had done. He, also, had been tested and had not been found wanting. Henceforth they could never doubt each other. She was suddenly glad all this had happened for their love would be richer for it. She was glad, too, that she had heeded the little voice.

For a long passionate moment they clung to each other. The air about them was filled with the sound of Rita's light, happy laughter of the low, sweet words of David, then, within her, Alice heard the little voice. It seemed to be singing, and it sang so loud that she knew that the echo of its music would sound forever down the beautiful years.

Palestine Situation Generally Quiet

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, May 18 (CP)—Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald told the House of Commons today that the situation in Palestine was generally quiet following a night of disorders.

The Colonial Secretary read a report from the Palestine High Commissioner stating that the situation throughout the Holy Land was under control and then gave a list of incidents which marked Jewish protests against the British plan to establish Palestine as an independent Arab-Jewish state.

The incidents listed in the report included firing of a government building in Jerusalem, a general strike and storming of a government building in the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

Monday and Tuesday have been set aside for debate on the new plan for Palestine, outlined in a white paper published last night.

The plan calls for creation within ten years of an independent Palestine in which both Arabs and Jews "may share authority in government in such a way that the essential interests of each are secured.

The plan, announced in a white paper, followed the failure of Arabs and Jews to agree on a settlement of the long dispute over possession of the Holy Land.

It called for immigration of 75,000 Jews to Palestine within five years and close control by the British High Commissioner over land sales. Britain will retain her mandate over the country during the transition period.

Royal Broadcast Hours Are Changed

Toronto, May 18 (AP)—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation announced today program changes resulting from the altered itinerary of the King and Queen.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was looking at the paper, saying, This is certainly an entrigging collum, Willyum, I mean Lola Lollard's Hollywood collum Stalking the Stars. She always has one paragraph she calls Sardust, with dozens of little common everyday items that prove the greatest stars are just as human as the greatest nonetities, ma said.

She better watch her step, they'll be suing her for libel, pop said, and ma said, Just listen to these few examples for instants. Unless Ronnel Ronnell stays home in the evening to read Charles Dickins his favorite author by his famous imported English fireplace, he is obliged to shave twice a day. Rita Balboa has a tiny wart on her little finger wich she refuses to have eradicated for sentimental reasons, explaining that she has had it ever since she was a little child. Isn't it wonderful how they unearth such intimate unimportant details of such glammerous people, Willyum? ma said.

Well, I dont know, it always seems to me that it's the obscure people whose private life is startling, whereas these glammer girls and boys, after a day's work being different in the studios, have no other way to relax except to become humdrum and ordinary when they get home. Now take my Ant Emma for instants. My Ant Emma used to fassinate me at breakfist by using her nose to spread the butter on her toast, and her nose was one of these sharp pointy ones, too, so it wasn't easy, he said and ma said, Valerie Vallence does her own marketing and is frequently seen munching a baby carrot in one of the big Hollywood open markets.

I used to have a 2nd cousin named Alfy and the only shampoo he'd use on his hair was ketchup, pop said, and ma said, O smoke your cigar.

Being the end of the subject.

The Little Voice

By EDITH LOCKETT ROSMER

"You did right, you did right," insisted the little voice, but Alice Ripplan was trying hard not to listen to the little voice. Yet, as she sat there in the doorway of her old-fashioned country house, she heard again that persistent tongue of the conscience within her.

It was just last night she had told David Farnsworth what the little voice had directed her to say. "I can't marry you now, David," she had stated firmly

"You mean 'won't'," he had replied shortly. "You can't sacrifice your life for your sister. Someone else can care for Rita. Why, Alice, we have planned so long that when the time came that I must make this South American trip we would make it our honeymoon trip. I shall be gone so long. I—."

"That's just it, David," she had interrupted him. "Don't you see that something might happen while I am gone? Why Rita's my only sister! Why, I couldn't leave her, when she needs me the most. Oh, David, don't tempt me. It isn't going to be easy, but it's my duty."

"Don't you owe me—us, anything? You'll ruin both our lives Would you throw love away? Do you remember that passage we read together: 'There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune?' Don't decide foolishly," David begged.

"I'll not change my mind," Alice had smiled sadly.

Why hadn't he helped her? She had had to fight him as well as herself to reach this decision to remain, at whatever personal cost at the side of her sick sister.

"Perhaps Doctor Oliver is wrong." David had seized on the idea eagerly. "The specialist who is coming tomorrow may find that Doctor Oliver is wrong."

"Doctor Oliver told me not to hope too much, and the way he said it I can't hope at all. Dear David, don't question my love." Alice had faltered, tears in her voice. "It's the only thing I can do—to stand by Rita. It may be years before I can leave her, for I'll never leave while she needs me."

"It may be years before I can return, but then I don't count, do I?" Bitterness had crept into David's voice. Then he had pleaded, had argued, had entreated, had threatened, had stormed, and had finally left her in anger.

Alice had stood as unmoved as a rock, for the little voice had spoken for her. "It's the right thing to do. The only thing to do," it had told David. But when he had gone the little voice had forsaken her, too; she had been suddenly dreadfully alone—desolate. She was the girl with a broken heart, a girl whose life seemed like a broken wheel.

Rita had not been able to make the long trip to see the specialist, so the specialist had had to come to her. He was now up in Rita's room with Dr. Oliver and Alice, seated in the doorway, was waiting for them to come down.

All at once there came from the room above the sound of laughter; Rita's voice filled with a happy lilt. Breathlessly Alice went flying up the stairs.

"Oh, Alice, good news," announced Dr. Oliver as she entered the room. "I was much mistaken about Rita."

"A very natural mistake, under the circumstances," explained the specialist. "But absolutely she has not the disease. I certainly expect the young lady to have 50 or 60 active years before her."

"Dear Rita!" exclaimed Alice. Tears of joy shone in her eyes as she thought only of her sister.

Sometime later Alice slipped downstairs to sit for a moment in the doorway again. Now that her heart was at rest about Rita, the thought of David came back. She was not sorry she had chosen as she had, but now that Rita did not need her, her own life seemed to extend before her a meaningless matter of years.

Suddenly she gave a little gasping cry as unexpectedly David, himself, came into view up the garden path.

"Alice, my dear!" He caught both her hands in his. "Forgive me. How could I hurt you so when I love you so? Remember that other verse: 'Though the walls of my heart crumble and molder in dust away?' It is like that with me and always will be, no matter how long I must wait."

He did not know about Rita! He had reached this unselfish decision in an agony of forlorn hope, even as she had done. He, also, had been tested and had not been found wanting. Henceforth they could never doubt each other. She was suddenly glad all this had happened for their love would be richer for it. She was glad, too, that she had heeded the little voice.

For a long passionate moment they clung to each other. The air about them was filled with the sound of Rita's light, happy laughter of the low, sweet words of David, then, within her, Alice heard the little voice. It seemed to be singing, and it sang so loud that she knew that the echo of its music would sound forever down the beautiful years.

Palestine Situation Generally Quiet

By J. F. SANDERSON

London, May 18 (CP)—Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald told the House of Commons today that the situation in Palestine was generally quiet following a night of disorders.

The Colonial Secretary read a report from the Palestine High Commissioner stating that the situation throughout the Holy Land was under control and then gave a list of incidents which marked Jewish protests against the British plan to establish Palestine as an independent Arab-Jewish state.

The incidents listed in the report included firing of a government building in Jerusalem, a general strike and storming of a government building in the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv.

Monday and Tuesday have been set aside for debate on the new plan for Palestine, outlined in a white paper published last night.

The plan calls for creation within ten years of an independent Palestine in which both Arabs and Jews "may share authority in government in such a way that the essential interests of each are secured.

The plan, announced in a white paper, followed the failure of Arabs and Jews to agree on a settlement of the long dispute over possession of the Holy Land.

It called for immigration of 75,000 Jews to Palestine within five years and close control by the British High Commissioner over land sales. Britain will retain her mandate over the country during the transition period.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair and ma was looking at the paper, saying, This is certainly an entrigging collum, Willyum, I mean Lola LoBard's Hollywood collum Stalking the Stars. She always has one paragraph she calls Sardust, with dozens of little common everyday items that prove the greatest stars are just as human as the greatest nonetities, ma said.

She better watch her step, they'll be suing her for libel, pop said, and ma said, Just listen to these few examples for instants. Unless Ronnel Bonnell stays home in the evening to read Charles Dickins his favorite author by his famous imported English fireplace, he is obliged to shave twice a day. Rita Balboa has a tiny wart on her little finger wich she refuses to have eradicated for sentimental reasons, explaining that she has had it ever since she was a little child. Isn't it wonderful how they unearth such intimate unimportant details of such glammerous people, Willyum? ma said.

Well, I dont know, it always seems to me that it's the obscure people whose private life is startling, whereas these glammer girls and boys, after a day's work being different in the studios, have no other way to relax except to become humdrum and ordinary when they get home. Now take my Ant Emma for instants. My Ant Emma used to fassinate me at breakfist by using her nose to spread the butter on her toast, and her nose was one of these sharp pointy ones, too, so it wasn't easy, he said and ma said, Valerie Vallence does her own marketing and is frequently seen munching a baby carrot in one of the big Hollywood open markets.

I used to have a 2nd cousin named Alfy and the only shampoo he'd use on his hair was ketchup, pop said, and ma said, O smoke your cigar.

Being the end of the subject.

Shannonville

Shannonville, May 19. — Local farmers who are rushing to com- hampered at the present time by plete their spring sowing are being the prevailing cold weather. One farmer was noted working on the land Monday morning wearing a heavy winter overcoat which is a rather unusual sight.

Local farmers are also wishing for a heavy rainfall in order to assist their pasture. One farmer remarked yesterday that his cows were eating up the grass so fast that his pasture would be soon free of grass. This would prove to be a great disappointment to the farmers as they had thought thaa pasture would be very good this summer.

King and Queen Charm Canada's Millions by Gentle Informal Gestures

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Formal acts and gentle informal gestures blended together today to make history in the capital of Canada as King George and Queen Elizabeth continued their round of visits with their Canadian subjects.

The Queen's smiling glance which seemed to bring a personal acknowledgment to every cheering citizen and the modest dignity with which the King bore his royal honors sent Ottawans, accustomed to pomp and ceremony into raptures of praise.

By personally discharging his function as an integral part of the Parliament of Canada yesterday, His Majesty shared in the business of the Canadian people. Under the Constitution Parliament consists of the King, the Senate and the House of Commons. Yesterday for the first time all three met under one roof to put the finishing touches to trans-

THE WEATHER

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Showers have occurred in some districts of Ontario and west Quebec and in southwest Nova Scotia, though the weather has been for the most part fair from Manitoba eastward to the Maritimes. Moderate to heavy rain has fallen in Alberta and showers in southern and northwest Saskatchewan. It is comparatively cool in all provinces. High pressure extends southeastward from the Northwest Territories to the upper St. Lawrence Valley while a moderate disturbance centred in North Dakota has a shallow trough of low extending southeastward to Nebraska.

Forecasts

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh easterly winds; mostly cloudy and cool today and Sunday with scattered showers.

Manitoba—Strong easterly winds, becoming variable on Sunday, mostly cloudy and cool today and part of Sunday with showers, then generally fair.

Saskatchewan—Fresh or strong winds; unsettled with showers. Sunday, partly cloudy and cool with a few scattered showers.

Alberta—Partly cloudy and cool with showers in some districts. Sunday, fair and cool, followed by slowly rising temperature.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Balloons and ice on aircraft! Free balloons carrying radios which automatically while ascending from the surface to very great heights send periodically messages telling of the pressure, temperature and humidity. A study of these reports sometimes show that the balloon descends and afterwards rises again. This is due to ice, and is, of course, very important information, conveying the fact not only that an icing condition exists but also the amount of ice. This last is completed by noting the change in the rate of ascent or descent. Ice has been found to occur when the temperature changes rapidly and with humidity less than 100 per cent.

QUEEN ELIZABETH GIVEN OVATION

Watches Trooping of Color from Window of Governor-General's Apartment

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)— Queen Elizabeth was given a tremendous ovation by the 75,000 persons jammed around Parliament Hill when she appeared at a window in the Governor General's apartment today to watch the trooping of the Colors from that vantage point in the east block.

Some time in advance of the arrival of His Majesty the Queen and Lady Tweedsmuir entered quietly through the east gate but did not escape the expectant thousands, who stood at that corner of Parliament Square.

Cheers followed Her Majesty into the east block but when she appeared at the opened window of the Governor General's office to take the seat assigned her the applause was so long and deafening that it was several minutes before she could sit down. Even then she had to rise and wave several times.

Queen Lingers to Examine Photos Of Her Daughters

Montreal, May 20.—(CP)—The cheers of Montreal's vast population still ringing in her ears, Queen Elizabeth paused Thursday at the end of the 23-mile royal procession and examined for nearly four minutes large pictures of the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

Passing with the King through Windsor Station to the Royal train where they donned formal attire for a civic banquet, Her Majesty noticed the pictures in a floodlighted window inside the station. She called the King's attention to the window and the royal couple, smiling and chatting with their entourage, stopped to examine the photos.

The Queen lingered an extra minute as most of the Royal party proceeded towards the train.

ROYAL WEATHER

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Cloudy and cool weather most of the week-end, which the King and Queen will spend in Ottawa and Kingston, was predicted today by the Dominion Meteorological office. Showers were forecast late Sunday for the Ottawa and Upper St. Lawrence Valley districts.

Nazi Plot to Assassinate Benes During Residence in U. S. Reported

Paris, May 20 (AP)—Diplomatic sources here said today that Stefan Osusky, former Czecho-Slovak Minister to France, had forwarded to Eduard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia, information of a Nazi plot to assassinate Benes during his current residence in the U.S.

Benes, who resigned as Czecho-Slovakia's President after the September partitioning of that now vanished republic at Munich, is lecturing in the United States.

Osusky was said to have turned over all his information to French and American police authorities. His information was described as coming from secret agents in Prague.

CELEBRATE BIRTHDAY

By ROSS MUNRO

Ottawa, May 20 (CP) — A new burst of loyal enthusiasm, engendered by blue skies and bright sunshine, ran through the capital today as Ottawa's thousands jammed Parliament Hill to watch a brigade of Canadian Guards troop the color before the King in celebration of His Majesty's birthday.

The cloudy skies and drizzling rain of yesterday vanished overnight and a typical Canadian May day greeted their Majesties when they awoke at Rideau Hall.

The bright spirit of the spring morning was reflected in the gay, colorful crowds that thronged downtown Ottawa early and surrounded the vast, green square in front of the stately Centre Block to witness

BODY FOUND ON TRACKS

Lansdowne, Ont., May 20—(CP)—Body of a man, tentatively identified as J. Blow, about 45, was found today on the Canadian National Railways main line a short distance east of this station 25 miles west of Brockville. The man evidently had fallen from a train. No inquest will be held.

Coroner Dr. Kenneth Gray, Gananoque, said the man suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. Discovery of the body was made by Donald Graham, a farmer.

Officials From City To Greet Royal Train

When it was officially learned that the Royal train bearing their Majesties would officially stop in Belleville on Sunday evening for a period of ten minutes, city officials immediately met to formulate plans for a civic reception to their Majesties. Mayor Bone announced this morning that city officials would be present to pay homage to the Royal couple while the Municipal Band, under Lieut. Fred Jobson, will greet the train by playing the National Anthem.

His Worship, Mayor Bone, added that the band would be present at the Belleville C.N.R. depot for some considerable time prior to the arrival of the Royal train and during which time the band will entertain the large number of persons expected to crowd the C.N.R. premises awaiting the arrival of the King and Queen aboard the Royal train.

No official announcement was made, however, to assure the appearance of the King and Queen, but officials are of the opinion that when it is learned so large a gathering is present, the Royal couple will doubtless acknowledge the presence of their subjects in Belleville by an appearance on their railway coach platform, as has been their practice throughout the entire Royal Canadian tour. Space for the accommodation of at least 20,000 persons has been provided at the C.N.R. depot.

REACH AGREEMENT

Tokyo, May 20 (AP)—Five Cabinet Ministers today finally reached an agreement on Japan's position in the European situation, ending three months of discussion.

Terms of the decision were not announced. Ministers at the Conference were Premier Kiichiro Hiranuma, Lieut. General Seishiro Itagaki, War Minister; Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita, Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai, Navy Minister, and Finance Minister Sotaro Ishiwata.

Ottawa, May 20—(AP)— Queen Elizabeth thinks Texas must be a fascinating place.

There isn't any chance of extending the Royal tour, but in conversation with this correspondent at probably the most unusual reception British Sovereigns ever gave, she talked about the United States Southwest with great interest.

She seemed intrigued to know an American newspaper man went from a London post to faraway Texas. George Steward, press liaison man at number 10 Downing Street, now with the Royal party, told her.

"Texas sounds like a fascinating place," she said.

Mourned as Dead for Two Years Windsor Youth Returns Home

Windsor, Ont., May 20 (CP)—The major problem of 18-year-old Roy Valliere today was to convince some Windsor employer he is enough "alive" to warrant a job. The red-haired wanderer returned last night to the home where he has been mourned as dead for two years and said he was going to stay.

Body of a youth killed boarding a train at Princeton, Ont., in October, 1937, was identified as that of Valliere by eight persons. His father, Charles Valliere, collected $960 from an insurance company. The remains were buried as Roy Valliere after his father, step mother and step sis-

Two Regiments of Canadian Guards Present Brave Show — Immense Crowds Witness Ceremonial on Royal Birthday

By W. W. MURRAY

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—In celebration of the King's 44th birthday two regiments of Canadian Guards today performed the time-honored ceremony of trooping the color.

But, differentiating the picturesque and traditional pageant from that of other years, the ceremony on Parliament Hill was carried out in the presence of his Majesty. Queen Elizabeth watched it from a window of the Governor-General's chambers in the east block, fifty feet away.

Attending the trooping of the color at the Horse Guards Parade in London, the King ordinarily is mounted and rides from Buckingham Palace. He drove in a Royal motor car

Four Holders of Victoria Cross Are Presented

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Four holders of the Victoria Cross were presented to King George today. The little ceremony took place on Parliament Hill at the close of the trooping of the color.

The heroes are: Lieut.-General Sir Richard E. W. Turner; Major Milton P. Gregg, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons; Guardsman Fillip Konowal of the Governor Generals Footguards and Pte. Albert Hill of the Royal Welch Fusiliers.

Hill, now resident in California, arrived in Ottawa this week to attend the various ceremonies connected with the Royal visit.

Queen Lays Foundation Stone of Supreme Court Building

Appropriate for Woman to Perform Task as Woman's Position in Civilization Has Depended on Growth of Law, She Says

By CARL REINKE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—In a ceremony as significant as it was simple, Queen Elizabeth today laid the foundation stone of "a worthy home" for the Supreme Court of Canada, high on the cliff overlooking the broad Ottawa River.

The new building, the Queen said would be a fitting addition to the growing group of public buildings springing up along the cliff top, "unsurpassed as a symbol of the free and democratic institutions which are our greatest heritage."

"Perhaps it is not inappropriate that this task should be performed by a womann, for woman's position in civilized society has depended upon the growth of the law," the Queen said. "Canada is rightly proud of being a land governed by the rule of law." She made part of her speech in French.

Happy Augury

The Queen saw a "very happy augury" in the fact one supreme court at Ottawa, as at Westminster, administered both the Roman civil law and the English common law. Like the Province of Quebec, her Majesty's native Scotland had a law founded on Roman civil law.

"To see your two great races with their different legislations, beliefs and traditions, uniting more and more closely, after the manner of England and Scotland, by ties of affection of respect and of a common ideal, is my fondest wish," her Majesty said.

In the presence of the King, Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff and probably the most distinguished company of Judges and leaders of the Bar ever assembled in Canada, the Queen expressed her appreciation of the faithful adherence of the Canadian judiciary and legal profession to the "highest British traditions of bench and bar."

SALUTE IS FIRED

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—At noon today a 21-gun salute was fired from Parliament Hill in celebration of the King's birthday. Normally one gun is fired at noon in the capital.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES APPROVE PLANS FOR JOURNEY

Tribute Paid to Principals and Teachers for Work in Organizing Trip of Pupils to Kingston to Witness Royal Procession

At the shortest meeting of the Board of Education on record last evening, members gave their unqualified approval of the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on Sunday, and officially passed a recommendation that the sum of $50 to defray the cost of fares for underprivileged children be granted the committee, "if needed."

This rider was questioned by Trustee Reg. Moncrieff.

"This looks to me as if the Board was grudging this grant; why put this clause in when the money is already spent?" he asked.

"It wasn't meant that way," assured Chairman P. R. Wotten. "I believe every member of the Board is satisfied that the excursion is a fine thing."

Mr. Moncrieff paid tribute to the work of the school principals and teachers who have assisted greatly in the organization of the excursion and expressed his thanks to the Board for the grant of $50. "We are hopeful of giving the children an experience they will remember probably the rest of their lives," he stated.

Chairman of the Committee of the Whole during the meeting, Trustee Jack Deacon asked if any arrangement had been made by the Board for the supply of uniforms to members of the Queen Mary school cadets for the annual inspection. He was informed by chairman P. R. Wotten that arrangements were being made to supply the corps of this school with uniforms from the other schools.

The Board passed a recommendation that a piano be purchased for King George school at a cost not to exceed $50.00; and that in future when interior decorating is undertaken within the school that a color of flat white be chosen in order that full advantage of lighting reflection be obtained.

LATE RONALD J. LITTLE

The private funeral of Ronald James Little, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Little, took place from the family residence, Herchimer Avenue, Friday afternoon, May 19th. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. E. Farnsworth.

LOST WALLET IS SOON RECOVERED

Containing $37 Taken While Owner Sleeps in Fish Shanty

Believed to have fallen from his pocket while he was resting, a wallet belonging to Ranford Brant, Tyendinaga Reserve, was stolen by a juvenile lad as Brant slumbered yesterday afternoon. The wallet that contained $37.00 was recovered intact by Provincial Police today.

Brant, who is employed fishing off the Reserve, did not miss his wallet when he arose from sleeping late yesterday, but last night discovered the loss. Upon investigations early today Provincial Constable W. E. Smith recovered the wallet and the money today. Police and Brant are of the opinion that the juvenile youth entered Brant's fish shanty, situated on the Reserve, and seeing the wallet on the floor, made off with it. No charges were deemed necessary, as restitution was made and the lad given a severe reprimand by the police officer.

1,000 Belleville Pupils On Tiptoe of Excitement To See Their King and Queen

Last Minute Notices Given of Arrangements for Assembling of Scholars on B.C.I. Campus at 1.30 O'clock, (D.S.T.), Sunday Afternoon — Lunch-Boxes With Straps and Bearing Names of Children Will be Issued

Final plans have been completed for the Belleville school children's excursion to Kingston on Sunday by the special local committee in charge.

Nothing has been left undone to care for the comfort and safety of even the smallest child on this eagerly looked forward to excursion, the committee is confident.

Yesterday afternoon on the grounds of the Collegiate and Vocational Institute nine hundred children of the local schools formed in ranks for the first dress rehearsal of the march which will take place on Sunday afternoon from this location to the train. Supervisors and monitors were named, and each child was given his special place in the ranks in order that no hitch may be experienced on Sunday.

The following last minute notices have been given by the committee:

When to Assemble

The children from the five Belleville schools, Prince of Wales School of Thurlow, and the Foxboro Public School, will fall in on the Collegiate campus at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, Belleville time.

It is expected that sixty-five of the smaller children of the Collegiate and Vocational School will accompany the public and separate school children on the excursion train.

From here the children will be marched in orderly ranks under the supervision of monitors and supervisors to the train. Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, Collegiate principal will be in charge over all.

Five uniformed nurses of Belleville will accompany the children on the train to Kingston, and be with them in the Stadium. A stretcher has been loaned by the Collegiate Institute and will be taken on the train in the event any child becomes ill, or succumbs to fatigue.

Lunch Boxes

The special lunch boxes, a gift from the committee, taped for shoulder carrying in the manner of soldiers' haversacks and with the word "Belleville" and names of owners printed thereon, special identifying tags with names of pupils, and flags will be issued each child. Banners of the schools have also been provided. Supervisors will be equipped with white silk arm bands and official silken badges sent here by the Kingston committee. Lunches for those children unable to provide their own have been arranged for by a special local committee of ladies organized by Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson.

Accommodation at Kingston

The quota of one thousand Belleville children for which space has been reserved by Kingston officials in the best section of the George Richardson Stadium under the covered section of the grandstand has been overfilled, and one half as many children again could be taken from schools through the immediate district, including Point Anne, it was announced by Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, general chairman of the Belleville committee. Many applications for accommodation on the Belleville train have been turned down with regrets, it was stated.

4 Complete Checks of Children

There will be at least four complete checks of the children made during the trip by Belleville supervisors and officials. Once prior to leaving the Collegiate grounds in the afternoon, once upon the train en route to Kingston, once before entering the Kingston Stadium and once before leaving. Arrangements have been made by the committee to have Kingston officials care for any lost or strayed child who will be picked up later by one of the local guardians.

10-Minute Stop Will be Made At Station by Royal Train State Railway Officials

C.N.R. Officials Receive Word Today of Latest Plan — It is Hoped Their Majesties Will Appear

CHANGE TRAIN CREWS

Not only will the Royal train make a ten minute stop at the C.N.R. station while enroute to Toronto on Sunday evening, but the train crews of both the Royal and pilot trains will be changed at the Belleville depot it was officially announced by Canadian National Railway officials here today.

In preparation for the reception of Their Majesties the Belleville station has been gayly decorated for the occasion with bunting and a battery of national flags. Preparations to safe-guard the many thousands, that are expected to line the railway property on Sunday night to welcome Their Majesties, were completed today when long lines of snow fences were erected on both sides of the C.N.R. main tracks passing through the station proper. No person will be permitted inside of these snow fences, C.N.R. officials announced today.

Space for the accommodation of 20,000 persons has been arranged, however, where the people may see Their Majesties, if they appear on the train-coach platform while the train crews are being changed at Belleville on Sunday. Railway officials stated today that no parking of automobiles would be permitted on any railway properties on Sunday evening, the entire space being reserved for the purpose of accommodating the large throng that is expected to welcome Their Majesties at Belleville.

Many Improvements to Station

Extensive improvements have been made at the upper depot, where fine crushed gravel has been spread between the main line tracks and rolled until it has the appearances of a whitened cement base between the tracks. Also new wooden platforms have been placed between all of the tracks immediately in front of the Belleville depot. No detail has been left unfinished and today the local station appeared immaculately dressed in anticipation of the arrival of Their Majesties.

It was further announced that the Royal train was scheduled to arrive at the Belleville C.N.R. station at the hour of 8.28 p.m. (standard time) or 9.28 p.m. Daylight Saving time, on Sunday evening. The train is only scheduled to stop ten minutes, while the train crews are changed and the engine inspected, but that period will doubtlessly be sufficient perhaps for Their Majesties appearance on their Royal coach car platform and in all probability greet the thousands that are expected to line both sides of the main line at that point.

Police and War Veterans on Guard

The policing of the station and railway right-of-way has been left in the hands of the city police, war veterans and C.N.R. police. Today Chief Kidd urged the co-operation of all citizens to assist in preserving order. "I crave the indulgence of all persons present and would ask the adults to assist in seeing to it that all children present are afforded preferred positions closest to the Royal train," urged Chief Kidd as he pointed out that adults would be able to see over the heads of the children, if Their Majesties appeared on the coach platform, as they have done when passing through other centres in both Quebec and Eastern Ontario to greet their subjects.

Many Children Will Get Thrill Out of First Train Ride

For scores of children of the contingent of well over one thousand from the city's schools who will journey to Kingston on Sunday afternoon to take part in the loyal expressions tendered their Majesties in the George Richardson Stadium there, the adventure of boarding the special excursion train in Belleville will be an experience never enjoyed before, it was revealed by questioning of teachers and principals of the schools this week.

In this era of an automobile in the garage of almost ever home, train travel has been forgotten in favor of the car for many of Belleville, and children of the present generation have an acquaintance with trains gained only by watching them on the tracks from a distance.

Excitement has been high over the prospect of the trip among even senior pupils of the schools, while the smaller ones have been looking forward to boarding the train as a highlight in adventure, it is reported by one local teacher.

FLAME OF LOYALTY OF WORLD EMPIRE BURNS BRIGHTLY

Empire Day Message from Lord Bledislow Stresses Spirit of Service and Standard of Faith

A copy of the Empire Day Message from The Viscount Bledislow, P.C., G.C.M.G., K.B.E., President of the Empire Day Movement with headquarters in London, England, has been received by Colonel W. N. Ponton, K.C., of this city.

The message of this day which is observed in the schools of Canada Tuesday, May 23rd, has special significance in that the King-Emperor and His Consort are in the Dominion at this hour and are making history before the eyes of the people of Canada and the world.

Lord Bledislow says in his official message:—

"Once more, as President of the Empire Day Movement, I send you warm greetings, coupled with the earnest hope that the flame of loyalty to the Crown and of patriotic devotion to our world-wide Empire burns as brightly as ever in your hearts and lives.

"The spirit of service, is above all, that which should animate all those who belong to the British Commonwealth of Nations and who are proud of its traditions, ideals and its incomparable mission upon Earth. Such service includes the service of God, the service of the State, and the service of our fellow-men, particularly those of every race, colour and creed, who share our Imperial heritage. Our British peoples are generously endowed with the priceless benefits of freedom, just laws and the mutual confidence which flows from unfettered Democracy. But commensurate with our privileges is the greatness of our responsibilities. Upon the courageous shouldering of those responsibilities depend the solidarity and integrity of the British Empire, and with it the future peace and prosperity of the world. Confronted with international enmities and misunderstandings and widespread human tribulation and unrest, let us remain true to our traditions and ideals, prepared to follow, with undaunted courage, the path of dtuy, wherever it may lead. Never have the various parts of the Empire been more closely linked in fraternal affection, more solid in their sympathies or more mutually trustful than they are today, and the whole human family have derived benefit from their friendly cooperation.

Let us above all hold fast to the anchorage of truth and righteousness. Let us each and all, young and old, this Empire Day, in face of tendency in many lands to accept a lower standard of faith and conduct than that which has hitherto guided the civilized world, bravely resolve to remain steadfastly loyal to the faith of our fathers and to those whose high principles upon which the British Empire has been built, and without which it cannot endure. To be true Imperialists we must maintain unshaken our faith in God, in the Empire and in ourselves.

Bledislow.

London, May, 1939.

Past Officers' Night Held by Belleville Chapter No. 55, O. E. S.

Belleville Chapter No. 55, Order of Easter Star, last evening in their hall, Front Street, was a most interesting and colorful event. The Chapter room itself presented an artistic picture with its decorations of flags in keeping with the celebration throughout Canada of the visit of their Majesties. Large pictures of the King and Queen occupied positions of honor in the carefully planned decorative scheme and the whole effect was very beautiful. In keeping, too, with the spirit of jubilation, the opening hymns were in tribute to their Majesties, "God Save the King," "O, Canada" and George Kingston's latest composition, "To Their Majesties" being sung by the members with great fervor and sincerity.

Past Matrons and Patrons, who last night were the honored guests of the Chapter were extended a gracious welcome by Mrs. Lillie Law, Worthy Matron of the Chapter, and by Mr. Clinton MacDonald, the Worthy Patron.

Mrs. Thelma Liddle, and Mr. Charles Brown, Past Matron and Past Patron of the year 1937, were the presiding officers at the meeting and under their direction the degrees of the order were exemplified upon a very prominent young lady of the city. These officiating officers were assisted by Mrs. Grace McEwan as Associate Matron; Mr. Harry Sager, Associate Patron; Mr. R. D. Adams, Treasurer; Mrs. Essie Nayler, Conductress; Mrs. Beatrice Embury, Associate Conductress; Mrs. M. J. Barlow, Chaplain; Mrs. Ethel Adams, Marshal; Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, Organist; Mrs. Flossie Smith, Adah; Miss Irene Hallam, Ruth; Mrs. Mildred Morgan, Esther; Mrs. Susan Cheshier, Martha; Mrs. Phyllis Barlow, Electra; Mr. Arthur Nayler, Warder; Mr. Basil Ainsworth, Sentinel.

Assisting the Worthy Patron were Mr. Frank Wessel, Mr. E. Liddle, Mr. W. M. Barlow, Mr. Harvey A. Stewart, and Miss Leah Bowyer.

The ceremony was very beautiful and called forth much praise for the efforts of the acting officers from several visitors who were called upon to speak, and from the District Deputy Grand Matron, Mrs. Ruby Fleming, who with numerous others were guests of the evening.

As a remembrance of a happy evening Mrs. Beatrice Embury, on behalf of the a very flourishing Past Matrons' Club, presented the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Law, with a beautiful hand-painted white satin scarf, for which the presiding officer thanked her and assured the club that it would be used for the purpose for which it was intended.

Miss Doris Gardner, who is leaving shortly on an extended visit to England, was presented by Miss Irene Hallam with a fountain pen on behalf of the Business Girls' Club of the Chapter. The recipient made a very charming reply.

Dainty refreshments and dancing brought to a close a very fine evening.

CHIEF HAYES OF TWEED APPOINTED ACTING H. C. CONSTABLE

Chief Constable J. Claire Hayes of Tweed will be acting High County Constable on Sunday, May 21, and will have charge of policing the railway right-of-way in Hastings County over which the Royal train will pass. He will be in charge of three county constables, and the veterans who will guard all bridges.

BROCKVILLE RIFLES TO KINGSTON FOR DUTY

Brockville, Ont, May 20.—(CP)—Lieut. Col. N. L. MacDowell, Officer Commanding the Brockville Rifles, announced yesterday the local militia unit had been ordered to Kingston for duty during the shortened tour of that city by the King and Queen. The regiment will leave Brockville by special train Sunday.

GARDEN PARTY AT RIDEAU HALL

5,000 Invited to Meet Royalty at Party Given by Lord and Lady Tweedsmuir

Ottawa, May 20 —(CP)— The King and Queen today will wander about the spacious grounds of Rideau Hall—Their Majesties' home during their 2 1-2 days in the Capital—mingling for a short while with the 5,000 guests invited to the annual garden party given by the Governor-General and Lady Tweedsmuir.

Rain or shine the party, which is the largest official function the Sovereigns will attend during their entire Canadian tour, will be held.

In a getting similar to Buckingham Palace, where Royal Garden Parties have been held for years, guests will walk on closely cropped lawns under tall, graceful elms and see a squirrel or two, hopping about with no heed for passers-by. Although the lilac hedges that outline the grounds will not be in bloom, crocuses and tulips and early Canadian wildflowers peer from the rock gardens in behind the tennis courts at the back of the house.

Dull Day in Offing

Probabilities pointed to a dull day, and if it rains huge tents will provide shelter for the guests.

Should the sun smile, women will take this opportunity of dressing up in long, flowing garden gowns to promenade about the grounds. Chiffons, laces and flowered sheers have been chosen with complimentary wide-brimmed, beflowered hats, but alongside in their cupboards hang tailored, short afternoon outfits, should the day prove dull.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police guards will give a show of color against the grey stone Regal home, and tripping about the canvas marquees on the grounds, 75 trim waitresses in royal red outfits trimmed at the neck and cuffs with royal blue pleating will weave a colorful pattern.

Three large birthday cakes, elaborately iced in honor of His Majesty's birthday, will centre the three tables in the tea marquees and will be cut and distributed among the guests in tiny gold-crested celophane envelopes. There will also be sandwiches, tea and fruit drinks.

Kingly King and Smiling Queen Ready for Busy Day at Ottawa Before Starting Long Journey

By NORMAN CAMPBELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 20—(CP)—Canada today celebrated the King's birthday. The King and Queen, in their Canadian capital, carried on with the festival of pageant and ceremony inspired by Canada's first welcoming of her rulers.

His Majesty was born Dec 14, 1895, but by proclamation today was set aside for observance of the birthday in Canada.

A Kingly King and a smiling Queen were ready for the busy day and a half ahead of them in the capital before they set out on the longest train journey any British rulers ever made—across Canada to the Pacific and return, into Southern Ontario, to the United States and then on a tour of the Maritimes.

The 20-minute ceremony of the trooping of the color by a picked brigade of Canadian Grenadier Guards on Parliament Hill was first on the program today. Rehearsed frequently on the intended spot for two weeks past to the interest of Ottawa crowds, the actual presence of the troops' Commander-in-Chief today gave it new wonder and power to thrill the thousands seeing it.

Queen Lays Cornerstone

At the next scheduled function the King, by tradition the Fountain of Justice for all his subjects, stood by and watched his Queen lay the cornerstone for the new Supreme Court building, Her Majesty making her first address in Canada.

Preceding a luncheon with the Prime Minister at Laurier House, the program called for a drive through Hull, French-Canadian city across the river from Ottawa.

The main social function of the whole sojourn was the formal garden party attended by 5,000 guests. The Governor General and Lady Tweedsmuir were host and hostess at Rideau Hall.

Winding up Saturday's program is the Parliamentary dinner to which have been invited all members of Parliament and Senate and their wives and press gallery members and their wives.

Solemnity will be the keynote of the only ceremony Sunday—unveiling of the national war memorial for which Ottawa constructed an avenue of approach that makes a truly fitting setting for Canada's remembrance in stone of those who died in the Great War.

Rearrange Services

Churches generally have rearranged their services so that all who wish may gather in Confederation Square for the final act of the Royal visit. Here the King will make his second broadcast address of his Canadian tour. The first was in Quebec.

Farewell to Ottawa will be said by Their Majesties at 2.30 p.m. Sunday when they again board the Royal train that will be their castle for all but three nights until they board the Empress of Britain at Halifax, June 15. The ship will take them to Britain's oldest overseas possession, Newfoundland.

Kingston is to be the next stop after the capital, and Toronto will welcome Their Majesties on Monday.

Royal Procession in Toronto Will Cover 20 Miles of Streets

Ontario Residents Advised to Arrive Early and Stay in One Spot

KING AT WOODBINE

Toronto, May 20—(CP)—Whenever Ontario residents decide to watch the King and Queen go by on their visit to Toronto Monday, they would be well advised to arrive early and stay in one spot.

Perhaps Yonge Street, the main thoroughfare, will provide as good vantage points as any street, for many Toronto residents have been trying to reserve places in grandstands and windows along streets that usually are not so heavily travelled. Although the Royal procession will cover 20 miles of streets, it is likely few people will try to get glimpses of Their Majesties from two different places during the day.

The procession will move down Yonge Street to the City Hall after arrival of the Royal train at North Toronto station at 10:30 a.m. Ceremonies are scheduled for both the station and the City Hall steps.

From City Hall, the Royal route leads by way of Bay and King Streets soon after 11 o'clock to the Legislative Buildings in Queen's Park. After presentation of the Legislature members in the buildings, the Queen will present colors to the Toronto Scottish Regiment on the University of Toronto campus. Then she will join the King for the civic luncheon at Hart House, across the campus, at one o'clock.

Go to Riverdale Park

By way of Bloor Street and the viaduct, the tour will lead at two o'clock to Riverdale Park where school children will be massed. The King and Queen will go east from there on Danforth and south on Woodbine Avenue to Woodbine Park, where they will watch the King's Plate run during a 20-minute period, leaving at 3:57 to return to the Legislature by way of Queen and King Streets and University Avenue.

After tea the presentation of the Dionne quintuplets after four o'clock, Their Majesties will go up Avenue Road to St. Clair, west on St. Clair and south on Christie Street to Christie Street Hospital. From there they will proceed to Bloor, west to Parkside Drive and south to the Lake Shore and Exhibition Park to be greeted by children at 6:15.

Driving east along the lake, they will entrain at Union Station at 6:45 p.m. After His Majesty has inspected a guard of honor formed by the Queen's Own Rifles at the station.

HAD MORE SENSE

A pathetic story is told of two little Jewish girls. They were walking along the street of the friendly town to which they had been sent as refugees, but the younger of the two, at least, had not forgotten the fears to which she had grown accustomed.

As they walked, they approached a horse, attached to a cart. It had become restless and was pawing the pavement. The younger child showed feelings of fear.

"Don't be afraid, Rebecca!" her elder sister sought to comfort her. "The horse doesn't know we are Jews!"—Edinburgh Scotsman.

St. Michael's Band to Play in Kingston During Royal Procession

St. Michael's Band, a group nique of its kind with memmbers mostly less than ten years of age and using regul ation instruments, will visit Kingston on Sunday to play during the royal procession. The children will be conveyed to Kingston on a special bus and will take up a position in front of St. Mary's Cathedral. The band, trained in St. Michael's Academy, has already achieved considerable fame throughout the district and has aroused sincere admiration of music lovers for their splendid performance on regulation instruments. In tribute to Her Majesty, the band will play Scottish airs as the Royal car passes. The children left this afternoon and will be billetted at Kingston tonight, returning to the city immediately after the royal visit.

The public will not be permitted to line the C.N.R. right-of-way west of the Belleville station, while all railway crossings will be closed to vehicular traffic and no persons will be permitted atop either of the local overhead bridges while the Royal Train is passing.

ROYAL DAYS

This is a season of royal events. Today, Saturday, as His Majesty King George Sixth and Queen Elizabeth are in the Canadian Capital, Ottawa, the occasion has been utilized to observe the birthday of the King, though his birthday is actually in December. Their Majesties have been taking part in national and civic functions in Ottawa and the setting provided a fitting way of observing the monarch's birthday. Tuesday is Empire Day and Wednesday, May 24th, Victoria Day, both observed in Canada, the first in the schools and by the I.O.D.E., while Victoria Day is the birthday of the late Queen Victoria, the great-grandmother of King George. Appropriately the King will mark these two events when he speaks at Winnipeg on Wednesday, May 24.

This will be the first Empire Day, and the first Victoria Day spent by British rulers in the Dominion and Canadians will hence find added significance and importance in these national occasions by the presence of Their Majesties, representing the British Constitution.

In Belleville the holiday of Victoria Day has been advanced to Monday, May 22nd, so that citizens may take advantage of the opportunity to attend the ceremonies at Toronto on that day when the King and Queen will be in that city.

CHEERING MILLIONS

As Their Majesties make their way across Canada, they manifest on every side the marks of royalty which is shown in grace, courtesy and thoughtfulness. The brief address of the King on Wednesday, the day of the landing, in reply to the welcome expressed by Senator Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate, was delivered in French and the French-speaking people who heard him in the old legislative council chamber in Quebec and those who heard His Majesty's speech broadcast were delighted with the fluency of the monarch in their tongue. It was the graceful act of a king.

The other evening, while Their Majesties were at the banquet in Montreal, so insistent were the shouts of the many thousands in the square outside that the King and Queen rose from their unfinished meal and went to acknowledge the cheers. Their appearance was the impulse for prolonged acclaim.

The Queen's brief talk with two veterans at Three Rivers and Their Majesties' interest in children at every place they visit are what British peoples like. Their King and Queen are intensely human and democratic.

So it is no wonder that every little centre along the line as well as the great centres of populations with their hundred of thousands of persons and the capitals desire a glimpse of their beloved Sovereigns. Canadians can be enthusiastic when they have a supreme impulse such as that of the coming of their King and Queen. This royal visit is one of the greatest events in Canadian history and will be remembered by the youngest and will go down in history. Today it is making history outside of the Empire in its demonstration of the acclain with which the Rulers are received.

Such cheers will resound all the way across Canada and back again, they will be heard to the echo in the United States, and in the Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland and will follow the King and Queen of Canada when they return to the Homeland.

The people in the Motherland were never so proud of their King and Queen as they are today when they realize what joy Canada is experiencing and what thrills the royal couple feel in their tour from Atlantic to Pacific and Pacific to Atlantic.

A MODEL ADDRESS

King George Sixth set a precedent on his first day in Canada, when he delivered the most apt and comprehensive address in exactly two hundred and forty-seven words. These words expressed royal acknowledgement of the greetings to himself and to the Queen, paid a tribute to the energy and loyalty of Canadians, and contained a profound political truth on the course of the development of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the relation of events in North America in two hundred years to that Empire.

The reply was clearly expressed because the thought was clear. It was brief because he who spoke knew whereof he spoke.

A few words aptly chosen as in this brief address of reply mean richness and clearness of thought, natural gifts which His Majesty has in full measure.

These and the King's other concise and apt replies will have an influence for brevity across Canada. On the memorable day when he arrived in Canada, the addresses of welcome were likewise marked by clearness and brevity. The King's example cannot but have a good effect upon oratory.

It is to be noted that at Ottawa the message of the U. S. Ambassador in presenting his credentials and the King's reply were of the same length as King George's reply to the welcome at Quebec.

"GENTLEMEN—THE KING"

(Welcome to Their Majesties)

Oh, George 6th, our Sovereign dear,
To you our hearts we raise,
And with your Queen, Elizabeth
The world your deeds shall praise.
To-day you visit Canada,
We hail thee; Our King; Our Queen
And trust that while you stay with us,
You'll be happy and serene

We pledge ourselves with might and main
To you our King and Queen;
And pray that God will spare you long
To rule, our land Supreme..
O'er ocean, land, o'er sea and air,
Your Majesties shall reign,
And with the pride of yeoman days
Our firm faith shall maintain.

God Bless our Country, King and Queen
As the Royal Seat they fill,
And Britain shall be 'Land of Lands'
With more determined will.
We remember how in days of yore,
Old Britain's Standard stood
The best in soldiers, sailors, lands
To defend our Empire true.

Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose
We're sorry you could not come,
To visit us in Canada,
The land we dearly love.
God Bless the Royal Family
To rule our Nation well,
Then far and wide the cry shall ring
Your victories to tell.

BILLY POWER'S ELEPHANTS, FEATURE ATTRACTION AT THE NEW YORK HIPPODROME FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS, made entertainment history on this continent and abroad. W. W. (Billy) Power passed away some years ago, leaving an enviable reputation as a master showman and a gentleman. His wife has carried on since with the elephant act, touring America, Europe, and back to America again.

x

The news that Power's elephants have been signed by the management of the Walter L. Main Circus for this season has just reached Belleville. This is interesting news to all familiar with the history of W. W. Power and his trained elephants.

x

Billy Power travelled with the Walter L. Main circus quite a few years ago as treasurer. The show met financial difficulties and disbanded owing Billy Power, of Belleville, Ontaro, Canada, considerable money.

x

Remembering the old circus song about the elephant which ate hay all day and ate all night and ate all the money in sight, nobody wanted to take the elephants except Billy Power who settled his claim against the defunct circus for the elephants.

x

Thus was born the act known the world around eventually as "Power's Elephants," the highest price act in vaudeville. Billy Power perfected the act, teaching the elephants new tricks until they seemed more than human, and the elephant family was increased by a baby born during the New York engagement destined to become an integral part of the act.

x

Now the elephants have returned to the circus under the same old name under which they started pleasing people under the Big Top, the Walter L. Main Circus.

x

After years of wandering up and down the entertainment trails of the world the Power Elephants returned not so long ago to New York and an engagement with Billy Rose's Jumbo at the old Hippodrome.

x

The elephants recognized their old quarters and trumpeted and squealed and made a big fuss although some changes had been made, for they had had permanent quarters in that old Hippodrome for eighteen years and knew every inch of it.

x

. . Now they are back with their first love, the circus—older, wiser and content to carry on in the memory of that beloved showman Billy Power, incidentally providing a substantial weekly pay envelope for his widow.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 20th., 1919.

Mr. Alex Blanchard of North Bay is home on a visit to his family, Church Street.

Mrs. Ed. Shappee of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., is visiting relatives here.

Mr. John Murdock, Seattle, Wash., an old Belleville boy, is visiting friends in the city.

At a meeting of the city council Mayor Platt, Mr. George Walton and Mr. P. G. Denike were appointed members of the housing commission. A bylaw was also passed prohibiting the parking of cars on Front Street, Victoria Avenue, from Front to Pinnacle Street, and Campbell Street from Front to Pinnacle Street, for more than thirty minutes. The by-laws covering the appointments to the housing commission and that governing parking were introduced by Ald. White. They were both put through the various readings and passed.

JUNGLE IN SOUND

The American Museum of Natural History has arranged to provide for its visitors the sounds of the jungle in addition to the ingenious tableaux its galleries display. The lion will roar as well as stalk; the elephant will trumpet his messages through the forest; the laughing jackass will sound off and bring an antipodean note besides an Australian scene to the visitors.

This is only fair. The recorders of sound have done full justice to the oratory of men, a considerable part of which is made up of grunts and squeals and roars and howls not more informing than the utterances of the beasts and the birds. Indeed, the beasts and the birds may be held to be more instructive than the politicians whose speech is so zealously preserved.

The sincerity of the denizens of the wild in their proclamations of fear, satisfaction and rage may generally be accepted as a fact, something which, alas, cannot be done with the outgivings of their unquestioned superior, Man, Proud man.—New York Sun.

Sulphanilimide a Useful Drug in Chronic and Dangerous Ailments

About one year ago I spoke of a physician friend in an adjoining office who told me of the wonderful results he had obtained in throat, childbirth, and general cases by the use of sulphanilimide.

This is the drug with which so many physicians have been able to save lives because it can successfully fight some of the deadly forms of the streptococcus organism.

However, there were so many severe reactions and even deaths from sulphanilimide that physicians were warned of these dangers in an editorial in the Journal of the American Medical Association. This editorial suggested that more experimental work should be done with this drug before it came into every day use by the general practitioner.

However, at the last International Postgraduate Medical Assembly held in Philadelphia a few months ago, Dr. Perrin H. Long, Baltimore, stated:—

"Every physician, today, should know when and how to give sulphanilimide."

That is, knowing "when" will save life, and knowing "how" will prevent accidents, some of which might be fatal.

"In severe tissue and blood infections (as hemolytic streptococci) where the patient may die in 24 hours, give large doses of sulphanilimide at the start so that the concentration of the drug may be at its most effective point within six hours. The same plan may be followed approximately, in cases of streptococcic sore throat (often so rapidly fatal), scarlet fever, erysipelas, and Malta fever."

Smaller doses of sulphanilimide are useful in bone and middle ear infections caused by the streptococcus and staphylococcus organisms.

Dr. Long outlines the treatment for venereal and other bladder and urinary infections.

The toxic symptoms of poisoning caused by this drug are lack of appetite, dizziness, blueness or darkness of skin due to lack of oxygen, and a slight rise in temperature.

No man should drink liquor or attempt to drive a car while under treatment by sulphanilimide.

I am writing for just the second time about this drug because the former time I was quoting the warning against its general use. To-day, sulphanilimide appears to have taken its rightful place as a useful drug now that it is known when and how to give it.

GOLDFISH DERBY

The recent news stories about undergraduates of Eastern American universities eating live goldfish are ancient history as far as Winnipeg is concerned. That pretty little cannibalistic pastime was current in Winnipeg three seasons ago, and then died out.

One local restaurateur, however, had his special difficulties while the craze lasted. A court on his premises was decorated, at that time, with a large well-stocked goldfish aquarium. But after losing 23 members of his prize fishy tribe to undergraduates who began by scooping them out of the pool and putting them into their lady-friends' pockets and ended by accepting a dare to eat the tidbits alive with salt and pepper, the restaurateur abandoned the aquarium.

Perhaps that was the reason the fad died out: the source of free goldfish supply was shut off. Therefore the East shouldn't crow about originating crazy ideas; Winnipeg is not behind in that quaint modern diversion!—Winnipeg Free Press.

REALLY HAPPENED

By an eye-witness and of undoubted repute, we were told of an incident seen on Hemlock, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues a few days ago.

It seems that a motorist actually stopped his car, got out and apologized to an elderly pedestrian, whose clothes he had splashed with mud and water. The apology was accepted because the pedestrian realized that the driver could not see the water-filled hole in the road into which his wheel dropped with such devastating effect on the victim's clothing.

This practically should be listed under the heading of news and in the same category of the unexpected, such as "man bites dog."—Timmins Press.

ALBANIA'S THRONE

It is an interesting speculation whether the recent history of Eastern Europe might have been "written differently" had certain Englishmen been more ambitious —or less prudent. No fewer than three Britons — the late Lord Headley, Sir Charles Watkin Hamilton, and the first Lord Inchcape —were offered the throne of Albania, and it was rumored some years ago that a good many Hungarians were prepared to nominate Lord Rothermere as their sovereign.

The first Marquis of Milford Haven, when still Prince Louis of Battenberg, was officially offered the crown of Bulgaria, and before Prince George of Denmark accepted the throne of Greece Gladstone was informed that it could be his "for the lifting of an eyebrow". — Manchester Guardian.

Ottawa, May 20 — (CP) — The Royal visit has literally knocked Ottawa into a plug hat — with white tie and tails necessary social accoutrement.

Turmoil over correct social behaviour, this business of curtsying and what to wear has upset the capital almost as much as any political storm since Confederation.

Dress clothes shops have practically all their outfits out for rent. Some had to be imported from Montreal and Toronto. Tailors have been swamped filling orders for morning clothes, full dress, grey and silk toppers. For two and a half days, the citizens of Ottawa probably will sport the finest trappings in the country.

Even press gallery newspapermen are covering the more elaborate functions in formal attire complete with their identifying arm bands of so varied colors it looks like a snowshoe convention.

Prorogation

Parliament didn't complete its business and prorogue in time for the Royal visit, even though Their Majesties' arrival was delayed two days by weather. But members are making preparations for the final cleanup. The best guess on Parliament Hill is that prorogation will come within two weeks at the outside.

Defence Plans

Parliamentary opinion generally appears to be more receptive to proposals for still larger expenditures on national defence.

There has been only slight objection to the $63,000,000 defence vote for this year, despite the fact it is nearly double that of last year, and Defence Minister MacKenzie hints that the government is sympathetic towards an extensive re-armament plan advanced by the heads of the army, navy and air staffs.

This plan calls for a capital expenditure of $175,000,000 to bring Canadian defensive requirements up to the department's ultimate objective. Maintenance cost in this plan is $53,300,000 a year.

Apart from the question of raising the money to meet national defence needs within the limitation of the country's finances, the problem of obtaining delivery on arms and munitions contracts plagues the government.

With industry in the United Kingdom looking after British War Office needs first, Canada cannot obtain all the aircraft and guns she needs from that source. There are economic difficulties in domestic manufacture of comparatively small quantities of highly-specialized arms and the alternative of buying them in the United States does not jibe with government policy of using the same standard equipment as the British army.

However, there have been indications in Parliament that the government might reconsider the possibility of obtaining defensive equipment, particularly airplanes, in the U. S.

Revolt On The Prairie

The revolt of five western Liberals on the government's bill providing an initial wheat price of 70 cents a bushel very nearly spread further among the prairie liberal group of 30, according to Parliament Hill reports.

While the debate in the Commons was going on, a prairie Liberal caucus was held one night and several members who ultimately voted against the government on the bill urged that they all hold out for an 80-cent-a-bushel price.

A petition to this effect was laid on the table and they were asked to sign it. The threatened large-scale rebellion was broken up finally but it took until 2.30 in the morning before the meeting wound up.

Mortgage Bank Sequel

The government's most important financial legislation of the session —the bill to establish a central mortgage bank — probably will lead to another monetary controversy in the Commons before prorogation.

It is understood several large mortgage companies have urged Finance Minister Dunning to make adjustments in several sections of the act and this point of view is likely to be echoed in the house.

There was some talk in the lobbies that the government might drop the bill for this session but indications now are that Mr. Dunning will push his proposal when parliament meets again next week.

Financial experts contend that the principle of the measure is a double-barrelled effort to assist both the mortgage business and mortgage debtors, particularly farmers who bought property when values were much higher and now find payments more burdensome than they feel they should be.

Corridor Cuffnotes

J. S. Taylor (Ind. Nanaimo) has a lugubrious comment concerning Hansard, the official record of parliamentary proceedings. In the banking and commerce committee he said: "The pages of Hansard are the heaviest tombstone that can be constructed."

This week in the Commons was the dullest in recent memory, with only one minister in the House much of the time, the debate over estimates drones on for hours. At times only one or two newsmen remained in the press gallery.

THE OLD-TIMER

One wonders, and seriously, if something might not be done to land a dinosaur for Regina — Regina, the capital of Saskatchewan, the biggest city in the province, and central point for a lot of tourists. Another dinosaur has been laid bare in the Climax district in southwestern Saskatchewan. The big fellow — a real prairie old timer — is resting on its side in a mound in the Climax area while a section of its spinal column has been pried loose and shipped to the University of Saskatchewan, the museum at Ottawa, or somewhere for expert appraisal. If one of these real "old timers" of these parts could be loaded up and brought into Regina and set up somewhere in a natural position what a whoop of delight we could emit. It should make us all science-minded. What a study it would be in natural history for one generation after another. And what a rebuke it would be to the boys of '82, a worthy band as they are. Think of it, 40,000 years or more in the West! What a story the dinosaurs hereabouts could tell if they had articulation in this day.

HOME MADE BREAD

A long time now I have been waiting for a scientist to explain why it is possible to bake perfect bread only over a wood fire. Except when we are at the lake we never get perfect home-made bread. Apparently it cannot be cooked on electricity, oil or any other medium except wood.

That, at least, is my contention, supported by observation but not by scientific authority. If the scientists would only go into something important and useful like that, instead of making bombs and poison gas, our civilization might begin to get somewhere. But the scientists stand helplessly by while home-made bread is dying out of the world.

What we need is a stove in the city which will reproduce the virtues of the wood fire. Then we shall get good bread and well-baked potatoes, impossible otherwise. Better still, let the scientists devise an appetite like that obtainable at present only if you have swung an axe all day, and flown a kite in the old man's field, and rowed a boat and played with goldfish. Until science has solved that riddle most of the world will never know what it is to enjoy a meal. — Victoria Times.

RACKET NOTE

German propaganda is always clumsy. We are getting a taste of it in Western Canada. Nazi sympathizers have sent a racket note to a Saskatoon alderman. In Calgary a German society has imported two German Government films for propaganda purposes.

Canada can get along without this type of Germans. They should pack up and go home. They are the kind of people who are responsible for the suggestion that all aliens of certain nationalities should be registered so we may know whom we may have to contend with in case the war now threatening should break out. — Lethbridge Herald.

MARK OF TIME

Mr. Simeon Longbottom, of Ashgrove, Greengates, Bradford, England, has a chicken run overlooked by the clock in the parish church tower.

The other day, an English paper solemnly assures us, one of Mr. Longbottom's Rhode Island reds laid an egg on which was plainly visible the image of the clock face.

The hands, the correspondent reports point to ten minutes past ten.

This tendency of hens to develop a photographic quality is dangerous and one which science should halt before it goes too far. Imagine the embarrassment of a henhouse thief if the next egg were to appear in the nest with his photographic portrait. — Calgary Albertan.

"CANNED" EDITORIAL

If anyone has any doubt about the extent to which the newspapers of Germany are under the dictation of the Nazi bureaucracy, it must be removed by the latest action of DNB, the official German news bureau, which sent a 35-line editorial out over its wires to all the papers of the country, in which the United States is described as "God's own country now Satan's country."

All large countries, of course, have their services, which send news stories to the newspapers of the nation. Only in dictator countries, however, are these under the control of government authorities. It is through the DNB that all the biased news stories are carried by all the German newspapers, and it refuses to carry others which are not in line with the dictates of the Nazi progaganda chiefs.

It is bad enough when newspapers of that country are compelled to publish only the news which Nazi officials want published. But when the bureaucracy begins to tell the newspapers what editorial opinion they may express, it is a real depth of humidity for the German press.

The text of the editorial in question is important inasmuch as the first of these "canned" editorials to be sent out over the DNB wires is one in which the United States is attacked. This proves how much Hitler and his colleagues dislike the plain language which has been used by statesmen across the border in respect to international lawlessness.—Windsor Star.

Keen Anticipation Runs High As Royal Visit Draws Near

Thousands from Belleville District Plan Trips to Kingston and Toronto to See Their Majesties

CITY EN FETE

Pulses athrob with expectation; hearts beating swiftly in joyous anticipation, thousands of residents of this city and district, between the ages of nine and ninety are looking forward to tomorrow, May 21st, one of the greatest days in their lives.

For tomorrow in perhaps widely separated parts of the district, Belleville and its environs will add their acclaim to a tumultuous welcome already given the first British Sovereign to set foot on Canadian soil.

Tomorrow thousands of Bellevillians of high and low degree, the humble and meek, those in high places, schoolchildren and their forbears will greet Canada's King and his gracious lady.

A large number, fearful of missing a sight of Their Majesties when they appear for a brief, very brief, stay in Kingston, will be already on their way to the historic Eastern Ontario city. Automobiles have left the city enroute eastward where an overnight stay will be made rather than a chance that tomorrow congested traffic will impede if not spoil their opportunity of catching a glimpse of the royal couple.

Children Anticipate Trip

A thousand childish hearts will beat with unsuppressed joy when a special train carries them to the spacious Richardson Stadium in Kingston tomorrow where they will be given a position of prominence with other children of Eastern Ontari in order that they may see the King and Queen when they drive around the stadium track.

Others will join what is expected to be the largest crowd ever to throng Kingston, and will view the royal pair from crowd-congested streets along the route of procession.

However, those not fortunate enough to journey to Kingston will withhold their demonstration of loyalty and affection for their Sovereigns until tomorrow evening, when it is expected a large throng will view the royal train in its gleaming colors of blue, silver and gold as it glides in the north station here.

Two hundred and fifty students of the Ontario School for the Deaf will occupy a prominent position near the station when the royal train makes its appearance. Spaces have been allotted near the tracks where it is estimated thousands of people will congregate in the hope Their Majesties will make a brief appearance if the train stops here.

City Gleams With Color

The city is en fete for the occasion. Front Street and other main busines thoroughfare are colorful with banners, flags and pennants. The gay red, white and blue of the Union Jack waves proudly from civic, government and other buildings. The gleaming scarlet of the Canadian Ensign floats from stores, banks, business houses and private residences, mingling and intermingling with the proud colors of the Flag of the Empire.

Bunting in profusion decorates many stores. Strings of flags adorn many private residences, and the whole city is bright with a patriotic flame of color. Photographs of Their Majesties, in various forms of dress, form the "piece-de resistance" in many store front decorative schemes. Belleville is dressed for the occasion, and proudly so.

Meanwhile young hearts and old ones too, are agog with excitement as the time for the long-anticipated view of England's King and Queen drews near. Belleville's loyalty, never doubted, flames anew. Its welcome to the Empire's youthful King and his beautiful Queen will be as sincere, as wholehearted and as joyous as that of any other community in the Dominion.

It will be in holiday mood, but beneath the noise and acclaim, the fanfare and pomp and pageantry that of necessity accompanies royalty, when Their Majesties pass by the space allotted in Kingston where flag-waving, cheering schoolchildren bearing proudly on their arms a band inscribed "Belleville" will greet them, or from the privacy of their private railway car when and if the royal train stops here to allow them to greet its residents, the royal couple may rest assured that no truer, more loyal welcome will be afforded them than is given from this part of the Bay of Quinte district of their Dominion of Canada.

TEN-YEAR TERM FOR A HOLDUP

Stanley Pryslak, Hamilton, Sentenced for His Part in the Holdup

Hamilton, Ont., May 20.—(CP)—Stanley Pryslak was sentenced to ten years in penitentiary by Magistrate H. A. Burbidge today for his part in the armed hold-up of the Quality Groceteria on March 31.

Pryslak also was given five years for aiding and abetting in the robbery of Frank Appleford, two years for the theft of a car and six months for the theft of automobile markers. The sentences are all concurrent.

Frank Bluski charged also in the Quality Groceteria affair was given eight years.

A WHITER WHITE PAINT

A new white paint, formulated to shed dirt and grime and said to show a very marked improvement in retention of whiteness even under adverse exposure conditions, has just been introduced to the Canadian market at a time when the approach of the Royal visit and Spring are making architects, master painters and Canadian home owners paint conscious.

The secret of the new whiter white paint is in the use of the most modern of paint pigments — titanium dioxide — sometimes called the whitest known pigment. This pigment is known to have several times the hiding power of any of the older white pigments and in addition, when properly incorporated in a linseed oil vehicle, it provides a much more durable and much better appearing paint.

Retention of whiteness is brought about, through a natural weathering process which the manufacturers refer to as "self-cleaning"; in other words, as it weathers, it sheds imbedded or attached dirt and soil.

Prolonged research in the laboratories of C-I-L as well as practical application by painters and laymen have shown, it is claimed, that the good points of the paint are; exceptional hiding power, improved working properties, good initial whiteness and outstanding whiteness and appearance after exposure and longer lasting durability.

MEMORY OF ENGLISH GARDEN

Three Rivers, Que., May 20—(CP) Memories of English gardens were evoked for Queen Elizabeth here yesterday. In the bouquet of roses and lily of the valley which Mrs. Atchez Pitt, wife of the Mayor of Three Rivers, presented to the Queen, were a batch of Mayflowers peculiar to this section of Quebec.

The Queen, in receiving the bouquet, espied them and expressed delight at finding the Spring flower in the new world as well as in the old.

QUINTS WEIGHED IN DUSTY SCALES FROM HEN HOUSE

First Reporter to See Famous Children Tells of His Experience

FINE ON MAY 28

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY

Callander, Ont., May 20 (C)—One sunny May morning five years ago I bumped by motor-car over a rock-strewn trail to a humble cottage where a mother lay in pain. Today I came again to see the Dionne quintuplets, who Monday are to be received by the King and Queen.

This time I came over a graded government road—a busy highway that once was a deserted wagon path—but my thoughts went irresistibly back to the weather-beaten house, the poorly-furnished bedroom, distressed Elzire Dionne and the five mites of humanity lying at her side, five hours old.

The outside world then knew only that these tiny infants had been born and it was my business, as the first newspaper reporter to see the quintuplets, to get the story. I asked Elzire how she felt. The mother smiled and said, "Tres bien".

Put Babies On Pillows.

I lifted the babies onto a pillow so they could be photographed. Oliva Dionne, the bewildered father, helped me. After a half-dozen shots we placed the quintuplets, one by one, in dusty potato scales that Oliva brought in from the chicken house.

The heaviest of the five pulled the needle of the scales to three pounds, four ounces. They barely whimpered during this ceremony which doubtless wouldn't have taken place had Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe been in the house at the time. We didn't know how hazardous a procedure it was.

Then we placed the children, swathed in cotton sheeting, beside the pretty young mother. Her other five children rushed in and out of the bedroom trying to help. Elzire used what strength she had to prevent flies from bothering her newly-arrived babies.

House Still Stands.

The frame house still stands, but it is much improved, and the Dionne family still resides there. Just 100 yards down the road is Dafoe Nursery, home of the quints. They were moved quietly, almost secretly, into the nursery four months after their birth. I had the privilege of riding in the same vehicle that whisked Cecil and Annette to their present abode.

Cecile and Annette don't remember that auto ride, but they will never forget the journey they start tomorrow night—the trip to Toronto to meet the King and Queen.

Ride In Special Train.

They ride in a special train, as befitting the world's most famous children. They travel as guests of the Ontario government. With them journey their parents, their seven brothers and sisters, nurses, Dr. Dafoe, Canadian and British and United States newspaper reporters.

Their appearance in Toronto is one of the big stories of the Royal visit to Canada, especially so because they are wards of the King.

Jointly they are worth perhaps $1,500,000. They are "set" for life. When I first saw them five years ago—on May 28, 1935—there was one chance in 1,500,000 they would live more than a few days.

Subsoil Blasting Increases Capacity Of Septic Tanks

Here is a problem which often stumps those living in the country —"What to do to increase the disposal capacity of septic tanks and cesspools."

The efficient operation of a tank or pool depends primarily upon the absorption of liquid by the soil. In sandy soils, it is usually easy to dispose of fluid, but stiff clay soil often makes disposal difficult because the soil absorbs moisture slowly.

One answer to this problem is blasting with dynamite. The procedure is simple and involves little cost or labor.

For new tanks, before the tile is laid, small charges of dynamite should be exploded at a depth of about six feet below the level of the tile line. One-stick charges should be spaced eight feet apart, and the electric method of firing is recommended. The blasts will shatter the subsoil and make it more porous.

Septic tanks which have been in use for a long time, and have dropped in capacity, have been made more efficient through subsoil blasting. This work can be done by putting down holes to a depth of several feet below the level of the tile line. They should be sunk at intervals of eight feet and at a distance of six to eight feet from the tile line and on both sides of it. Each hole should be loaded with a single stick of dynamite. The surrounding subsoil will be loosened and absorption increased.

In much the same way, the drainage of cesspools can be improved by subsoil blasting. After a pool has been dug and lined with brick or stone, single sticks of dynamite should be loaded in holes in a circle eight to ten feet from the edge and three to four feet below the bottom of the pool. The charges should be spaced about eight feet apart, and in this case also, the electric method of firing is recommended because it is safer. Pools have often shown double the usual drainage capacity after the subsoil has been blasted.

A pool which has been in use for some time is likely to lose capacity. This may be true where a gravel soil contains some clay. This condition has been remedied by emptying the pool and blasting the subsoil in this manner:

A single charge of one or two sticks of 40 per cent ammonia dynamite is loaded in a hole in the centre of the pool and four or more feet below its bottom. An electric blasting cap should be used to detonate this charge.

It is important in all types of blasting to tamp the bore holes with earth after loading, unless the holes are filled with water. Fuses, or leading wires from electric blasting machines must be long enough to permit blasters and others to take a safe distance before blasts. This precaution should be taken even though a single-stick charge of dynamite is hardly likely to disturb the surface of the ground when loaded to the depths already described.

Queen Interested In Brakeman's Job

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—Brakeman Bill Joy could hardly believe his ears. Coupling the Royal private car to the locomotive that was to haul their Majesties' train from a junction to the station here yesterday, he was so engrossed in his work that at first he didn't quite catch the soft voice.

He looked up from his stooped position on the tracks into the faces of the King and Queen smiling down at him from the rear platform of their travelling palace.

"That is a delicate job you have there," said the Queen with a friendly smile. As near as he can remember, Joy says he answered with a "Yes, ma'am".

TOO MUCH TIME SPENT IN OWN GARDENS

Moscow, May 19.—(AP)—Residents of Cooperative farms are spending too much time in their own vegetable gardens and too little in the collective fields, said an article in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper.

Some farmers have privately-owned gardens exceeding the regulation size and two cows when only one is authorized, Pravda said: as a result they shirk the co-operative work to attend to private tasks.

SERVICE
AN APPRECIATED Service!
SERVICE in the implement field is no mere appendage or fancy trimming.
Time and timeliness are the essence of success in most farming operations. Great loss may be sustained by the farmer, during seeding and harvesting, through machine breakdowns caused by wear and accidents, if parts are not readily available. It is then, that promptness in securing parts has a definite money value.
Massey-Harris has always taken a pride in the manner in which it has rendered Parts service. Fit and quality may be taken for granted, for replacement parts are identical with the originals. Its extensive selling organization, with local dealers in practically every town across Canada, brings this service within easy reach of every farmer.
No matter, too, how old the machine bearing the name "Massey-Harris" may be, spare parts can always be obtained for it.
● Last Spring a farmer ordered a small part for a drill he bought 30 years ago. No demand for many years for this part resulted in the pattern becoming destroyed. To make a new pattern and part cost $25.00, an expenditure willingly undertaken to preserve the Company's long and enviable record for service—although the part sold to the farmer for only 15c.

The Stars Say—

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, May 21

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a very propitious one, with many happy and memorable occurrences affecting the conventional order of the day. Church and clergy should benefit, and social, domestic and romantic indulgences may be pitched to a high and festive key. However, there is danger of extravagance or an unusual outlay in pursuit of pleasure. There also may be B.,cfqatpi Faheg iayyao some personal excesses unless prudence be brought to bear.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of splendid progress, with prosperous and pleasant programs in both business and private life. There are tokens of much pleasure and festivity, in which there may be an urge to extravagance or indulgence. Proper restraint should accent happiness.

A child born on this day may have a warm, generous, expansive and indulgent nature, with much friendliness. But social and humanitarian impulses may incite overgenerous indulgences. It may have political or cultural talents of a high order.

For Monday, May 22

MONDAY'S astrological forecast holds auguries of sudden and unforeseen events which may bring about new ventures, changed environs and objectives. Strange persons and scenes may unite to promote fortunes and general wellbeing. In such visitations a quick grasp of favorable situations, though manipulated with sagacity or even subtlety, may turn surprise into satisfaction, both in the personal affairs and in business.

Those whose birthday it is may have an eventful, adventurous and perhaps romantic year, in which strange and intriguing interests may be uppermost. The novel, unexpected and singular are accented. Fortunes may have sudden twists, and personal adventures may be rather breathtaking. But such sudden opportunities demand a shrewd, sagacious and possibly intuitive grasp or "hunches" to reap highly-desirable culminations.

A child born on this day may be romantic, strong for the novel and unorthodox. It may have a keen, intuitive grasp of unusual problems.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

An Ingrowing Inferiority Complex

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I'm 24 years old and it seems to me I'm lacking in personality or some such thing. Maybe it's inferiority complex, ingrowing. Whatever it is, it is getting me down. This has affected me not only in business but in my romantic life as well. I've lost several jobs, though I always thought I was a a hard worker. And now the second girl has passed me up on account of a man who seems to have more nerve than I. What's the remedy, Miss Fairfax? Can you help me out?

Chuck

It's a mistake to say you have no personality—everyone has, but some of us are unable to put it across. Give yourself a course of self-development. You haven't told me any of your talents, so it's up to you to decide what you lack.

I've heard that a course in dramatic art or public speaking would do wonders for a diffident young man. Your trouble may be just youth. You're still very young, and as time goes on, experience will give you more confidence. Best of luck to you.

People Should Mind Their Business

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I'm very much in love with a girl of 20; I am 35. She has often told me she loves me too. But you know how some people talk. Well, they are talking about us saying she is too young for me, and I'm too old for her. Her parents approve of me, but the girl now says that we'd better break it off, because of the neighbours talking. Please give me some advice. Thank you very much.

Worried

Why should you have to give up this girl, who loves you, whom you love and whose parents approve of your marriage, just because some gossipy outsiders take it upon themselves to talk? It's really none of their business. If this is your only obstacle, go ahead and get married and I'm sure you'll be happy.

Should Love Letters Be Returned?

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I went with a young man for about two years, eight months of which time we were engaged. Then he fell in love with another girl and asked me to release him from the engagement. This happened about 5 months ago, and since then have consoled myself by reading his love letters to me. I read them over and over again, and it seems almost as if I had his love.

Now he has written me a curt note asking me to return the letters as his girl objects to my having them. Don't you think he might at least leave me that comfort? And shall I return them?

Peg

I'd say return the letters. You will be glad after a while, that you don't possess them any more, as they will only keep on reminding you of a man who deserted you for someone else. If you continue to read them, you're only encouraging yourself to become morbid. It's best to make the break clean and decisive, then turn your attention to something else.

Take up a course of study in a line of work you are especially interested in, and before you know it you will feel like going out again. Keep busy, fight against thinking of this fickle young man as you would fight the plague. Time works miracles. And you will come to believe that fate was kind in freeing you from someone so changeable and discourteous.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Good Manners at Home

Some people are models of consideration to everybody except the people they love most—the other people at home. When they enter their homes they take off their manners with their hats. To these inconsiderate people home is a place where all social restraint is unnecessary. At home they indulge the ugly traits of selfishness, carelessness, rudeness, bad temper, believing that they can "get away with it" in a manner that would not be tolerated anywhere else.

How often family love and devotion are taken as a matter of course, expected and accepted unconcernedly. Whoever undertakes to cater for a family has a real task, and that task would be immeasurably lightened by a pleasant spirit of appreciation. If we have been careless about observing big or little courtesies in the home, let's watch the home schedule for a week and see what we could contribute to make the wheels run more smoothly.

Daughter, who has danced late the night before may come to the table her face a study in stormclouds.

Father may be the grim kind of male who is looking for nothing but trouble during the morning meal and will certainly find it in the newspaper in which he buries himself. Or he may open his mail, although his hot coffee waits invitingly beside his plate.

Poisoned by individual reactions, anyone may start the day with physical indigestion, plus spiritual indigeston. indigestion. easily be a contribution to the home which may be described as an endeared dwelling. Such a home is a community centre, run for all for the benefit of all, share and share alike.

"We're shabby-minded people if we have two sets of manners; one set, brightly-polished, for the world of our friends; another set, tarnished, "good enough" to show to those dearest to us.

Courtesy Tip

When you alone and you find yourself seated next to or near two people who are together, you should be most careful not to give the impression that you wish to saddle yourself on the other two. Say your 'How do you do", perhaps add a remark or two. . . . and let it go at that.

Just right for gala evening wear is Balenciaga's full length, fitted evening coat of mauve-pink faille. The snug bodice is buttoned, the skirt has much fullness towards the back. Three-tier saddle bag pockets mark the hips.

Almost a uniform in town is the slim redingote of wool with printed silk frock. A good model has the collarless coat fastened at the wait with a giant hook and eye in black or blue leather. Coat is worn over a silk frock with a colorful flower-pot and plant design.

AT THE BELLE

"THE HARDY'S RIDE HIGH"

"The Hardy's Ride High", sixth of the famous series dealing with the popular screen family is now on the Belle screen.

The new picture is different in every respect from the others, but the beloved Hardys remain the same. Now they inherit $2,000,000 and move to Detroit to claim it. On the plane, their changed status first affects Aunt Milly, played by Sara Haden, and she falls for a business man who is a fellow passenger.

In Detroit, overcome by sudden wealth, Mickey Rooney, in his role as Andy Hardy, steps out to a cabaret and falls desperately in love with a chorus girl, Virginia Grey. Likewise, swayed by her new position, Marian Hardy (Cecilia Parker), orders lavish gowns and charges them to Judge Hardy.

Only the Judge (Lewis Stone) and his wife (Fay Holden) maintain their equilibrium. Back in Carvel, Ann Rutherford, as Polly Benedict, accepts attention from a new young man while she awaits word from Mickey.

The family is on edge, figuratively hanging over the precipice of new-found wealth, when the Judge discovers evidence to prove that he is not the legal heir. He can destroy the evidence and retain the fortune, or produce it and give up everything. There is never a question in his mind.

The Hardys are brought back to grim reality. They return to Carvel, poor as ever but proud of their heritage of honor and none the worse for their interlude in the realms of luxury.

Without exception, every member of the cast turns in an excellent performance. George Seitz, director of all six of the Hardy pictures, has again done a superb job of combining human understanding with the foibles of family life familiar to everyone of every age.

The Popular Belle Newsreel and an extremely funny Walt Disney cartoon "Goody and Wilbur", will be presented on the same program with another of the Crime Does Not Pay stories entitled "A Criminal is Born."

Sunday Midnight Show

The two romantic stars of the unforgettable "Alexander's Ragtime Band"—Tyrone Power and Alice Faye—are joined by Al Jolson, the star who sings back the past everyone wants to remember in "Rose of Washington Square", 20th Century-Fox film coming to the Belle Sunday midnight for a special preview presentation.

Featuring the heart songs and hit songs of yesterday and today, the production tells one of the most stirringly human romances yet projected upon the screen — the story of Rose, who loved the way some women can and thought it worth the heartbreak.

Among the many milestones of melody in the film are "My Man", "Toot Toot Tootsie,Goodbye," "Ja-Da," "April Showers", "Mammy", "Rose of Washington Square" by James Hanley and Ballard MacDonald, "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows", "I'm Just Wild About Harry", and "Avalon." In the swing of today is Gordon and Revel's newest hit, "I Never Knew Heaven Could Speak.'

A selected program of short treats will precede the feature attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Flying Irishman"

"The Flying Irishman", R.K.O. Radio's new picturization of Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan's life story and his famous flight to Ireland, with (Wrong Way) Corrigan himself starred will have its premiere showing in Belleville Sunday midnight at the McCarthy Theatre. "The Flying Irishman" is said to be the most unusual and finest aviation film ever made and therefore should prove a great "holiday" show for all.

While the picture itself deals with aviation, it is not of aviation alone. It is the simple story of an unassuming young man's struggle to become an airline transport pilot. It tells of his deprivation, disappointment and final happness in the sight of success. Yet when the whole world acclaimed his daring flight he was unable to attain his own ambition—he was too famous for the job.

Leigh Jason directed "The Flying Irishman" and the supporting cast includes Paul Kelly, Robert Armstrong, Eddie Quillan and Donald McBride.

Joyce Compton, featured with Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Al Jolson, in "Rose of Washington Square," previewed at the Belle Sunday midnight.

Empire Day

Empire Day will have a special significance for Canadians this year for the reason that His Majesty King George, during his visit in Winnipeg on May 24th, will deliver an address to mark the celebration of that day and also of Victoria Day.

It is a matter of pride to the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, that Empire Day was founded by one of its members, the late Mrs. Clementina Fessenden of Hamilton, Ontario. A tablet to her memory erected by the Order in St. John's Church, Ancaster, where her husband the Reverend E. J. Fessenden was Rector for many years, bears testimony to the fact that Empire Day was founded by Mrs. Fessenden in 1897.

Her idea was to impress upon the young people of the Empire the value of British traditions and to form a mythical bond of union among them by the observance of one day each year as an Empire Family Reunion in spirit; a day to remember the claim of the Mother Country upon the service of her sons and daughters; a day when by symbol, by spoken word and by song, the children of the Empire might be made aware of this claim, and honour the memory of those whose devotion and sacrifice 'made possible our goodly heritage'.

Among the many people interested in Mrs. Fessenden's idea, was the Hon. George W. Ross, then Minister of Education and later Premier of Ontario, who communicated with the Departments of Education in the different Provinces, and, following their cordial response, presented the matter to a meeting of the Dominion Educational Association, the result being that Empire Day was established and was observed for the first time in 1899 on the school day immediately preceding the 24th of May, in all parts of the Dominion.

In order to extend the interest taken in Canada in Empire Day, the Hon. Mr. Doss, Mrs. Fessenden and others communicated with influential people in England, one of whom was that great patriot, the Earl of Meath, who immediately began the Empire Day Movement in the Mother Land. In 1904, the first big meeting in support of the Movement was held in London. Following this, communication was established in the same connection with all parts of the Empire, and in consequence, it is estimated that today some ten million school children as well as millions of adults take part in this yearly celebration. In those parts of the Empire where Victoria Day is not kept a statutory holiday, the 24th of May is observed as Empire Day, and in India the celebration takes place on Durbar Day.

Both Mrs. Fessenden and the Earl of Meath devoted their time, their energies and their means to forwarding this Empire Movement, and had the satisfaction of knowing during their lifetime that their efforts had succeeded far beyond their expectations.

Empire Day is an occasion of impressive value in such countries as Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, as well as in Canada and in Newfoundland, that most ancient of the Crown Colonies. To recite the names of the far-away places where recognition of the Empire is loyally observed, is an exercise implicit with romance; for the names themselves are beautiful and fascinating. Gibraltar, which saw the ships of the Phoenicians go by on their way to the tin mines of Britain, saw the Spanish Armada pass on its way to doom; saw Nelson bound for Trafalgar; Malta, Malay, Sarawak; British Guiana, immensely loyal little bit of the British Empire; the Bahamas; the Bermudas; the lovely Seychelles, storied Mauritius; the British Honduras; Rhodesia in Africa.

In all of these countries boys and girls of every creed and colour are taught the principles of patriotic devotion, the high character of their privileges as members of this British Empire—and their own individual responsibility in keeping the Empire great and efficacious in the midst of alarms. This exemplifies one of the pledges of the Daughters of the Empire—to instil into the youth of the country patriotism in its fullest sense.

"Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan, who comes to the McCarthy Theatre screen Sunday midnight in "The Flying Irishman," companion feature to Bobby Breen and Leo Carrillo in "Fisherman's Wharf."

"Fisherman's Wharf"

Drama, comedy, music and deep human interest pass in review on the screen in Bobby Breeen's newest starring picture, "Fisherman's Wharf" which is said to be Bobby's greatest screen achievement and which will be presented on the same program in addition to "The Flying Irishman" beginning Sunday midnight at the McCarthy.

The story has its locale at the original old fisherman's wharf of San Francisco, a spot never before featured in a motion picture. Here, as happy Sicilian fishermen, live Bobby Breen and his widowed father, Leo Carrillo, both giving a picturization of father-son theme that never has been surpassed on the screen.

Music steeped in the romance of the Mediterranean is intermingled with modern melody and Frank Churchill, who collaborated in writing the tunes for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" composed a medley of Italian songs which Bobby sings in a most delightful soprano voice. The lyrics for them were prepared by Paul Webster. "Sell Your Cares For a Song", "Fisherman's Chante", "Return To Sorrento" and "Santa Lucia" as rendered in a thoroughly modern entertaining manner that is entirely different from any of his former screen successes.

Slicker, the famous acting seal, plays an important part in the story and other well-known Hollywood celebrities including Lee Patrick, Henry Armetta, Rosina Galli and Tommy Bupp, give unexcelled acting support to the stars Bobby Breen and Leo Carrillo.

Another "holiday" treat addition to the feature presentations is the clever Walt Disney technicolor hit, Donald Duck in "Self Control" that promises to be a laugh fest that all will most assuredly enjoy.

"Pacific Liner"

Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie and Alan Hale in "Pacific Liner" and the companion hit, "They Wanted To Marry" featuring funmaker Betty Furness and Gordon Jones are now playing for the last times at the McCarthy Theatre and we recommend that you do not miss these two smash hits which are really two of the best presentations of the current season.

Fashion Flashes

(By ALICE ALDEN)

The Bigger the better goes for bags this season. First prize falls to a magnificent bag of crocodile leather in cyclamen pink, navy or brown. The leather is softly gathered onto a top of plain leather studded with gilt nailheads.

All the attributes of grace, beauty and fashion are present in Molyneux's evening frock of stiff faille of delicate mauve. The low, strapless bodice is gathered in a pointed V onto the very full skirt. A matching scarf, almost as full as a cape, covers the shoulders.

A pretty picture is presented by a hip-length, snug jacket suit with full skirt, in navy blue soft woolen. The jacket has notched collar and high, wide revers of white eyelet embroidery; the large self buttons are rimmed in white. Worn with matching white eyelet blouse.

Even Forward-Looking Beauties Must Also—Looking Backward!

MYRNA LOY . . . . her pretty back is a beauty asset.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVEN THE forwardest-looking beauty seeker must glance backward now and then. A pretty back is the making of the chic figure, means as much as the sassy waist. It has to be kept in form, too, for it has its beauty sorrows.

You can have professional treatments, if you like, now that beauty shops are going in for physical education, extending their specialties. Before getting a facial you'll be put through your exercises; afterwards you can lie on your tummy and have the spinal area massaged and bleached.

The treatment starts with hot compresses to melt away any tiny blackheads that may have settled on the shoulders, and to soften the skin so that dead scales will come away, revealing an undersurface of velvet smoothness. Makes you feel drowsy and resty. After your steaming and gentle drying a massage cream is applied. There is a great how-de-do of smoothing, stroking, rotating and tapping.

The back of the neck gets attention because the friction of furs and scarves have it rumpled and discolored.

Almond meal or orris root is sprinkled on atop the cream, forming a refreshing pack. Hot moist compresses play a return engagement; after which the cosmetic mixture is removed and the flesh goes tingly under a friction of eau de cologne.

Be choosey about the operator who gives you your permanent wave; the inexperienced one can do damage by overheating. Each strand must be rolled tightly if the spiral is to be strong. Hurried work is never satisfactory; ends are not folded in properly, the curls are not evenly spaced.

If you have permanents every few months, be generous with the use of brilliantine. You can put it on with an atomizer or apply to the comb before you arrange the celestial tiara that nature gave you. Tresses behave better, stay put longer, if a little brilliantine is used now and then.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Presence of Tuberculosis Indicated by Result of Tuberculin Test

The Dionne Quintuplets have been fortunate in that we have been able to isolate them from most sources of tuberculosis infection. Unless it is absolutely necessary we don't let people into the nursery. But even then we have to be eternally vigilant. Nine persons working there including the guards, who go out among others, and so we watch continually for any indication of ill health in any of them.

When tuberculosis strikes a baby, it nearly always begins in the lung. But since the baby has so very little resistance, it soon spreads to other parts of the body. Frequently the disease gets to the brain, causing tubercular meningitis, which is always fatal.

In adults the onset of tuberculosis is heralded by a cough; with babies this is not so. First symptoms are when the baby becomes pale and fails to gain weight. He begins to run a temperature, for no obvious reason. The baby's doctor is called, and if he too fails to find any clues, he will inject a clear, yellow serum—in which tubercle baccilli have been grown and killed—into the skin of the arm.

If after two days, there is an area of redness around the pinprick, it will mean that the baby has been in contact with tuberculosis and has developed the disease himself. This is called a tuberculin test. If it shows positive in an adult, it doesn't necessarily mean that the disease is present, for most of us have built up an immunity to it. But if a baby under two years of age gives a positive test, then it nearly always means that he has the disease.

Often people will develop the disease and then recover. Sometimes these people are negative when they get the tuberculin test. I recall a Red Cross nurse who came to me for an examination. She told me that she had had tuberculosis eight or ten years before. I gave her the tuberculin test twice and it was negative both times.

When the doctor has discovered that the test with a baby is positive, he will try to find out just where the tuberculosis is. The first step will be to X-ray the lungs, where the infection is most often discovered. By this time, however, the damage is frequently done; the baby may have the germs in his blood stream, free to travel to various parts of the body. Finally they will get to the brain, where they may set up a meningitis. When this happens the child becomes very sleepy and drowsy, and he will soon lose his life.

Tuberculosis used to be known more often as 'consumption'. In fact, in many parts of the country, this is still the common name for it. Quite understandable, too, for the adult person with it just wastes away—is consumed.

Many of the older novels I have read often told about the beautiful young girl, who gradually wasted away, getting more delicate looking, every day. We know now that those girls had tuberculosis. At that time they didn't know the value of fresh air, sunshine and cod-liver oil in preventing this disease.

Going To Get Married?

In all the excitement of preparing to get married have you overlooked the most important thing of all—health.

If by chance you are inclined to be anaemic, nervous and irritable this is not going to be conducive to a happy marriage. The responsibilities of a home, the strain of motherhood, call for rich blood and healthy nerves to enable you to maintain health and a cheerful disposition.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of very real help under these conditions. Vitamin B_1 contained in this food treatment is said to help relieve vomiting, loss of appetite and other symptoms which make life so uncomfortable for the young wife.

Grand Master of Ontario Visits I.O.O.F. Lodges of Madoc and Dist.

Madoc — Wednesday evening proved to be a red letter night in the history of the Oddfellows Lodges of Madoc and District. On this occasion the Grand Master of the Independent Order of Oddfellows of the Grand Lodge of Ontario paid a visit to Madoc Lodge No. 179 for the purpose of presenting thirteen veteran jewels to members of that lodge.

In the Lodge room over a hundred members gathered to welcome the Grand Master, Brother George Hall of Little Britain, Ontario. The visitor, accompanied by Bro. S. R. Beatty, District Deputy Grand Master of Madoc District 45 was introduced by Bro. R. F. Bristol, Past District Deputy Grand Master of District 45 assisted by Bro. Loucks of Campbellford Lodge and also a Past District Grand Master. The Grand Master was welcomed to the Lodge and District by Bro. Don Whytock, Noble Grand of Madoc Lodge.

During the work the third degree team of Madoc Lodge conferred the third degree on two brothers. Members of the team were as follows: Noble Grand, Bro. D. P. Bristol; Vice Grand, Bro H. Tate; Past Grand, Bro. W. McBain; Chaplain, Bro. C. Ross; Warden, Bro. C. Conley; Conductor, Bro. W. Hawthorne; Guard, Bro. B. Tanner; Priest of the Initiatory Degree, Bro. Don Whytock; Priest of the First Degree, Bro. C. Moon; Priest of the Second Degree, Bro. E. T. Nayler; Priest of the Third Degree, Bro. S.R. Beatty.

In the banquet hall the members were treated to an excellent banquet prepared by Vice Grand Bro. Tate. The Toastmaster, Bro Don Whytock, proposed the Toast to the King which was responded to with the National Anthem. Bro. Beatty, D.D.G.M., proposed the toast to Grand Lodge. In a very capable manner he stressed the work of Oddfellowship in the world, comparing the efforts of the organization with those of any organization stating at the same time that the I.O.O.F. were excelled by none. He attributed this result to the unceasing work of men such as the Grand Master and the other members of the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Master replied to the toast, speaking in part as follows: His work as Grand Master had been considerably lessened by the excellent staff of Deputy Grand Masters such as Bro. Beatty and to men of the calibre of the District Deputy of District 45 the opportunity to advance to further honour in the order was almost certain. This district was a thriving one and he wished to compliment the officers and members of Madoc Lodge on their fine showing.

Speaking to the Veteran Members he mentioned the changes in the outside world since their initiation into the Oddfellows Lodge. Their neighborhood had expanded through the advent of autos, telephones, radio, airplanes and such like, to include the nations of the entire globe. And so the problems of fraternalism had extended from the adjacent community to grave questions on internationalism. Through leadership we must make our Order recognized as a great force in world affairs. The fact that the dictator countries banned our Lodges was sufficient proof that we were an influence for the uplift of individuals and a means of bettering the social life of our members. This was a compliment to our Order by nations who denied the rights of equality and fraternity to their people.

The Toast to the Visitors was proposed by Bro. R. F. Bristol and responded to by Bro. Wm. Barlow of Springbrook Lodge and incoming District Deputy Grand Master of District 45.

The Grand Master then proceeded to present the Veteran Jewels to the following brothers.

25 YEAR Jewels—Brothers Frank Phillips, S. J. Emott, W. H. McBain, C. I. Ross, B. B. Tanner, C. J. Smith, G. C. Moon, E. Norman, S. D. Beatty, L. Ashley, A. Bailey.

35 Year Jewels—Brothers R. F. Bristol, W. Blair,

Brothers Frank Phillips and Albert Bailey were absent.

The meeting was brought to a close with the singing of Auld Lang Syne.

Mrs. Clarence Chard, River Valley, gave a humorous reading entitled "A nice little Canadian" and as an encore "When a Man is Up Against it."

Mr. and Mrs. Herb Smith were then seated and Mr. John Coggins read the address. Mr. Kenneth Weaver made the presentation of a china dinner set and a clock.

Herb and Nellie each graciously replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and after the usual closing numbers lunch was served.

The address follows:

Mount Pleasant, May 12, 1939.
Dear Herbert and Nellie,—

It gives us a great deal of pleasure to meet here with you tonight and celebrate the happy occasion of your recent marriage and to extend to you our best wishes for your future happiness.

As one of "our boys" Herbert, we have watched you develop thro' all the various stages from childhood to manhood and we have admired you for your many excellent qualities of character. You have always taken your place in the various activities of community and church willingly and whole-heartedly and we know that with your wife you will continue to do so.

We congratulate you on your excellent taste in choosing a helpmate and we wish you the greatest success in your old business with your new partner.

We assure you Nellie that you are very welcome to our community. While not a stranger we expect to know you better and to love you, not only for Herbert's sake but for yourself alone. We know that our church and community will be enriched by your presence.

It is our earnest hope for you both that as your new barque pushes out into the sea of matrimony and storm and tempest shall but stiffen the fibres of both boat and crew, so that all may work together in perfect and happy unity. It has been truly said " 'Tis the set of the sail and not the gale that determines the way we go". Our wish for you is a learned sail as you embark on this voyage new.

A learned sail to use the gale
In the way that is best for you,
A sail that will stand the raging storm,
That can never be rent in two;
A sail to guide your ship to shore,
And to bring you safely through.

Instead of the advice usually given to young married couples we ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of our esteem and friendship and with it we once again bestow on you our best wishes and our prayers that God may abundantly bless and prosper you in your wedded life.

Signed on behalf of your Mount Pleasant friends, — John Coggins, Carl Hay, Frank Spencer, Irvin Potts, Burton Sharp, Ormel MacMullen.

New Brand of Ammunition Needed by American Loop If Yankees Are to be Halted

World Champions Lead in Practically Every Department of Game

REDS MOVE UP

Cincinnati Now Tied With Cardinals for First Place in National

By JUDSON BAILEY

A word to the wise hasn't been sufficient to stop New York Yankees and unless some of the other American Baseball League clubs come up soon with a different brand of ammunition, it will be too late to halt them with anything.

The world champions now have won nine consecutive games and for all the opposition put up by most of their foes they might go on forever. The Yanks not only hold the lead in club batting and such sub-divisions as runs, homers, runs batted in, etc., but also in fielding and pitching. In 24 games they have committed only nine errors and only once have they made two in the same game.

They have six pitchers who are undefeated with records ranging from one victory up to the four of Monte Pearson and the six of Charley (The Red) Ruffing.

Ruffing's sixth was a steady seven hit performance yesterday against Chicago White Sox. The Yankees won 4-2 by bunching three of their six hits for three runs in the eighth inning.

Boston Keeps Pace.

The second-place Boston Red Sox, the only team which has shown any ability to stay within shouting distance of the Yanks, caught St. Louis Browns while they were still suffering from the loss of an entire series at New York and walloped them 15-7.

It was the sixth successive setback for the Brownies and plunked them into the American League cellar as Philadelphia Athletics jumped on Detroit Tigers 11-6. Although the A's set off a lot of fireworks, the shot that really counted was a pinch double by Chubby Dean with the bases loaded in the seventh. He filled his cup to overflowing, then, by pitching shutout ball in the last two innings.

Cleveland Indians moved into the third place in the shuffle by outfilibustering Washington Senators 8-4. Willis Hudlin was touched for a dozen hits to the nine the Indians filched, but Washington made five costly blunders including three by third baseman Buddy Lewis.

In Virtual Tie.

There was some important pushing and shoving in the National League standings, too, as Cincinnati Reds nudged out the Phillies 4-3 in the 12th inning to move into a virtual tie for first place with the idle St. Louis Cardinals. The Reds overcame a three-run lead with a run in the sixth and two in the seventh and big Ernie Lombardi, last year's most valuable player, popped a homer to settle matters.

New York Giants got gay with Chicago Cubs in an 11-5 victory which represented more runs than they had put together in any one game this year. As a result the Cubs dropped to fourth and the Giants moved to sixth.

Boston Bees were ready and willing to take advantage of the Cubs' demise, snapping their own three-game losing streak by beating Pittsburg 5-2 in a battling display sparked by Buddy Hassett's double driving in two runs in the first.

Rain kept Brooklyn and St. Louis out of action.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, May 20 (AP)—Author Francis Wallace is gathering material for his annual "pigskin preview", due to hit the news stands via a national magazine, next September. . . . Powell Crosley, Jr., owner of the Reds, is one of the biggest radio manufacturers in the country which is why some of the papers call them the Redios.

Joe Donovan, the sports writer, who authored "The Great Galenio", must be quite a buy. . . . He openly confesses he has been watching Two Ton for thirteen years and never felt better in his life. . . . Ray Arcel, one of the best towel swingers in the biz, will be in Nova's corner against Baer. . . . Benny Leonard has picked up nearly $5,000 in the last nine months refereeing boxing bouts during his spare moments.

Max Marek, ex-Chicago Golden Glove star, makes his first start unde the Al Weill banner against Wally Sears on the Baer-Nova card. . . . Boston looks for a $15,000 house for Lou Ambers-Paul Junior next week. . . . It will be Junior's 300th fight. . . . Davey Day is here to finish training for Pedro Montanez Tuesday night.

There is a trotting horse named the Duke of Windsor and another called the Duke of York. . . . The oddity is the Duke of York is a year older than the Duke of Windsor. . . . Dr. Joe McCarthy will be today's baseball lecturer at the World's Fair with Profs. Bump Hadley and Jake Powell assisting. . . . Sammy Baugh has bought a 762-acre ranch near Sweetwater, Tex., and will grow cows and goats.

Cameras Not Prohibited At Time of Parade

Contrary to an opinion held by numerous people and to reports circulated, civilian photographers are not forbidden to take pictures of the Royal parade in Kingston on Sunday evening.

"No restrictions have been placed on the general public in regard to the taking of either still or motion pictures along the route of procession in Kingston," Inspector Frank Gardner, Ontario Provincial Police stated yesterday.

"However," he added, "it must be clearly understood that no civilian photographers are to be permitted to pass through the police lines unless in possession of a pass signed by Commissioner S. T. Wood of the

OLD RIVALS MEET TO OPEN BALL SEASON

Napanee to Pry Off Quinte Loop Lid in Belleville

BATTERY NAMED

Commencing exactly where they left off last autumn in the league play-offs, the Napanee Gibbards, the 1938 Bay of Quinte League champions, and the Belleville diamondites pry off the Quinte loop lid with the opening baseball game of the 1939 season at the Belleville Fair Grounds with a morning ball game on Monday.

Last year the Belleville team finished the Bay of Quinte schedule with eight wins and four losses to top the loop standing, but the locals were eliminated in the subsequent league finals by Walt Gerow's Gibbardville nine. The 1939 edition of the Belleville pheroid-swatters include several new faces, however, all of whom are local lads and who received their early baseball training with the Belleville juniors. Interspersed with several veterans the locals concluded a lengthy spring-training period last night when Coach Bud Wilkins announced some of his probable starters.

Either Joe Kelleher or Sammy Ellis will get the Belleville pitching assignment for Monday morning in an effort to commence the season with a win over Napanee. In reserve Coach Wilkins has Lefty Weeks and Bert Noakes for reserve pitching strength. On the receiving end Eddie Plummer seems to be the logical starter with Churchill understudying. Around the infield there is quite a battle for positions with Gord Booth and Bill Carson battling for the initial sack honors, the dependable Russ Collins at second and Mel Little, a former Belleville ballster returning to vie with Bill Jarrell for the hot corner spot and Bill McQuaid, a former junior playing his first season of intermediate ball at the important position of short stop.

In the outer garden Sinfield and Empson, veterans, seem fixtures with McDonald, Jarrell and Austin battling for the remaining position. Incidentally Empson was the leading hitter with the Belleville squad in 1938. With all in readiness for the umpire's cry of "play ball" the 1939 baseball season will officially be declared open with Napanee at Belleville on Monday morning.

Ernie Lombardi, Reds: Hit home run in 12th to beat Phillies.

Red Ruffing, Yankees: Spaced six hits to beat White Sox for his sixth victory without defeat this spring.

Jim Tabor, Red Sox: Homered with one on and got double and two singles to lead hitting spree against Browns.

Billy Jurges and Hank Danning, Giants: Each singled with bases loaded in New York's 11-5 triumph over Cubs.

Kingston Bowlers Win Match With Belleville Trundlers

Two mixed bowling teams from Kingston defeated a like number from Belleville at the Recreation Alleys last evening and the return game will be played in Kingston next week. Six players on each team made a creditable showing but the bowling was not as good as has been seen this winter by any means. Harry Green had the distinction of leading the Belleville bowlers with 620 with Cecil Ling a close second with 619. For Kingston B. McGuire was high with 677, followed by J. Yampolsky with 634 and W. Reynolds with 624. Stella Ford headed the lady bowlers of both teams with 516. A most enjoyable evening was spent and the Belleville bowlers are eagerly looking forward to the return match. INVISIBLE FISHING LEADERS

A new fishing leader, which will not fray, split or become brittle, is invisible in water and possesses elastic qualities permitting a uniform "give" of about one inch per foot and resuming normal length with much the same action as a rubber band, has just been made available to the Canadian angling world.

Designed to fill the place in the fishing fraternity now occupied by Spanish silk-worm gut, the new leader will be placed on the market in standard weights and lengths, both level and tapered. Actual field tests by expert anglers have shown that the new leader, made of nylon synthetic filament, a recent product of the chemical laboratory, is far superior in every way to the Spanish gut and is consequently in no way a substitute for the old-fashioned leaders any more than Spanish gut was a substitute for the horsehair leaders of long ago.

The new leaders can be tied dry and without moistening of any kind will straighten out perfectly with a slight pull. The strength of the new leader material is equal to that of the best natural gut and possesses exceptional wearing qualities because the material contains no fibres and every strand is chemically controlled. The leader sinks as readily as natural gut — an important feature for the dry fly fisherman — and, having considerably less sheen, is less visible when in use. The leader material itself absorbs a very minute percentage of water and its resiliency remains regardless of how long it may be in use in alkaline and other destructive waters.

OSWEGONS SCORE SEVENTH VICTORY

Only Team in Canam Loop to Give Leading Rugmakers a Battle

(By The Canadian Press)

It was a piece of work worthy of baseball's finest carpenters — that remodelling job done on Oswego Netherlands during the off-season of the Canadian-American League.

The task practically amounted to converting the cellar into an attic, the Nets were that bad last year. They finished a poor sixth in the eight team circuit and easily won the distinction of being the worst fielding club, statistically, in the league.

This season, with an almost entirely new lineup, the Oswegons have been pace-setters from the gun. They've won all but one of eight starts and only the New York Yankees' farm team, Amsterdam Rugmakers have made anything like a race of it.

Flawless work afield and a heavy-hitting attack were enough to give Netherlands their seventh victory yesterday—an 8-2 count over the winless Utica Braves. The Braves connected for a brace of tallies in the first frame at Oswego but after that lefty Bill Kalfrass held them scoreless and hitless over the route.

The victory allowed Nets to stretch their lead over the second-place Rugmakers when rain washed out the Yankee farmhands' scheduled clash with Cornwall Bisons. Rome Colonels and Ogdensburg Colts also were left idle by a downpour.

The only other game played saw Ottawa Senators outslug Gloversville Glovers for a 16-12 home victory. Free passes to first base played a major part in the verdict, three Gloversville hurlers yielding 17 walks and Ottawa's Ed Poller giving back 12 of them.

TWELVE HORSES CARDED TO START

Sea General Backed Down to 2-1 Will Carry Most of Sentiment

Toronto, May 20 (CP) — Twelve thoroughbreds, cream of Ontario-foaled three-year-olds, were expected to be named today to start Monday in the King's Plate, Canadian turf classic.

The field will match speed and stamina over a mile-and-a-furlong for 50 guineas, donated by the King, and the major chunk of a $10,000 added purse. A crowd of more than 100,000 persons, including the King and Queen, is expected to fill the spacious green lawns, the infield and the upper and lower stands at Woodbine Park.

Sentiment favors Harry Giddings' Sea General, a big, brown gelding, backed down to 2-1, the General survived the arduous training period in fine fettle. He was never asked for his best at any time.

He was not entrenched solidly as favorite. There also was plenty of support for C. George McCullagh's Archworth, Medway Stable's Milius and Cosgrave Stable's Jelwell.

On past performances, Archworth appeared the logical choice to upset the General. He was retired last fall as the winter-book favorite after virtually sweeping juvenile tst events. He came to form too soon this spring and appeared to go stale.

NEWARK BEARS SHARE TOP SPOT WITH THE GIANTS

Defeat Baltimore, While Jersey City Divides Double Bill

RED WINGS WIN

(By The Associated Press)

Maybe Newark Bears aren't what they used to be, but they're back where they used to be—at the top of the International League standing.

It has taken the club which won the 1938 pennant by 18 games a comparatively long time to reach the No. 1 spot, but at last they have made the grade. They earned a half interest in first place yesterday by turning back Baltimore Orioles 2-1 while Jersey City Giants clung to a tie by dividing a double-header with Syracuse, winning the seven-inning twilight game 4-1 and then dropping the nightcap 3-1.

Joe Beggs appeared in a Newark uinform for the first time this season when he was replaced by Ivy Paul Andrews, who had wrenched his side, in the eighth. He allowed the Orioles to knot the count in the ninth, but scored the winning run from second on Mike Chartak's single and thus got credit for the victory.

Roy Joiner pitched Jersey City to its opening victory, holding Baltimore to six hits and avoiding trouble after the first inning. But the Orioles bunched their hits well in the second game to give Jake Mooty the decision over Hy Vandenberg, his first defeat in five starts.

Rochester beat Montreal Royals 8-1 as Ken Raffsberger hung up his fifth mound victory of the season. The Red Wings belted Kemp Wicker out in the fifth to score five runs and Montreal used four flingers before the game ended.

The Buffalo-Toronto contest was postponed to allow a double header later in the season.

PASTOR DEFEATS ROSCOE TOLES

Winner Demands Another Shot at Title Held by Joe Louis

Detroit, May 20 (AP)—If heavyweight champion Joe Louis and young Bob Pastor have their way, they will meet soon to settle for keeps the feud that started in their bout of more than two years ago.

Louis, then marching to the heavyweight title, won a 10-round decision and ever since Pastor and his manager, James Johnston, have demanded a rematch.

Louis sat at the ringside here last night as Bob banged out a 10-round decision over dusky Roscoe Toles, another fistic product of Joe's old neighborhood in Detroit.

"I'll fight him tomorrow if he'll fight me the way he did Roscoe," Louis declared. He added that reports he feared Pastor were "the bunk". Joe and his handlers charged after the first Louis-Pastor fracas that Pastor went on a "bicycle" for the sole purpose of staying the full ten rounds.

"I want Louis and the sooner the better," said Pastor, 24-year-old former New York University football player. "My record certainly should have earned me a title chance."

Johnston accused the New York State Athletic Commission of picking "set-ups" for Louis and said "Pastor and not Tony Galento should be fighting Louis next month."

CEMENTMEN LOSE TO CORBYS 13-2

Schrieder and Harris Allow Only Three Hits in Eight Innings

Limiting the Point Anne "Cementmen" to three singles, the combined pitching efforts of Eddie Schrieder and Connie Harris proved strong enough to stop the Ox Point nine as the Corbys A.C. terminated their spring softball training with a 13-2 win at Point Anne last night.

The Point Anne two counters came in the fourth stanza without a hit being registered off Harris. Two walks, an error and two fielder's choices paved the way for the homesters' two tallies. Corbys scored in every inning except the fourth and sixth, ramming home four runs in the fifth to cinch the game.

Schrieder, Reid and Kiser cuffed homers in the last stanza for Corbys while Alex Simpson led the batters of the night with two singles and a triple. Whalen, Juby and Scott counted the three singles collected by the losers.

The regular 1939 Belleville Softball League opens at Coleman Flats with Corbys A.C. meeting the "Oilers" in the opening game on Monday evening.

Score by innings:

Corbys	111 040 15—	13	15	2
Point Anne	000 200 00—	2	3	6

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with
Ken I. Colling

On Monday the largest crowd to ever witness a horse race on this continent is expected to watch the 80th consecutive running of the King's Plate at the Woodbine track in Toronto. It is expected that at least 1000,000 persons will welcome Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, weather permitting which will be the largest racing crowd the new world has ever seen. The King's Plate, then known as the Queen's Plate was first run at Carleton, Ont. (now West Toronto) in 1860 and has been run every year since. This year will make the first time the reigning Monarch of the British Empire has attended this historical event to personally present, with his own hand, the 50 golden guineas, the Royal prize, that gives the race its name. The 80th running of the King's Plate will go down in history and the proudest person in the Dominion will be the owner of the winning horse, who will receive personally the Royal purple bag containing the King's prize of 50 guineas, 50 guineas that we imagine will never be spent and always cherished.

What horse will win? The favorite seems to be Harry Giddings' Sea General although if the track is heavy an outsider may come down in front and win the most coveted racing honors today in Canada. The King's Plate has been run in Prescott, Whitby and even over in Picton prior to 1876. Since 1876 however, the race has been run continuously at Woodbine. The Royal couple are scheduled to arrive at the Woodbine track about 3.15 p.m. and no doubt this colorful spectacle will be broadcast, followed by the actual running of the King's Plate. George McCullaugh's Archworth is selected by some to win, but we think the big chestnut will run himself out at the mile post and on a fast track it looks like Sea General. Hundreds of Canadians who never before witnessed a running race will be at the Woodbine on Monday to hail Their Majesties. For the first time in the history of the Woodbine track the infield is to be opened to accommodate the expected 100,000 patrons to the most colorful and historic sporting event on this continent.

Only running horses are known as 'thoroughbreds' steeds. There are more than ,00,000 registered thoroughbred horses alive today, all of which are descended from three horses imported into England over 200 years ago. The first 'thoroughbred' imported into England was called "The Byerley Turk." He was a black charger ridden by Captain Byerley in the wars of King William 1689-1690. It is believed this horse was taken from his Turkish owner at the battle of Budapest in 1686. Early in the 1700's Thomas Darley, an English agent in Asia Minor, shipped his brother a bay Arabian horse, later known as The Darley Arabian and called Mannickr. More than 75 percent of all thoroughbreds now alive are descended from this Darley Arabian—"in tail-male", as the horsemen say. The third horse of this noble line was known in England as The Godolphin Arabian or Barb. It is rumoured this noble steed was found hauling a water-wagon in Paris and is said to have been stolen and presented to the Earl of Godolphin. From these three patriarchs came three others from whom the entire race of thoroughbreds is descended.

The next three outstanding thoroughbreds were Matchem, a grandson of the Godolphin Arabian, which never lost a race for five years. Herod, a great-grandson of the Byerley Turk, who sired the winner of the first English Derby in 1780, Diomed. It was Diomed that was brought to America in his old age to found the thoroughbred dynasty in the U.S.A. Eclipse was the third offspring of the original three Arabians, so called because the animal was born during an eclipse and a great-gradson of The Darley Arabian. Eclipse was a horse of ungovernable temper and could not abide to have another horse in front of him. He was never beaten and won so many races that his owners eventually had to handicap their opponents to procure competition. A poem was written about Eclipse in the early 1700's which went as follows:

"Eclipse all nags, compared with thee,
Excite contempt and laughter;
There never was a horse, I do
Believe, so much run after."

For generations the children of Matchem, Herod and Eclipse have been tested against one another because it is the nature of man, who keeps his prehistoric vanities, to desire that he shall own a better horse than his neighbours, And so we come back to the King's Plate, the oldest horse racing event and most historic on this continent, which is to be graced by the presence of Their Majesties on Monday to make this 80th running of the King's Plate one of the most outstanding events of its kind in the world. A more colorful scene will never be seen in these parts again.

Locally the out-of-doors sports season will be officially opened in Belleville on Monday starting with the opening of the Bay of Quinte Baseball League with Napanee at Belleville in the morning, sailing races sponsored by the Belleville Yacht Club on the bay, and the opening of the Softball League at Coleman Flats in the evening. The Belleville and Bay of Quinte Golf Clubs will also see large delegations of golfers in action. The local lawn bowlers are also holding an informal opening.

Thanks to the hard apple-knocking of Tommy Foley, the Peterboro senior ball club has won one and lost one in their newly organized inter-city ball loop with Toronto clubs. Parkdale beat the Petes with five hits recently, winning 8-3, the Petes winning over Findlay's on a previous date.

Did You Know That the Union of South Africa has forwarded an invitation to Canada to send a team of 11 track and field athletes and three cyclists on a good-will tour of the Union this fall. In conjunction with this the Hamilton Olympic club has been asked by the A.A.U. of C. to stage a set of trials to choose the track athletes on the team and Union officials are sounding out the attitude of western and eastern to the trip.

38 ARRESTED IN COAL FEUD

Brisk Exchange of Gunshots Between Troopers and Ambuscade

Harlan, Ky., May 20 (AP)—Arrest of 38 men a short time after a brisk exchange of gunshots between state troopers and a mountainside ambuscade was reported today by National Guardsmen patrolling the troubled coal field in Harlan County.

The exchange followed the wounding of a miner and the announced intention of the State Highway Patrol to police Kentucky's interstate highway bridges "to keep Communists out of the state". Brig.-General Ellerbe Carter, commanding the militiamen, said troopers "returned the fire" of a group of persons concealed on a mountain slope near Louellen, Ky., east of Harlan, and then drove away their assailants.

Lieut. J. C. Fleming said the Guardsmen's prisoners were taken into custody at Highsplint, about four miles from Louellen, as they rode along a highway in a truck. In the truck, Fleming said, the military found two pistols, a blackjack, a razor and several knives.

Several hours earlier Eugene McLaughlin, a 24-year-old miner, was shot in the thigh when someone yelled "scab". A man identified as John Padgett was jailed in the shooting.

Federal Conciliator John Conner, after conferences with the Union and operators, predicted a settlement next week.

IN MEMORIAM

KELLY—In loving memory of Nancy, beloved wife of Samuel J. Kelly, who passed away one year ago May 22nd, 1938.

Memory's hand is reaching
Back one year ago today
When one we loved so dearly
So gently passed away.
It was hard to part, but
It was God's will
To vacate the chair that we can never fill.
God saw the road was getting rough
And the hills were hard to climb
So He closed her weary eyelids
And whispered, "Peace be Thine".

Sadly missed by husband and family. m 20-1t

TRYING TO CRACK DIPLOMATIC WALL

France Believes Cherished Triple Front Delayed Too Long

Paris, May 20 (AP)—France hurriedly tried today to crack the diplomatic "wall" dividing Great Britain and Soviet Russia from the cherished triple front which the French consider has been delayed too long.

As Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano prepared to leave Rome for Berlin to sign Italy's formal alliance with Germany, Premier Daladier called his ministers into session to tell them his hopes—and perhaps fears—in France's negotiations to unite her powerful allies.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax is due in Paris late today for talks with Daladier and Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, preparatory to conversations with Ivan Maisky, Russian delegate, at a League of Nations Council meeting Monday.

Russia demands an outright triple military alliance and Anglo-French guarantees to the Baltic States, but Prime Minister Chamberlain disclosed objections to such a move as dividing Europe into "ideological" blocs. He also admitted British fears for the attitude of other nations if Britain met Russia on such a footing.

Trenton

Some days ago a considerable amount of planning and publicizing was done in connection with the awarding of pilot's "wings" to a class of young officers at the air station here. One or two dates were mentioned in print as the dates when these would be given out by R.C.A.F. officials, but they were not forthcoming, and though Air Marshal W. A. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop visited the local station and also Trinity College at Port Hope no wings were awarded. Now it develops (and this information comes from one of the members of the class of pilots who are to receive these wings) that the course has been extended by the higher-ups and the wings will not be presented for some weeks, probably not until late August or September.

The funeral of war veteran Frederick Augustus Potts, 54, was held on Thursday afternoon from his late home on Marmora street under auspices of the Canadian Legion, Post 110, with Rev. Dr. C. E. Dougan officiating. A very large crowd of friends and relatives were present both at the ceremonies at the home and during the interment in Front-of Sidney Cemetery.

Britain Prepares Anti-Submarine Defences

As in the last war, England knows that she must guard against a food blockade in the event of another conflict and in this regard has developed a convoy system beyond anything heretofore achieved in the way of efficiency. Most potent ammunition in the war against submarines is the depth charge, seen in the TOP picture as it is hoisted at the rail of a ship, ready to be dropped into the sea. The depth at which the suspected submarine is riding is ascertained with instruments, and the charges are set to explode when they reach that depth. BOTTOM picture shows the explosion, looking back from the stern of H.M.S. Bittern, the vessel that dropped the charge.

Ballooned Shirt Saves Child's Life

Athabaska, Alta., May 20—(CP)—A shirt which ballooned with air when the two-year-old son of Henry Shulte fell into a well 50 feet deep saved the youngster's life yesterday.

The child fell in the well while watching his father, a farmer of this district 95 miles north of Edmonton, draw water. As he hit the water his clothing ballooned with air and he floated. Shulte ran a half mile to the Meadowcraft farm, returning with a rope and Leslie Meadowcraft.

Meadowcraft lowered himself into the well. A pail was lowered and Meadowcraft placed the youngster in it to be pulled to the surface, unharmed except for minor injuries to the face. Then Meadowcraft was pulled out, exhausted.

40 Obsolete Warships Being Reconditioned

London, May 20 (CP)—Forty obsolete warships are being reconditioned and rearmed with modern anti-aircraft guns for duty as convoy escorts in wartime and drill ships for the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

First veteran to re-enter the service was H.M.S. Calcutta, a cruiser of 4,200 tons, launched in 1918, which has been moored in the Humber as headquarters of the new Hull Division of the R.N.V.R.

Two other ships are now being converted to be sent to Southampton and Cardiff where new R.N.V.R. divisions are in the process of recruitment.

About 5,000 of the goats running wild in Hawaii's National park were removed last year to conserve park vegetation.

A bottle of "nothing" prepared with the best vacuum facilities available still contains quadrillions of molecules of assorted rare gases.

"Run Away? Not Me!"

"What run away from that guy down there? What's the matter with him, is he nuts?" Thus spake Fritz Kuhn, ABOVE, seen entering his New York office, and the "guy" referred to was Fiorello LaGuardia, the city's mayor, who had demanded the arrest of Kuhn, fuehrer of the German-American Bund, which intermittently causes so much agitation in United States. His reply came after he was asked whether he or any others accused of a number of offences would leave the jurisdiction of New York.

Home for New Duties

Seen on his arrival in New York is Laurence A. Steinhardt, back home after serving a term as ambassador to Peru. After a short stay in United States Steinhardt will take up his new duties as U.S. ambassador to Dussia.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, May 20th, (Special) — Local residents were given quite a view yesterday of the new R.C.A.F. Oxford bomber brought to the local station better than a week ago, and necks were craned as it roared along near the town several times. The big plane is outstanding with its bright yellow outer covering and the tricolor emblems; and its twin motors carry it along at a much faster rate than residents of Trenton are accustomed to see. A cabin at the front accommodates the crew with the exception of a gunner and radio man who have a small covered cockpit midway back along the fuselage. The wheels are retractable, and when in the air the craft looks very speedy indeed.

Report has it that there are to be a dozen or more of these planes brought here for advanced training purposes, and that a number of Hawker Hurricane fighters will also be added.

Final instructions with regard to their visit to Kingston on Sunday, May 21st, were given to militiamen at the local Armoury on Friday night, when the final drill was held before the trip to see Their Majesties. According to latest word from district headquarters troops will entrain locally about 2.30 Sunday afternoon and will arrive in Kingston about 5.00 o'clock with instructions to be on the allotted location to line streets at six o'clock. Return here will be made soon after nine o'clock.

The visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen in Toronto will be witnessed by a large contingent of local people, who are taking advantage of excursion fares to the city for the occasion. From the schools many of the scholars will attend in carefully supervised parties, and special seats are being reserved for them on the Exhibition Grounds. College St. School is sending a group of about one hundred and twenty, and Dufferin School already has a list of over eighty. Teachers will accompany the pupils and will keep them under supervision during the day. Times for the trip include a start just before noon and a return here before midnight. Many motorists will drive as well, thus swelling the crowds who will fill the provincial capital to the very suburbs.

R.C.A.F. members are to enjoy a long holiday this weekend as their leave began officially on Saturday morning and gives them Sunday and Monday as well. In town the various stores and particularly the banks will feel the presence of a whole flock of holidays at one time as they will have both Monday and Wednesday as legal holidays.

Town workmen who have begun the oiling of the streets in certain dusty sections of the town and drawing down blessing upon their heads from the residents of these localities as the impenetrable fogs of dust begin to disappear. Marmora Street notably has been one of the dustiest streets in town and still requires oiling, while others have shown great improvement. King Street and Henry Street have received coverings of crushed stone in some sections are much improved for driving purposes.

Wooler softballers served notice that they are definitely going to be reckoned with this season as they went down to defeat on Wednesday evening at Bayshore Park to the strong Graham's aggregation but only by a 12-11 score. One rally staged by the Woolerites netted them no less than seven runs and it will be a surprise to players and fans alike if the Wooler team does not make a better showing this season than they have done for years past.

Many of Trenton's places of business and private homes have been beautifully decorated with flags and bunting in honour of the Royal visit, and downtown some excellent decoration schemes have been worthy of mention. While perhaps the Gilbert Hotel and Simpson's are most outstanding many others are distinctive and appealing.

The late Mr. Potts was a very well-known figure in the town, and by a curious coincidence was a close personal friend of the late Alex Young who died in Belleville Hospital a few weeks ago following amputation of a leg by a train. The late Mr. otts also died rather suddenly, succumbing in Kingston General Hospital on Tuesday after about a week's treatment there. Surviving him are a sorrowing wife and family.

The staging of the annual president's-vice-president's club match which was originally slated for Sunday last at the local golf course has been set over for another week or two owing chiefly to the fact that weather has not been entirely favorable to the ancient game; and now members are looking forward rather anxiously to the event which is soon to take place. Usually the president and his team meet another team chosen by the vice-president of the club at a friendly Sunday morning match, and the afternoon is devoted to mixed foursomes. This year the club displays a new strength, and is going ahead in strides that are most pleasing to the executive and to those who have worked hardest to bring this to pass. Present membership is almost a hundred, and names of a number of other applicants are being considered by the executive.

The King Inspects Guard of Honor Drawn up at Montreal Station

Probably most familiar of the King's many duties is that of the inspection of troops and in many Canadian communities military as well as civil welcomes await the Royal Visitors. Here the King is seen as he reviewed the guard of honor drawn up at the Park Avenue station immediately following the arrival of the King and Queen in Montreal. The guard of honor consisted of selected companies from the Black Watch, the Royal Regiment and the Fusiliers of Montreal. During the inspection guns boomed out a 21-gun salute.

His Moment of Freedom Over

Tied to a firehydrant and finally subdued is a bull, that for want of a better name we'll call Ferdinand. Ferdinand's lot in life is to participate in a wild west show at New York's World's Fair, but during a rehearsal he objected strenuously to being handled, so strenuously that he rushed through a fence and gave fair visitors a bit of a thrill as he went careening around the grounds and finally away from the scene of his torment. Cowboys from the fair and policemen, with the assistance of some rope and the hydrant, combined to score a one fall victory over Ferdie.

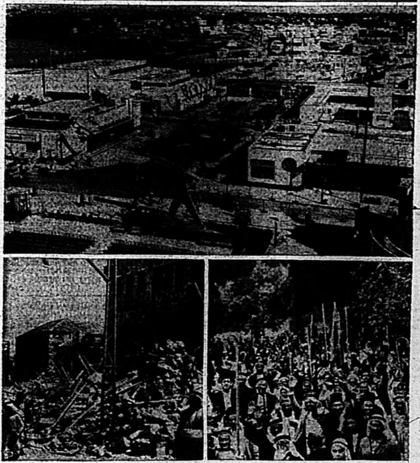
Royal Greeting for Crowds at Three Rivers

Royal smiles and a wave of the hand from the Queen are cast over a cheering French-Canadian crowd as between thirty and forty thousand crowded the railway station at Three Rivers, Quebec, where the train carrying the King and Queen from Montreal to Ottawa stopped for fifteen minutes. After a few minutes of official greeting Their Majesties walked up and down the station platform so that all could see.

Her Majesty Signs Montreal Visitors' "Golden Book"

Queen Elizabeth adds the most distinguished signature of all to the "Golden Book" in Montreal's city hall as Their Majesties stopped there during their tour of the Quebec metropolis. A new volume of the "Golden Book", a record of the city's distinguished visitors, was opened for the occasion and the first names to be entered were "George R" and "Elizabeth R". The King and Camillien Houde, Montreal's mayor, stand by while Her Majesty writes.

Where Arabs and Jews are Renewing Old Conflict



For centuries past torn with strife between the multitudinous and varied elements that make up its population, Palestine is again the scene of major disturbances following proposals advanced by the British government in its White Paper, outlining its plans for the future of the country. Limited immigration that would find two-thirds of the country Arabian when ended, and other features of the policy that the government outlined as one to create an independent state wherein Jews and Arabs would live peaceably together, were protested strongly by the Jewish minority, resulting in clashes in which a number were killed and scores injured. Tel-Aviv, up-to-date all-Jewish city, scene of many of the disturbances, is shown at the top here, while the lower pictures show a small crowd of the type that leads to the major disturbances, and one of the results of the rioting, shattered streets and buildings.

The Queen had a special smile for the young Canadian whom she saw over the King's shoulder, as his father quickly lifted him above the shoulders of the onlookers and broke through the police lines so that his young son might never forget the occasion when Canada's Ruler and his Queen were received in Ottawa.

Armed Guards Accompany Non-Union Miners to Work

Miners who returned to work on a non-union basis in the Harlan county coal fields of Kentucky, are shown being escorted to the mines by National Guardsmen, who march with them carrying rifles and bayonets at the ready. Harlan is the last district to remain a holdout against the miners' union and tension reached the danger point as guardsmen were posted to patrolthe roads and guard the mines re-opened for operations. Machine guns were set upat some points and all attempts at picketing were stopped.

LIBRARY CORNER

Daniele Vare tells many an interesting tale in his memoirs "Laughing Diplomat." An Italian music student, he was guest at a diplomatic dinner at his country's embassy in Berlin on his twentieth birthday in 1900. Kindly advice was tendered hm by various great personages there. "Don't become a diplomat," said the Prussian General Verdy, "or you will lose your sense of humour and ruin your digestion." Princess Radziwill suggested "There is a new character for you to create—the Laughing Diplomat." Mr. Vare gave up his music and became a laughing diplomat who has also known when it was prudent merely to smile within and who has combined success in his profession with authorship and a delightful time. The book has its gay and its grave moments. In prewar Vienna, the embassy members enjoyed themselves because they were expected to; yet, looking back, he sees how the annexation of Bosnia and Herzegovina was one of the first steps on the road to the Great War. In China from 1912-1920 and later in 1927 as an expert, he gathered material for two novels (Maker of Heavenly Trousers and Gate of Happy Sparrows) and a life of the Empress Dowager of China; but he also saw through contacts with such men as Sun Yat Sen and Chiang-Chai-Shek what was happening there and what would happen. Likewise, his reminiscences of Geneva in the early 1920's have interesting sidelights on proceedings at that time and those on Denmark where he has been Italian Minister since 1931 show similar gaiety mingled with worldly wisdom.

Two books which were donated recently are added to the library collection. The broadcast addresses delivered to the members of the Empire Club of Canada during the year 1937-38 have been collected and published. Among the speakers included are Hon. C. A. Dunning, George A. Drew, Beverley Baxter, Nicholas Ignatieff and others. "Canadian Poems" is the collected works of Robert S. Jenkins, well-known High School principal and former lecturer at Trinity College, Toronto. Educator, scholar and research student, he yet had time to write "Canadian Civics" which is widely known and these poems published together for the first time.

"Ten Years Under the Earth" is Norbert Casteret's record of ten venturesome years in the study and exploring of caverns, abysses and subterranean rivers in Europe. He claims that too many people think caverns are uniformly monotonous and uninteresting, "nothing but wet, blackness and mud"; he has seen no two grottoes alike and he has found excitement, seen strange sights and enjoyed intellectual satisfaction in his exploration under ground. His book, honoured by the French Academy, shows familiarity with underground solitudes worthy of Dante and a bubbling enthusiasm for his work. The illustrations many of which were taken under impossible conditions are an added thrill giving a glimpse into an amazing array of curious adventures far and near. The casual reader who has never entered a cave will enjoy "Then Years Under the Earth" and the specialist will discover many interesting facts and sidelights.

How to buy, drive and save money on an automobile is told in "Millions on Wheels", compiled by Dewey H. Palmer, technical supervisor of the Consumer's Union and Lawrence E. Brooks, member of the Society of Automotive Engineers. It is an invaluable guide to the motorist, advising and informing him of every structural detail and functional oddity of the modern automobile. The author and publisher have included a pamphlet giving ratings on automobiles, tires, gasoline, radios, etc. for the 1939 models.

POLITICAL ADVERTISING

The Sudbury Star was plaintiff in an action to recover an election account of $45 against a Sudbury alderman, and was awarded judgment with costs.

The decision is of importance, not because a man contracted a debt and would not pay, but rather the defendant claimed the advertisement, for which he had declined payment, had been nullified by the editorial comment of the newspaper. It was argued the advertisement was privileged to the extent that the paper had no right to comment upon it in the same edition as it appeared.

Plaintiff argued that all advertising copy was subject to editorial supervision and that the privilege and liberty of the press to comment upon matters of public interest could not be balked by the expediency of inserting a paid advertisement. This would muzzle the press by political candidates anticipating adverse comment by a newspaper affecting their candidature.

Now Sudbury is a one-newspaper town, and its editor stated its policy was to accept all shades of political opinion in its advertising columns, with the exception of Communistic propaganda, which is barred, but at the same time to reserve the right to disagree with any opinions so expressed.

The Judge held the newspaper had fulfilled its contract to publish the advertisement in question and beyond that the dispute was a matter of newspaper policy or ethics and not a question of law.

Once in awhile it comes to light that newspapers are nagged by politicians, yet most people believe it to be always the other way round. In towns where one newspaper serves all classes, it must naturally accept advertising from advertisers who do not believe in all the editorial policies of that newspaper. Because of this some advertisers, being politicians, and seeking public office, are frequently defeated, they proceed to "take it out" on the newspaper by refusing to pay their advertising bills.

The Sudbury Star is one of Ontario's leading town newspapers and its publisher has rendered a service to all other publishers by giving court prominence to this matter. Scarcely a newspaper but what has unpaid political advertising bills, through the fact that its editor cannot see eye to eye with all its political advertisers. — Renfrew Mercury.

BACK TO NATURE

According to Mrs. Ellen Rydelius, a Swedish visitor, "the man who is tired of New York is tired of life." The lady's remark is not original. Dr. Samuel Johnson said that about London 200 years ago.

There is a queer idea in some heads that unless people live in New York or London, or in some other very big city, life is not worth living; that they are buried and fossilizing in a dead-and-alive, one-horse community; that they know nothing, see nothing worth while, are ignorant and can have no opinion worth listening to about anything except the state of the crops. They think that unless one lives in an environment of dizzying lights, theatres, the hurry-scurry of busy streets, crowded restaurants and the odour of gasolene, a man might as well be dead.

Most people who live in big cities do so because they have to. It has its compensations, but one gets tired of cake all the time. But it is a significant fact that those who can afford it take a house outside the busy areas, out in the verdant circle, and at week-ends revel in the quietitude of their surroundings, thanking heaven that they have "escaped55 for a brief spell. And when they retire from business they make their permanent home on the outskirts.

Real living is better in the small city. There is no rush for a city train, no drive in mazes of traffic to the office or factory, no jamming in overcrowded subways. A worker can go home at midday to meals instead of in a thronged restaurant where seats are hard to get and lunches add to the cost of living, along with the cost of a commuter's ticket or gasolene—and when he goes home at night he can walk there in five or ten minutes instead of undergoing the morning ordeal over again. He does not have to go five miles to play ball or tennis, or to bowl.

Life is not so hard on the nerves in a small place, the neighbours are more neighbourly, there are more friends and living is less expensive. One lives longer and more fully, and a visit to the big city gives a greater thrill than living in it always.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

"What we want is sobriety in our national counsels and in our national leadership"—Bainbridge Colby.

WALL ST. CLOSE

New York, May 20 (AP)—Buying in steels, motors and rubbers kept the Stock Market on a rising plane today with favorites posting gains running to a point or so.

There was little pick-up in the trading pace, however, and transfers for the two-hour proceedings were only around 200,000 shares.

Prominent shares on the extension of the advance were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, U.S. Rubber Common and Preferred, Goodyear, Air Reduction, American Telephone, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, Standard Oil of N.J., Texas Corp., Santa Fe, Du Pont and J. I. Case.

Aside from a minor revision upward in International Nickel, most Canadian issues were unchanged. Dominion 4s were under mild pressure.

Bonds and commodities were narrow either way. Securities at Amsterdam, the only important foreign market open today, pointed higher.

Lower Grade Eggs Slightly Easier

Toronto, May 20.—Lower grade eggs presented slightly easier prices on the Toronto open produce market Friday, while butter maintained a steady tone, according to the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Tapering off in breaking operations, more receipts and draggy trading resulted in weaker prices in undergrades on the egg market. Grade A-large was in good demand, however, apparently due to dealers' reuirements over the prolonged week-end. No accumulation was reported. Grades B and C fell 1c per dozen in the ungraded section to 14c and 13c respectively, with these grades in the retail division of the market easing in sympathy. Graded shipments closed at 20c for grade A-large, 18c for medium, 16c to 17c for B's and 16c for C grades.

Supply and demand were about balanced on the butter market, and fresh receipts were readily absorbed at unchanged prices. Ontario creamery solids sold at 20 1-2c for No. 1 grades and 19 3-4c for 38 score.

Montreal Eggs Down

Montreal, May 20—Egg prices eased fractionally, but other offerings ruled steady on open produce markets here today, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Quebec No. 1 pasteurized in wholesale jobbing lots made 20 5-8-20 3-4 for fresh. Receipts: 563 boxes.

Ontario white and colored cheese brought 10 1-8 cents a pound. Receipts: 747 boxes.

Graded egg shipments in used free cases were offered at 21 cents a dozen for A-large; 19 for A-medium; 18 1-2 for B-large; 16 1-2 to 17 for C. Receipts: 3,794 cases, export 1,000.

Bruises in Marketing Causes Loss

It has been conservatively estimated that the loss from bruises in the marketing of Ontario hogs amounts to $500,000.00 annually.

This great loss cannot be attributed to any one source because the hogs are subjected to many sources from which bruising may come in the process of marketing.

The fact remains, however, that this loss is deducted from the value of the hogs marketed by the Ontario farmers, and therefore, should be of direct interest to the producer.

Some good lots of hogs received this week are as follows:

	No.	GRADE
			B

TENDER BROILERS AND ASPARAGUS MAIN OFFERING

Good Quality Chickens Sell for Over $1. Per Pair —3 Bunches Asparagus for 25c.

EGGS 22 CENTS

Choice asparagus and tender young broiler chickens will likely form the menu for many a Belleville Sunday dinner this week. For these tasty ingredients of a popular menu were plentiful at the city market today, where a large offering of Spring vegetables and farm and dairy produce was displayed to a sluggishly buying public.

Asparagus offered by practically every vendor on the market was quoted generally at ten cents per half-pound bunch with a number of vendors selling three bunches for twenty-five cents. Buying was slow during the early morning, but became brisker during the later hours.

Broiler chickens proved popular with the buying public selling at from fifty-five cents for inferior quality chickens to as high as $1.35 for choice weighty young birds. Fowl was offered at from sixty-five cents each.

A slight decline in egg quotations was noted today, with extra select "A's" selling at twenty-two cents per dozen. Ordinary quality sold at twenty and twenty-one cents per dozen with mediums offered at nineteen and twenty cents.

Onions, radishes Plentiful

New Spring vegetables featured the offering on the outside market with new onions and radishes selling at five cents per bunch. Fresh rhubarb was plentiful and caught the public eyes with large bunches offered at five cents each.

Plants and seedlings of flowers and vegetables were plentiful. Strawberry plants were offered at forty cents per hundred with "Cuthbert" raspberry canes quoted at two cents each. Cabbage, cauliflower and onion seedlings were quoted at fifty cents per flat of one hundred plants. Tomato plants ready for field-planting were available at fifty cents for large flats.

Sweet Allysum, zinnia, petunias and other flowering plants were quoted at fifteen cents for a small flat of approximately twenty-five plants. Pansies were popular and sold at twenty-five cents per small box.

Choice Potatoes $1.35

Potato quotations were firm and showed no change from prices of last week. Choice stock was offered at $1.35 per ninety-pound bag with lowered grades quoted at from $1.10 for the same quantity. Only a few winter vegetables were offered with turnips and carrots and a sprinkling of parsnips offered at forty and fifty cents per bushel. Last of the winter supplies, Ben Davis and Cooper's Market apples were the only fruit offered. These were quoted at eighty cents per hamper-lot.

Five and six-weeks-old pigs squealed a Spring symphony with approximately one hundred young porkers offered for sale. Prices were quoted at five dollars and fifty cents to six dollars each, but buying was noticeably sluggish during the day.

Fresh whitefish and lake trout headed the fish display with both selling at twenty cents per pound. Later, however, prices dropped to eighteen cents. Mudcats in the smallest quantity offered in weeks sold at fifteen cents per pound.

Police Blotter

Front Street merchants, who have been making a practice of leaving merchandise in front of their places of business after the goods have been unloaded from delivery transports, were warned yesterday to discontinue the practice of blocking the thoroughfares and sidewalks, Chief Kidd today revealed as such offenders were warned to discontinue.

"No merchant is permitted to leave merchandise on the sidewalks of Front Street, adjacent to their places of business for an unnecessary period of time, thus retarding the progress of pedestrians," city police added today after complaints had been registered regarding this practice.

E. G. Burley, 373 Bleecker Ave., reported the theft of two bicycle wheels to police authorities today. The wheels were removed from two bicycles left in Mr. Burley's garage. A front wheel from one machine and a rear one from another were removed.

Miss Delena Burshey, Napanee, reported the loss of a valuable Water Spaniel dog yesterday. Miss Brushey had parked her car on Pinnacle Street while shopping in Belleville, closing all windows of the car as she left her pet dog in the car, she informed police. Upon her return the canine was missing. Later police recovered the dog and returned it to its owner. It is believed some person opened the door of the car and let the animal out.

A local young woman was apprehended yesterday on a charge of issuing worthless cheques. The case is still pending and will be presented in police court for judgment next week.

Right and Wrong Way to Wear Military Medals

"Medals will be worn."

This is the most common footnote on the regular notices posted in halls of local veterans' organizations when meetings are called, or other gatherings scheduled.

And on Sunday medals will be worn by scores of local ex-service men, who will take over the task of guarding the railway right of way and bridges prior to the passage of the royal train through here.

But, like most other things, there is a right and wrong way to wear these medals, and it is not known by many of the returned men themselves that the regulation length of the ribbons from which the medals are suspended is three inches for Imperial ex-service men and one and one-quarter inches for Canadian veterans.

The explanation given with regard to the longer length of Imperial medal ribbon is that so many Imperial troops wear Boer medals and the bars of these medals cannot be accommodated on a piece of ribbon less than three inches long. Medals with bars, won by Canadian troops during the Great War are comparatively rare.

ROSLIN COUPLE HURT IN CRASH

Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Fitchett Admitted to Belleville Hospital

Roslin, Ont., May 20—(Special) —Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Fitchett, aged residents of this district were rushed to Belleville General Hospital early today suffering with severe injuries incurred in an automobile accident, when their car collided with one driven by Drury Denyes, Thurlow resident, on the Belleville-Roslin highway.

Mr. Fitchett suffered severe lacerations of the scalp with a possible fractured skull, while Mrs. Fitchett sustained a fracture of the right arm. Dr. Harold Welsh, treated the injured couple and is in attendance at the hospital.

According to reports emanating from the scene of the accident, Drury slowed his car down in order to pick up a hitch-hiker. A large truck obscured the vision of the oncoming Fitchett automobile and it crashed into the rear of the car driven by Denyes. Both cars were considerably damaged. Denyes was not hurt.

THINKS GARBAGE CANS LEFT TOO LONG ON STREETS

In a communication to the local Chamber of Commerce, a "Citizen" points out that now, while the city is in the midst of a "clean-up paint-up campaign" it would be a good idea to encourage an agitation to have the city pass a bylaw regulating the hours in which 'dirty and unsighty garbage cans may be left in front of homes after they have been emptied by the collectors".

"In many sections of the city, and particularly through the East Hill, many owners leave their cans out several days at a time for the gaze of tourists passing through.

"If the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring this campaign many, of us hope this matter will be looked into", he writes.

1042 SCHOOL CHILDREN EXAMINED BY NURSE

During the period between April 24th and May 21st, 1042 children were inspected in local schools by school nurse, Miss E. Earshman, it was stated in the monthly report submitted to the Board of Education last evening. A total of 40 school visits, and 23 home visits were made. Five hearing tests were undertaken and 15 vision tests, with 37 special physical inspections also given. For 19 of these latter tests mothers of the children were in attendance.

Parents of children starting school in September next are advised to have them examined as to health by their own personal physician and dentist, and if this is not possible, they are asked to bring their children to the schools for this inspection during the month of June.

Eight dental clinics were held during the past month, and 23 children treated. There were three cases of whooping cough, four of chicken pox and three of German measles during the period.

FORMER HILLIER RESIDENT CELEBRATES HER 100th BIRTHDAY

A news item from Cawston, British Columbia, yesterday stated that Mrs. Margaret Thorn, member of a United Empire Loyalist family, will celebrate today her 100th. birthday in Cawston.

Daughter of Abraham Hubb, she was born near Hillier, Prince Edward County, Ont. After her marriage to the late Geo. Thorn, she lived for a time on Manitoulin Island after which they moved to Punnichy, Saskatchewan. Two brothers, William and Robt. Hubbs, both of Picton, are in their 90s, stated the article.

Text of Queen's Speech

Ottawa, May 20—(CP)—Text of the Queen's speech at the laying of the corner stone of the Supreme Court today follows:

I a mhappy to lay the foundation stone of a building devoted to the administration of justice in this great Dominion. Perhaps it is not inappropriate that this task should be performed by a woman; for woman's position in civilized society has depended upon the growth of law. Canada is rightly proud of being a lond governed by the rule of law. Her judiciary and the members of her legal profession have been true to the highest British traditions of bench and bar. It is fitting that on these heights above the Ottawa—surely one of the noblest situations in the world — you should add to the imposing group of buildings which house your Parliament and the executive branc hof government, a worthy home for your Supreme Court. Henceforth, on these riverside cliffs, there will stand in this beautiful capital, a group of public buildings unsurpassed as a symbol of the free and Democratic institutions which are our greatest heritage.

(Then, speaking French, Her Majesty continued):

In Canada, as in Great Britain, justice is administered according to two great dissimilar legislations. In my native land, Scotland, we have a law founded on Roman law; it springs from the same fountain-head as your civil law in the old Province of Quebec. In England, as in Canada's other provinces, common law prevails. At Ottawa, as at Westminster, both are administered by the Supreme Court of Justice. To me, this is a very happy augury.

To see your two great races with their different legislations, beliefs and traditions, uniting more and more closely, after the manner of England and Scotland, by ties of affections, of respect and of a common ideal, is my fondest wish.

HIT IN EYE BY CHIP OF STEEL

Struck in the eye by a flying chip of steel from a drill rod while working at the rear of his home, 20 St. Paul Street, Cecil Keller was removed to the Belleville General Hospital where an operation was performed yesterday in the hope of saving the sight of the injured eye. Extent of the injury will not be known for two or three days yet, it was reported.

'No Better Argument Than Weapons' Says Propaganda Minister

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels says "there is no better argument than weapons" in the face of Prime Minister Chamberlain's proposal of a long-range peace policy.

Crowning a week in which the impregnability of Germany's western fortifications and the might of her armed forces have been dinned into German ears daily, the sharp-tongued propaganda minister spoke last night to a Nazi gathering in Cologne. Chancellor Hitler, meanwhile, moved northward from a demonstrative six-day tour of the western line.

"We do not believe that in the decisive hour democracy is longer-winded than we are," Goebbels said. "It is weak in the chest."

Germany's leadership, he said, differs from that of other European countries in that it "grasps a situation lightning-fast and then, lightning-fast, makes necessary decisions."

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

'SCREAMS' TURN OUT TO BE LADY PRACTISING SINGING

Huntington Park, Calif., May 20 (AP)—Radio patrolmen turned on the speed when they received this frantic call:

"Investigated woman screaming at—Street."

They reported: "Investigated and found a lady practising her singing lesson."

DIDN'T MIND JAIL IF PET DOG WENT ALONG

Oak Hill, W. Va., May 20 (AP) —Frank Draper said he would submit to arrest on charge growing out of a domestic disturbance on one condition—that his dog go to jail with him.

"It's a deal," replied Deputy Sheriff Virgil Lyons.

Master and dog spent the night in jail. They were freed after Draper's wife posted bond.

TOTAL ABSTAINERS VS. MODERATE DRINKERS

Oxford, England, May 20 (AP) —Total abstainers and moderate drinkers would run it out under a challenge issued here at a National fitness meeting. Frank Pakenham, Socialist member of the city council, challenged Oxford's teetotaler Quaker Mayor, Henry Gillett, to organize a team of eight teetotalers to oppose a team of light imbibers in an eight-mile relay race both teams would be "regaled after the run by the losing captain with a beverage of the winners' choosing."

TEN GLEEFUL RABBITS RACE AHEAD OF PURSUERS

Stratford, Ont., May 20 (CP) — Ten rabbits and five men put on quite a scene down around the railway yards. The bunnies were being transferred from one train to another when the bottom fell out of their box. The animals scampered everywhere with brawny railwaymen in impatient pursuit. The rabbits were rounded up before the train left.

5,000 PLANES IN EMPIRE AIR DAY SHOW

London, May 20 (AP)—The Royal Air Force proudly put on a display for Empire Day today, with 5,000 planes in the growing British air fleet.

At home to the public in 78 stations throughout the nation, flying officials showed a spitfire fighter which makes 362 miles an hour, a Whitley heavy bomber capable of 245 miles and new, light two-engined bombers.

Some authorities said the country had a first line of 1,750 planes.

PLANE ON LOAN TO COL. H. E. STETHEM

A plane from the Royal Canadian Air Force base will be loaned today to Col. H. E. Stethem of Kingston, in charge of the management of the royal visit to Kingston, who will fly to Ottawa to make final arrangements for the Kingston visit. The seaplane was scheduled from the base at eight o'clock this morning to convey Col. Stethem to Ottawa and return later in the afternoon.

Visitors Come From All Parts Of the Province

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—A city gay in spirit anticipating the visit of the King and Queen, Toronto bulged to its confines today as thousands poured from train, bus and automobile to await Monday's spectacle of pageantry in the provincial capital.

As if all roads and railway lines in Ontario had only one ending, in Toronto, the visitors came from all parts of the province and neighboring sections of the United States. Before the King and Queen have departed Monday evening, Toronto's normay population of 800,000 is expected to have been more than doubled.

The city, bedecked in flags and bunting, was just about ready. The last flags will be unfurled and the last decorations hung out by nightfall. Hotels, rooming houses and private homes opening a spare room or two for the week-end were being filled rapidly.

Nearly fifty special trains will bring the thousands to the city. Western Ontario will have a chance to see the King and Queen in its own districts next month, but still special trains are coming from Kitchener, Woodstock, London and other places. Extra buses have been stationed at all provincial terminals. One boatload of 500 is coming from Rochester, N.Y.

HIS MAJESTY

actions of public business represented by seven bills to which the King gave his assent.

The age-old ritual of Parliamentary procedure took on a new meaning as the King participated in it. Veteran politicians to whom the ceremonial side of Parliament has long ceased to be a novelty were as much agog as the youngest members as the time approached for the royal appearance.

85-Year Precedent Shattered

Had Parliament completed its business the King would have prorogued the session. Since it had not, he shattered an 85-year-old tradition in order to join in the proceedings of his Canadian Parliament. Not since 1854 has the Sovereign attended Parliament at Westminster or any other British Parliament for the purpose of giving royal assent to bills.

In every respect the ceremony was the same as when the Governor-General performs a similar function. The King and Queen took their places on the thrones in the Senate Chamber in the presence of ranking diplomatic, civil service, judicial, church officials and women in evening dress. Members of the House of Commons were summoned and, led by their speaker, walked to the bar of the Senate.

After nodding his assent to seven bills, the King read a short speech in the two official languages of Parliament, English and French.

Text of King's Speech

Following is the text of the King's speech:—

Honorable members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

I thank you sincerely for your addresses received on my arrival at Quebec. The Queen and I deeply appreciate your loyal and affectionate messages.

I am very happy that my visit to Canada affords me the opportunity of meeting, in Parliament assembled, the members of both Houses. No ceremony could more completely symbolize the free and equal association of the nations of our Commonwealth. As my father said, on the occasion of his silver jubilee, the unity of the British Empire is no longer expressed by the supremacy of the time-honored Parliament that sits at Westminster. It finds expression today in the free association of nations enjoying common principles of government, a common attachment to ideals of peace and freedom, and bound together by a common allegiance to the Crown.

The Queen and I have been deeply touched by the warmth of the welcome accorded us since our arrival in Canada. We are greatly looking forward to visiting each of the Provinces, and, before our return, to paying a brief visit to the United States.

It is my earnest hope that my present visit may give my Canadian people a deeper conception of their unity as a nation. I hope also that my visit to the United States will help to maintain the very friendly relations existing between that great country and the nations of the Commonwealth.

These visits, like the one recently made by the Queen and myself to the Continent of Europe, will, we trust, be viewed as an expression of the spirit of our peoples which seeks ardently for closer friendship and better relations not only with our kith and kin but with the peoples of all nations and races.

Honorable members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

May the blessing of Divine Providence rest upon your labors and upon my realm of Canada.

Barking guns saluted the King on his arrival and departure but the salute which will perhaps remain most vivid in his memory came in the form of cheers and song in the corridors of the Parliament Buildings.

Here and there throughout the building little groups of Parliamentary civil servants and others who not privileged to enter the narrow confines of the Senate Chamber assembled to catch a glimpse of Their Majesties.

From each of these groups as the royal procession came in sight burst first a cheer and then "God Save the King." The demonstration was wholly spontaneous but the cheers echoed throughout the building and the National Anthem was sung with a fervor that brought tears to many an eye.

King Signs Instruments

Instruments of ratification covering two forms of agreement between Canada and United States were signed at Government House by the King.

One instrument was ratification of the Revised Trade Agreement between Canada and the United States announced last Nov. 17 and effective since Jan. 1 last. It was approved in a bill to which His Majesty gave assent in the Senate Chamber.

The second instrument was ratification of a convention entered into with the United States in September 1938, covering emergency regulations of boundary water levels in the Rainy River district, west of the Great Lakes. This was also approved in a bill to which His Majesty gave assent.

Actual signing of the nine bills assented to will probably be carried out this morning.

Newspapermen Received

More history was made an hour or so later when the King and Queen received more than 200 newspaper men and women, and photographers assigned to the visit, at Rideau Hall. It was the first time a British Sovereign has received representatives of the press as such.

The Royal couple lost no time in inspecting their temporary home. The press representativs were scarcely out of sight when they set out for a stroll around the spacious grounds of Rideau Hall, to one of the few brief snatches of privacy.

The day came to a glittering close with a state dinner in the domed grey-walled ball-room, the one strictly exclusive function of the Royal visit to Ottawa. The guest list included only cabinet Ministers, Ministers of foreign governments, representatives of other parts of the Empire, and high officers in the churches with their wives.

The State Dinner

The state dinner also marked a departure from the routine followed when the Governor-General entertains at the opening of parliament. Ordinarily state dinners are for men with their wives coming in afterwards for a reception.

Since the Queen attended this time, wives of diplomats, cabinet Ministers and others high in the table of precedence were invited. As a result of the crowded list Deputy Ministers, Consuls and others lower on the table did not attend the dinner but were invited to the reception which followed in the spacious, flowerbanked room of the Vice-Regal residence, now a temporary Royal palace.

Full-length portraits of the King's parents, the late King George V and Queen Mary looked down on the assembly from the wall behind the King and Queen and as they dined they faced a youthful portrait of the King's great grandmother, Queen Victoria.

There were no speeches, because they are always taboo at state dinners.

The King wore the full dress uniform of an Admiral with the Order of the Garter and the Order of St. Michael and St. George. The Queen wore the ribbon of the Order of the Garter and a diamond tiara.

Menu at State Dinner

The menu was:
Cold essence of celery.
Halibut supreme with corn sauce.
Saddle of baby lamb with mint sauce and jardiniere of vegetables.
Young pullet York style with Ontario asparagus salad.
Crown of ice cream Imperial.
Petits fours.
Sweet savory.

Lord Tweedsmuir occupied the centre seat at the top section of the horseshoe with the King to the right and the Queen to the left. On the King's right sat the Lady Tweedsmuir and on the Queen's left Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Solid old-fashioned and comfortable Rideau Hall was a galaxy of flowers for the occasion. Red tulips graced the dinner table and in front of the seats occupied by Their Majesties a bank of red, white and blue tulips was arranged. The floral decorations blended perfectly with the deep rose and gold drapes and upholstery.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

They were not left long in any doubt as to their whereabouts, a continuous feeble moaning drew them towards the spot where four huddled shapes lay. Two were unmistakably dead. Bending over the third, the French orderly raised his shoulders doubtfully.

"Alive—but only just."

"We'll take him," Hall said briefly and helped him to lift the limp, broken body, while the other stretcher bearer attended to the fourth man. They started at once upon the return journey, moving carefully to avoid jarring their burdens more than was absolutely necessary, but they had not gone more than a third of the short distance when a prolonged and only too familiar whining screech ripped the air above them, like the approach of an express train.

Hall glanced up and, as he did so, it seemed as though simultaneously the sky descended and the earth rose up to meet it ine one blinding, deafening shattering concussion.

CHAPTER XXIV

BURIED ALIVE

Hall felt himself thrown forward as though an enormous paw had struck him between the shoulders.

The awful realization came to him that he was buried alive. No use to struggle with tons of earth and masonry above him—and yet he must struggle, must fight to free himself. With the hopeless effort, merciful unconsciousness descended a black curtain.

It rose gradually after what might have been centuries or minutes. Someone was pulling at his shoulder, someone was calling to him urgently, imperatively. Hall found himself answering:

"I can't move, I can't move...." he found himself repeating, and unexpectedly was answered by a voice clear, loud and unmistakeably angry.

"Of course you can't.... wait! Here—help me, you men! Lift this stretcher off his legs. There! Now, are you hurt, Wilson? Tell me quickly."

"I—I don't know," Hall struggled up into a sitting position, rubbed the dust out of his eyes and began to feel himself gingerly. "My foot, I think...."

"How dare you frighten me like that!" Leonie spoke almost violently. I thought you were killed when the shell exploded—and there was no need for you to be there, you'd no right to be there! Why will you always try to do other people's jobs....? Here, let me look at that foot!"

She knelt beside him, still scolding, as she examined his injury, cutting away the boot, producing lint and bandage from her pocket, and dressing the injury rapidly.

"You must have it seen to properly, as soon as possible—not that it's anything very serious," she said brusquely. "You were lucky—all the others were killed."

"Let's see if I can get up....Yes, that's all right. I don't think I can bear it on the ground though, yet—but I could hop if you let me lean on your shoulder as a crutch."

"Pierre and I will do it between us—Pierre! Give your arm that side—so! Now let's get away from here as soon as possible."

With Hall hobbling and hopping between his two supporters, they made their way back, slowly and painfully. They had nearly reached the hospital dug-out when Hall spoke.

"Leonie, I really believe you were a little bit sorry when you thought I was killed. You looked as though you were."

"I wasn't—I was furiously angry with you for daring to be dead—I suppose it comes to the same.... Be quiet now and sit down here. I want the doctor to look at your foot and give you an antitetanus injection, before I take you back in the ambulance."

CHAPTER XXV

"Perhaps She Will Come"

The hospital behind the lines to which Hall's wounded foot had limpingly led him was established in one of those provincial Chateaux of France, half farm, half manor-house, which have often an air of such solid comfort. Built round a square courtyard with pigeon-house and pump in the middle, the farm-half certainly predominated, and by far the largest room was the stone-flagged kitchen, now a hospital ward, with its rows of camp beds and mattresses, its clean smell of disinfectant.

After no more than a week in bed Hall was up and able to hobble to a bench set cosily inside the fireplace, and here he was sitting, his bandaged leg extended before him, in the darkening afternoon. Now and then a whining wind stirred the ashes on the hearth and set the flames leaping higher round the logs.

The hospital was quiet today; there had been a lull in the arrival of wounded, and all who heard glanced up apprehensively at the sound of wheels in the courtyard and the calls for stretcher bearers.

No new patients were brought into the kitchen ward, however, and Hall was just lighting a fresh cigarette when the match fell from his fingers.

"Leonie! I'm here—what an unexpected visitor! And how welcome."

Leonie, picking her way between beds and mattresses, seated herself beside him in the ingle-nook, and pulled off her heavy gloves.

"I brought some wounded; not many, things have been slack, she said. "How's the foot going on?"

"Splendid. I'm especially glad you've come because I go on leave tomorrow."

"Is it Paris?"

"Oh! London, I think. It's more of a change, and I can look up Chrissie Struan, see if all is well with her."

"Give her my love, if she cares for it . . . What a bitter wind that is in the chimney; it means snow." Leonie shivered, then sat up suddenly, her ear catching a well-known sound. "Listen! Ambulances! Where from, I wonder?"

This time the bustle was far more pronounced. Several orderlies came into the kitchen and began to shift the beds.

"A big convoy and bad cases!" one of them called to Hall. "We'll be glad of your bed tomorrow."

He was hurrying away, but, in the doorway, he jostled against a tall poilu, whose right arm was swathed with blood-stained bandages, and stopped to speak to him.

"You need a seat comrade—come over here till there's a moment to attend to you," the orderly, as he spoke, piloted the wounded man across to the fireplace, and helped him to sit down upon the bench, opposite Leonie and Hall. At once Leonie sprang to her feet.

"Perhaps I could do something," she said. "Wilson, can you help me to find what is wanted?"

When they returned with warm water, disinfectant, lint and bandages, the poilu still sat as they had left him, sagging forward, like a man utterly weary, his heavy coat, breeches and leggings sodden with half-frozen mud, gradually dripping upon the hearth as it thawed.

Pulling off her own overcoat Leonie doubled it into a pad so that he might lean back, whilst she cut away the clothing from his arm and shoulder

"You are very good . . . God bless you . . . ." the soldier spoke hoarsely and disconnectedly, but his voice and language were those of an educated man, whilst his lean ascetic face and sunken dark eyes looked oddly incongruous with his dress, so much so that Leonie commented after one quick glance at him.

"I believe that you are a priest, Monsieur," she said.

"Do I betray myself so easily?" A gleam of humor lighted the deep-set eyes. "Yes—priest, poilu and patriot, I hope."

"Three good things, Father," Hall said. "Especially when taken together."

The priest smiled faintly.

"One has no right in these days to be either if not all, Monsieur," he said simply. "At least, so I think."

"Where were you wounded?" Leonie asked, her hands busy at their task.

"Verdun."

"Ah!" She looked up. "Verdun!"

"Yes . . . . They attacked there this morning . . . A-a-h!" A gasping groan interrupted his voice, but he went on after a moment, biting his lips. "Attacked! It was more like the breaking of a huge tidal wave, the explosion of a volcano . . . and as unexpected."

"It is the great thrust," Leonie said as though to herself. "The blow the Germans have been preparing so long."

"God knows!" The priest shuddered. "Men were saying that it is impossible Verdun should be held against much masses of the enemy—yet it must be . . . it must be! They will not pass . . ." the priest protested feverishly.

"Who will prevent them?" Leonie asked.

"France . . . France . . . There have been miracles before in our history." The wounded man spoke faintly, but his eyes glowed. "It may even be impossible—but impossible things happen! The men . . . the regiments cannot be there in time, but it is such a moment as this when . . . when a thousand shall fall before one . . . and when a single Jeanne d'Arc would be worth a whole Army. . . . Perhaps she will come—Heaven may send her . . . as before . . . to save . . . France."

The Call of France.

He sank back, barely conscious.

"Let us get him into my bed," Hall said. "The poor fellow needs it more than I do tonight."

"Yes . . . perhaps you will not have much need for your bed tonight, that's true," Leonie said; and Hall, trying to help the priest to his feet, scarcely noted the curious phrasing of her words. It was not until the task was finished that she spoke directly to him again.

"I must telephone . . ." she said abruptly, as though in continuation of her own thoughts. "Wait—I shall not be long."

"It is even worse than he told us by all accounts," she said when she returned. "Very much worse."

"The French will fight desperately; Verdun means so much to them," Hall said. "They'll hold on if it's humanly possible."

"Oh, they will fight, yes! But so will the Germans . . . it isn't humanly possible, Wilson; this needs something superhuman — as that priest said."

She stood staring down into the fire, then looked up with an air of resolve.

"Wilson, I'm going to ask something of you—make deliberate use of you. . . . You know, that's my old habit." The slight movement of her lips could scarcely be called a smile.

"Well?" Hall looked at her questioningly.

"I'm asking you to give up your leave to me."

"Well . . . .! Is that all?"

"All! What a good fellow you are!"

"Surely you realise that it's a very small matter between you and me, Leonie—a few days' leave. You want me here, then?"

"I want you . . . to take my place with the ambulance. I telephoned to them just now. They are willing to give me a few days if I can provide a substitute. Driving wouldn't hurt your foot and you're fully up to the job in other ways. Well?"

"Very well, if you wish it," Hall answered quietly. "And you?"

"I must go to Paris; it is urgently necessary."

"Oh!—Paris!" Hall's sigh sounded relieved. "I was afraid that you had some other wild idea. I'll take your ambulance back tonight then?"

"Yes. That will be best." She still stared into the fire. "And . . . I'd like you to know this, Wilson; you're not doing it for me."

"I am!" His tones were so emphatic that Leonie smiled faintly. "Don't make any mistake about that!"

"Thanks. . . . But what I meant was that I'm not asking it for selfish reasons. There's something more important behind it.

"And that is?"

"France!" Low as her voice was it had a strange vibrating quality. Several of the wounded men nearest to the fireplace looked up, the priest stirred, half-opened his eyes, muttered:

"France . . .! France . . .!"

But Leonie went on without turning her head.

"That is all. . . . The sooner I go, the better. I can get a lift in a lorry as far as the railhead and from there, with luck, I shall catch a train to Paris. So . . . good-bye, Wilson. And thank you."

"There's no need......Au 'voir, Leonie!" He held out his hand and she took it, giving the clasp characteristic of her, firm and quick.

"Good-bye!" she repeated, and was gone.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"Against Orders."

A thin powdering of snow lay over the whole countryside, glittering under the pale sunlight of February.

The hangars in the open field of the French Aviation Camp at Bar-le-Duc carried this frosting; it crisped the dry grass, dusted the struts and wings of the aeroplanes which squatted, tail-down, before some of the open sheds, with mechanics busied about them.

And in his office at Headquarters the Commandant was staring rather perplexedly through his glasses at the slim figure in severest tailored black, relieved with white at collar and wrists, her eyes shadowed by a black velvet tricorne.

"You realize that it is against orders—your presence here at all, Mademoiselle," he said irritably. "I do not know why or how you came."

"I brought this letter from Paris, Monsieur le Commandant, from the Minister of Aviation," Leonie said. "I think it will explain that I have some—I will not call it a right, but at any rate an interest—a claim of a kind—"

She broke off deliberately, watched the Frenchman's face as he read the letter with the changing expressions which passed over it. At the end he looked up.

"A thousand pardons, Mademoiselle," he said. "Of course, I did not realize, but naturally, who can have a greater claim upon our gratitude than you, who it seems have been one benefactor, with the Maharajah! Those admirable aeroplanes, which are in actual use here—and most valuable. I am most happy to receive you on behalf of His Highness."

"That is why I came. The Maharajah has been invalided; he is in India. He is, of course, anxious to know how those aeroplanes have served their purpose. I, too, since I had a little to do with their design and persuaded His Highness to make the gift. I want to send out a report to him, if you will supply me with some few details, if you will let me see the machines, perhaps some of their pilots, and talk to them."

"But most certainly, most certainly. As you know, they have been attached to the Lafayette Squadron; they have had mainly American pilots." The young Commandant's manner was eager now, almost excited.

"Ah! that interests me—since I am half an American," Leonie said.

"And the other half, I would swear, is French!"

"You are right, Monsieur le Commandant."

Little Benny's Note Book

Me ad ma were eating lunch, me eating hamberger stakes and mash potatoes from yestidday and ma just eating a saucer of cottage cheese on account of being on a diet for her weight and her figure, and I said, G, ma, does it make you feel jelliss to watch me eating this big plate full of stuff while all you're having is just a little cottage cheese without even any color to it?

O no I hope I have enough will power to be fillophic, but still you dont need to go out of your way to remind me just because you know I enjoy meat balls, ma said, and I said, Well G, ma suppose somebody invented a way for you to have all the sensations of eating a swell full meal while you were just eating a little cottage cheese or toast or something what would you give them, ma?

I'd give a king's ransom, as far as it was within my means, but there's no use making assumptions with nothing to base them on but an empty dream, ma said, and I said, No mam, ma there's no dreams about it I bet I could do it myself. Do you know that paper cover hipmotism book I used to have, ma? Well I still remember how to hipmotize people and I bet I can hipmotize you into thinking you're eating terkey with cramberry sauce or anything you feel liek no matter how fattening it is outside of your imagination. And you wont have to give me any king's ransom, either. Just a dime will be plenty, so think of all you'll be saving. Just look in my eyes, ma that's all you have to do, just look in my eyes and put yourself in my power, I said.

O for lands sakes just look in your own plate and let me suffer in peace, ma said.

Wich I did, proving lots of perfect ideas proberly go to waist because nobody wants to listen.

"TOO OLD TO DIE" SAYS 101-YEAR-OLD LADY

Ingersoll, Ont., May 19 (CP)—Mrs. Lucy Scott, West Oxford Township, who said two years ago that at 99 she was "too old to die" celebrated her 101st birthday yesterday.

Miniature Found Near Two Skeletons

Orillia, May 19—A miniature broken bust image of a French cavalier, soldier of the seventeenth century, found late yesterday beneath the two human skeletons uncovered yesterday morning by workmen tearing down an ancient shed just off Orillia's main street, may throw new light upon the mystery of possible double murder or suicide Orillia police are investigating.

Discovered just beneath the floor boards, almost on top of the ground, the mouldering bones of two skeletons, one male and one female, were at first scrutiny believed by police to have been lying in this position not less than half a century.

The discovery of the French cavalier, not unlike a miniature of the huge and famous statue of Samuel de Champlain in evidence in Orillia's Couchiching Beach Park, according to Chief William Carson, may indicate the skeletons have been lying there a much longer period, probably several centuries. This theory leads police to the belief the skeletons are those of Indians and not white people. Orillia district was at one time a huge Indian reserve and the soldier image, with cocked plume and sword, may have been the gift of French explorers or traders.

Canadian Draws Ticket on Fairstone Favorite for Derby

Dublin, May 19—(CP)—One Canadian drew a ticket in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes today on Fairstone, one of the favorites for next Wednesday's derby at Epsom Downs.

The sweepstake prize fund was fixed at £956,100 ($4,474,548) with total receipts announced as £1,669,617.

The Canadian holder of a ticket on Fairstone is "Must Have It," with ticket AI-40891. As usual only the noms de plume of Canadian winners were announced on account of the Dominion Lottery Law.

THOUSANDS VIEW

the most colorful pageantry of their Majesties' Canadian tour.

Three Regiments Used.

The Governor-General's Footguards of Ottawa and the Canadian Grenadier Guards of Montreal, the two regiments which were brigaded two years ago, were ready early for the trooping of the color.

Parliament Hill has witnessed many ceremonial scenes since Queen Victoria decreed 82 years ago that Ottawa should be the capital of Canada but none matched the splendor of the guards trooping the color before their King and a vast throng of awed spectators.

On the second terrace on Parliament Hill a statue of Queen Victoria looked down on the scene as another British Sovereign stood on the reviewing stand.

Glorious Sunshine.

Glorious sunshine bathed the replica of the Royal Crown high on the peace tower of the Centre Block, silhouetted against a clear azure sky. Far in the distance the blue Gatineau Hills provided a perfect background for the spectacle.

Around the square flanked by the east, west and centre blocks and fronted by Wellington street, there were white gleaming poles at 20-foot intervals bearing long banners of gold, blue and red.

Steady streams of people poured through the streets to the hill an hour and a half before the ceremony scheduled for 10.30 a.m. E.D.T. The American Legation situated on Wellington Street, directly across from the Parliament Buildings was a point of vantage.

Practically every window on the south side of the centre block provided a good view of the whole square as did many windows in the east and west blocks.

Mammoth Crowds

The largest crowd ever to assemble on the hill overflowed down Metcalfe and O'Connor Streets before the royal party arrived. There were at least 60,000 people on hand and several thousand more crowded Confederation Square near the National War Memorial, which His Majesty will unveil tomorrow.

Highland troops lined both sides of Wellington Street from the Memorial to the present Supreme Court Building, keeping the crowds off the street and allowing cars to drive up to the main entrance to the Parliament grounds. Top-hatted Ottawans and prominent visitors alighted from their cars to pass through the gates and take special seats on the south side of the Square.

Bands blared at times in downtown streets as troops moved to their places along the route the King and Queen travel on their drive from Rideau Hall.

Children Climb on Fence

Children climbed on the heavy iron fence along the south side of the Parliament Building grounds and after a few futile efforts to remove the clinging youngsters, police decided to let them enjoy that precarious point of vantage.

Several boys climbed trees along Wellington Street, but exasperated Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers ordered them down. One adventurous lad refused to give up his choice seat in a small elm and there was nothing the police could do about it apart from going up after him An argument developed between a Mountie and the boy to the delight of the crowd around the gate but he still stayed in the tree.

Children to Board Excursion Train At North Station

Sale of one thousand children's tickets for the excursion to Kingston Sunday was announced almost completed at the local office of the Canadian National Railways by manager K. M. Dyson this morning.

The special train bearing the Belleville children will leave the North Station at 2.30 in the afternoon, Belleville time, though, as announced in another column of this issue, all children taking part in the excursion must fall in on the campus of the Collegiate at 1.30 in the afternoon, from where they will march in orderly ranks to the station. This is important on account of the check that must be made of all prior to leaving the grounds.

Special cars from Picton will be coupled to this excursion train, and any accommodation not taken up by the children will be allotted to the general public, it was announced.

MOURNED AS DEAD

ter assured authorities that they were positive of the identity.

Some doubt was expressed at the time as to the identity of the corpse because it bore a metal disc with the name "Martin Cameron". Initial exhumation verified the previous finding and a second, asked by the insurance company, was refused by provincial authorities.

First evidence the boy was alive was uncovered Tuesday by Leonard Aldous, 20-year-old former friend of Roy's, who said the youth approached him on a Windsor street. Valliere learned then for the first time that he was officially dead.

The knowledge seemed to have softened his attitude toward his father, of whom he told Aldous he was afraid, for the next night he spent at home. The senior Valliere told only his lawyer, Benjamin Maleyko, as he feared trouble from the insurance company. It was late Friday before he publicly admitted his son was alive.

Roy left home early Thursday and planned to board a lake boat on which he previously worked, at Port Colborne. His travelling companion, 18-year-old Donald Marshall, a former Hamilton Boy Scout, was credited with influencing the wanderer to return home after they had hitch hiked to Woodstock.

Roy, speaking deliberately as a result of a successful fight to overcome stuttering, said he figured he was working as a house-boy for a Goderich stock broker when supposedly killed. Most of the time since he left home May 1, 1937, he worked on boats but also travelled as far as Northern Ontario and Halifax. He drove a transport truck in Hamilton once under the name "Edward Harris".

Although he is going to have a struggle repaying the insurance company while supporting a family of six on his meagre salary as a bakery wagon driver, the boy's father said he was "tickled to death" his son was alive. He had felt bitterly about Roy's disappearance after his initial return but everything was fine when the youth came home for good.

KING AND QUEEN

Your Majesty," this somewhat nervous reporter said, striving for that restrained under-statement characteristic of the adopted sons of the Lone Star State.

It wasn't really necessary to say "Your Majesty" because "Ma'am" would have been proper.

The King and Queen added newspaper writers attached to the Royal train to their admirers by the way they handled in friendly unformality more than 100 Canadian, British and foreign journalist guests when, through the Governor General of Canada, Lord Tweedsmuir, they "commanded" the reporters to a reception at Government House.

"Are all of you going?" asked the astonished Queen as she entered the crowded room, and she seemed somewhat relieved when told that only about 50 would accompany the Royal train on the transcontinental tour, others being members of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Ottawa and local writers.

Royalty Shakes Hands

The King and Queen shook hands with everyone present and found subjects of mutual interest with many. She asked the women writers whether they were enjoying the experience. She appeared to be having a good time.

The consensus among the guests was that she would make a good inquiring reporter.

The King talked less, but with easy, quick questions when he wanted to know something.

"I saw you standing in a chair at the Stadium yesterday," he said to a London photographer. "How in the world did you get back to Montreal in that crowd?"

"You certainly are in their punching," said a New York tabloid reporter to his Britannic Majesty. "I don't know how you can take it."

King George laughed. Maybe he didn't know what the slang meant, but he seemed to like it.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Ottawa, May 20 —(CP)—Pickpockets are enthusiastic about the tour of the King and Queen. Police caught one yesterday with his hand in the pocket of a victim watching the royal procession.

The pickpocket carried $500 loot in his pockets and his prospective victim would have lost $400.

Ottawa, May 20. —(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King took a back seat to the Press yesterday, when he arrived at Rideau Hall in the midst of the Press interview with the King and Queen, and kept waiting in the anteroom until an aide spotted him and escorted him through the salon to the Governor General's quarters.

Ottawa, May 20.— (CP)— King George and Queen Elizabeth will make a brief appearance tonight at 7.55 on the balcony of the Chateau Laurier facing Confederation Square and the National War Memorial, it was learned this morning. This will be just before they enter the banquet chamber for the parliamentary dinner.

Ottawa, May 20.— (CP)—Tavern doors swung wide and waiters and patrons cascaded into the streets to watch the King and Queen go by today.

Hotel beverage rooms did a roaring trade with hundreds of thirsty holiday-makers from other towns to swell the ranks of "regular customers".

Vancouver, May 20.— (CP) — Nonagenarian couple married 72 years ago laid simple plans today to see Their King and Queen but both agreed there'll be "no fuss and palaver".

Henry Cranswick, 94, and his 97-year-old wife will have to step only a few yards from their little First Street cottage as the royal procession passes May 29.

Mr. Cranswick, bright and humorous, spurned the suggestion that he occupy a chair on the royal route. "The idea", he said, "treating me like an invalid. If I can't see my King without a lot of fuss and palaver, I'll stay in my front garden."

Vancouver, May 20.—(CP)— The only gymnastic show in Canada in connection with the royal visit will be staged here May 29 by 300 men and women from provincial recreation centres. The King and Queen will see the display as they drive around Hastings Park Oval.

Toronto, May 20.—(CP)—Decorations placed on the Ontario Legislature buildings and the City Hall for the visit of the King and Queen to Toronto Monday will remain in place while Their Majesties are in Canada. Toronto merchants have been asked to leave their business places decorated for the same period.

Calgary, May 20.—(CP)— Their Majesties' visit to Calgary next Friday will be a memorable occasion for Mrs. C. B. Oakley, who as a child knew Queen Elizabeth. Mrs. Oakley, wife of Rev. C. B. Oakley, retired United Church Minister, once lived near Glamis Castle in Scotland.

Toronto, May 20.—(CP)— An address of loyalty on behalf of 2,000,000 members of the United Church in Canada was forwarded today to Lord Tweedsmuir to be presented to King George. The address was signed by Rt. Rev. John W. Woodside, Moderator, and Rev. Gordon A. Sisco, Secretary of the General Council.

Toronto, May 20.—(CP)—A statement of loyalty was issued today by Commissioner G. L. Carpenter on behalf of the Salvation Army in Canada, Alaska, Newfoundland, and Bermuda. The statement said the army saluted Their Majesties "with loyal and unbounded affection." R'ktkR aftdt 1 -c QR RRqk

TWO-WEEKS-OLD BABE HAS TOOTH EXTRACTED

Cornwall, Ont., May 20 (CP)—Florence McCrimmon is only two-weeks-old but has already felt the wrench of a tooth being extracted. A lower tooth peeped from her gums when she was only six days old and was gently withdrawn by a dentist five days later.

COLOR TROOPED

from Rideau Hall to arliament Hill today, accompanied by a mounted escort of Royal Canadian Dragoons. He arrived at 10:30 a.m. E.D.T.

The spacious lawn in front of the Parliament Buildings presented an attractive spectacle. Its entire area had sprouted slender white flagstaffs from which streamed flags and heraldic bearings the Royal Cypher fluttered in a pleasing harmony of color amid blues and golds and reds.

Although Canada celebrated the King's birthday today his actual birthdate is Dec. 14. On his accession to the throne he decided to have it formally celebrated June 9. For this year, however, the date was changed to May 20 so it could be celebrated while he is in Ottawa. Born in 1895, he celebrated today his 44th birthday which actually does not take place until Dec. 14.

Regiments of Guards Take Part.

The Brigade of Canadian Guards, formerly the Governor-General's Footguards, Ottawa, and the Canadian Grenadier Guards, Montreal, were the regiments employed today. The entire brigade was commanded by Col. F. R. Phelan, Montreal, with Lieut. Col. W. G. Wurtele, Ottawa, and Lieut. Col. Gilbert S. Stairs, Montreal, leading their particular regiments.

Major of the Parade was Major M. F. Peiler, C.G.G. with Capt. R. K. C. Jepson, G.G.F.G. Adjutant in Brigade waiting. The G.G.F.G. provided the escort for the color, No. 1 guard being commanded by Major E. Lisle.

Since yesterday Ottawa's loyal fervor has continued to heighten. The gaily decorated streets from Rideau Hall to the centre of the city were jammed with citizens. Yesterday the royal processional route had stretched for approximately eight miles. Today it was cut to less than one-third of that and the crowds concentrating on the Capital City had been extensively reinforced.

Royal Box

The Royal Box was immediately inside the centre gate of Parliament Hill, with the saluting base a few steps in advance of that. From their barracks at Lansdowne Park the brigade of guards were conveyed by street car to the junction of Bank and Wellington Streets, arriving there at 9.15 a.m., E.D.T. From there the troops marched on to Parliament Hill where they were given a final going over

Drawn up in column of guards, they presented a brave show. Clad in their scarlet tunics with gold facings and dark blue trousers down which was the familiar broad red stripe of the Guards Regiments and the whole color scheme triumphantly topped with towering bear-skin caps, the soldiers drew applause from the crowds.

Eight guards were formed, four from each regiment, and the evolution were begun prior to the arrival of the King. First the officers "fell out", then the warrant and non-commissioned officers in charge of the eight guards marched to the saluting base. The fourth detail was performed by the officers taking position in front of their guards, while the drums played "Assembly."

In slow time officers and warrant officers marched to their guards.

Meanwhile the Queen had arrived. Her Majesty, accompanied by Lady Tweedsmuir, had driven to Parliament Hill and at the entrance to the east block they were met by Lord Tweedsmuir who escorted them to his Chambers.

The King left Rideau Hall, with Major General T. V. Anderson, Chief of the General Staff, at 10:15 a.m., with a mounted escort of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. His Majesty's approach was heralded by the cheering crowds which thronged the route. He wore a Field Marshal's uniform of the Grenadier Guards.

The King Enters Royal Box.

Arriving in front of the centre gate, the Dragoons drew up in line on the south side of the street, facing towards the Parliament Buildings. The King alighted and moved forward to the Royal box. His entry was greeted by the playing of the National Anthem, while the Guards, converting themselves into two regiments, each under its own commander, presented arms.

Reverting to their original status of eight guards, the troops stood rigidly at attention while the King approached. Walking along the line he inspected them while the massed bands played "Land of Hope and Glory".

The King returned to the Royal box, and the troop began.

The band and drums played a slow march from the right to the left of the line. Countermarching, they broke into quick-step back to their original position.

The escort for the Color then moved out and halted opposite the Color. As it was taken over by the ensign, the band played "God Save the King." In slow time the Color was trooped down the line of guards, the bands playing "Les Huguenots". Again, to the tune of "The Maple Leaf" the Color, accompanied by its escorting guard, was trooped in quick time, and finally came to repose near the right of the line.

This ceremonial detail occupied several minutes, the troops standing fixedly at attention all the while. When it terminated, the Regiments were formed into column of guards and marched past the King in slow time. Making a circuit of the parade ground, the troops broke into quick time and again marched past the saluting base.

The final movement was the drawing up of the guards in line and their advance towards the saluting base in review order. The massed bands played "God Save the King."

King Receives 3 V. C. Holders

Rounding off a brilliant spectacle, the King, returning to the Royal box, received the three Ottawa residents who wear that most cherished of all military decorations—the Victoria Cross. First among them was Lieut. General Sir Richard E. W. Turner, whose honor dates from the Boer War. Next came Major Milton F. Gregg, Sergeant at Arms of the House of Commons, who won his Victoria Cross at Cambrai in 1918, and, third, Pte. P. Konowal, a member of the House of Commons staff, who received the V.C. for bravery at Lens, in 1917.

This concluded the ceremony of the trooping of the color. The King, accompanied by his suite, proceeded from the Royal box to the Parliament Buildings for a brief rest in the Chambers of the Speaker of the Senate, prior to joining her Majesty for the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the new Supreme Court building.

The royal party arrived at the building site at 11.45 a.m. E.S.T.

'First Queen of Canada'

Justice Minister Lapointe, in reply, held that the royal visit justified him in hailing Her Majest as "The First Queen of Canada".

The Queen's "high compliment paid to the respect and love of justice predominating in this country will remain as an inspiring message", Mr. Lapointe said. "Our judiciary and our bar are greatly and justly honored and will remain the protagonists of British ideals, of British traditions and of British justice."

Speaking partly in French, as did Her Majesty, the Minister of Justice voiced the gratitude of the French-speaking people of Canada to Her Majesty for drawing "such an interesting parallel between the cordial relationship enjoyed by England and Scotland and the bonds of respect, tolerance and affection tending to unite the two great races which make up this country."

MACDONALD CASE GOES TO JURY

Justice McFarland Addresses Members of Jury for Nearly Two Hours

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—The fate of Mickey and Alex MacDonald, charged with the murder of Bookie James Windsor, was placed in the hands of a Supreme Court Jury at 10.47 a.m. E.D.T. today.

The case went to the jury near the end of the trial's third week. Mr. Justice G. F. McFarland addressed the jurors for an hour and 47 minutes.

His Lordship contrasted stories of Crown witnesses John R. Shea and Cecil (Doc) Clancy with that of the MacDonalds on events of Jan. 8, the day after the murder in Windsor's North Toronto home. Shea and Clancy testified the MacDonalds eagerly read the newspaper stories that day, commenting they were safe because newspapers said the police were looking for Italians. The MacDonalds said they had not seen newspaper reports of the murder.

"You must apply the theory of probability in this instance," Mr. Justice McFarland said. "Here you have a group of criminals, all with criminal records, all actively interested in crime. A dastardly crime has been committed. Here are two newspapers detailing the crime and the circumstances surrounding it. I ask you if it is possible that this group of criminals all interested in crime, regardless of whether they have anything to do with it or not, would be so disinterested in this as to ignore newspapers giving details of the crime."

His Lordship stressed the identification by five eye witnesses to the murder of the bookmaker.

"Their identification was very definite, there was no hesitation, and one of the women said 'I'll remember that face as long as I live'."

TO GREET THEIR YOUNGER SUBJECTS

Flanked by cheering thousands, the King and Queen in the royal car start down Winchester Drive from the Danforth, on their way to Riverdale Park, Toronto. At the park they drove into a decorated enclosure and stopped. Then the royal standard was unfurled on the main flag-pole, and a band played the National Anthem. From the moment the car appeared distantly in sight, the youngsters cheered lustily and waved their little flags, and by the time they had arrived the sea of childish faces was tossing with waves of sound. After a moment's pause the royal car left the enclosure and wound in and out, at a very slow speed, about 15 feet in front of the children, for about 20 minutes. In this way every child got a good glimpse of their Sovereigns, a glimpse that will remain enshrined in their memories throughout the years.

Queen Mary Is Shaken When Car Is in Collision

Queen Mother is Able to Leave Doctor's Offices After Brief Rest to Recover from Shock

CHEERED BY CROWDS

Painter Assists in Rescue of Queen Mary, Uses Ladder so that She May Reach Ground

London, May 23.—(CP)—Queen Mary is 'suffering from considerable bruising' from effects of an automobile accident this afternoon and has been ordered "some days complete rest", it was announced officially today.

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 23 (C.P. Cable)—Queen Mary was shaken severely today when her automobile turned over in a collision with a truck.

Within a few minutes of the accident, however, the Queen Mother who reaches her 72nd. birthday next Friday, was able to leave a doctor's office where she had been taken to rest and drove away in another car.

The Queen appeared to have recovered as she left the scene, acknowledging the cheers of a crowd.

The Royal car collided with a two-ton truck carrying steel and was badly damaged.

Bruised and Badly Shaken

After the Queen had been driven to her Marlborough House residence it was learned that she complained of slight pains in her back, which were believed to be due to bruising. She was authoritatively reported "bruised and badly shaken" but otherwise unhurt.

The front of the truck crashed into the rear wheel of the Queen's car, but only the radiator of the truck was damaged.

Queen Mary was helped from the damaged car to a nearby house which proved to have been the home of a physician who died last week, Dr. H. S. Revell.

She therefore received no medical attention until after she had been driven home from Putney. From the Revell house telephone calls were made to neighboring doctors, but none could be found at home.

Instructions then were given for two Harley Street specialists to attend the Queen at the Marlborough House when she returned.

Escaped Injury in 1937

The accident was the second in which the Queen Mother has been involved. She escaped uninjured from an automobile accident in Surrey in 1937.

Today's accident occurred in Putney, a West London suburb.

An eye-witness said the royal limousine turned over when it collided with a truck. A painter, working nearby, rushed to the car and placed a ladder against the upturned side, assisting her Majesty to the ground.

The eye-witness said the Royal car turned "completely over".

"The crash brought people running from their houses." Another witness said the people "were horrified to see that the car which had turned over on its side was a Royal one."

Suffers from Shock

Taken to a nearby doctor's home, she was found to be suffering from shock but otherwise not hurt. After resting she emerged from the house and waved to a crowd which had waited anxiously outside. The crowd cheered.

King George Informed of Accident

Jack Fish, Ont, May 23 (CP)—News of the motor accident today in which Queen Mary was involved reached the King and Queen shortly after the royal train pulled out of this coaling station on the north shore of Lake Superior at 2.04 p.m. E.D.T. Jack Fish is 20 miles east of Schreiber where Their Majesties stop 10 minutes on their trip West.

The report to Their Majesties was contained in the Train News Bulletin supplied to the Royal Train by The Canadian Press, at three or four specified times daily. Today's afternoon bulletin was scheduled to be delivered at Schreiber but a special bulletin was dispatched to Jack fish.

BRITAIN EXPECTED TO ACCEPT TERMS OF RUSSIA

By J. F. Sanderson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 23.—(CP Cable)—There is every indication that the Government will accept Soviet Russia's participation in the European anti-aggression bloc on that country's terms.

The cabinet is expected to agree when it meets tomorrow, to enter into a full military agreement with Russia—the condition Moscow has demanded firmly before pledging support to the western democracies in resisting further aggression in Europe.

U. S. SUB IN TROUBLE

Portsmouth, N.H., May 23 (AP)—The U. S. Navy submarine Squalis, with 62 men aboard, was reported "down" and "in trouble" in 240 feet of water today off White Island, about five miles southeast of the Isle of Shoals off the New Hampshire coast.

Heartily Cheer Royalty As Triumphant Visit is Carried Out at Kingston

(By Geo. H. Carver, Staff Reporter Ontario Intelligencer).

Kingston, Ont., May 22—A vision of white loveliness stepped from a gleaming blue silver and gold "dream-train" here shortly after seven forty-five Sunday evening. She was Elizabeth Queen of England and by her side was the handsome bronzed slim husband, King George VI. King-Emperor of the British domains beyond the seas.

As the last coach of the long train that glided gently to a stop at the "north-end" Canadian National Railway station here, halted in front of the gaily-decorated platform, a prolonged cheer from civic officials, police, military and other representatives and the press of three nations rent the air.

Downtown one hundred and fifty thousand loyal Eastern Ontarians awaited impatiently the appearance of Their Majesties.

King Looked Tired

His Majesty King George VI. looking a little tired, it appeared to this writer, and his gracious lady Queen Elizabeth stood on the observation platform of the coach as it glided to a stop.

On the station platform lay a richly embroidered rug, royal red in color. On both sides stood the scarlet coats of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the blue and white of the Canadian National Railway policemen, Civic officials, members of the Kingston City Council, in frock coats and silk hats were in the background.

Hovering in the near-distance were representatives of the world's press, distinguished writers from the Empire, and humble local reporters from nearby newspapers.

The train stopped. From the observation platform of the last coach, stepped a lady clad in white. By her side was a tall-slim bronzed gentleman, clad in grey trousers and a black morning coat.

"My, she's beautiful" murmured a veteran newspaperman as the Queen stepped forward to greet His Worship Mayor Harry Stewart and

"Great Human Characters" Says Premier M. F. Hepburn In Describing Toronto Visit

Mitchell Hepburn, "so enthusiastic I don't know what to say," described the King and Queen as "great human characters," following their departure from Toronto last night.

"There are no words to really describe what I feel," he said. "I know that they are the right type to preside over British democracy and to rule the British Empire, particularly in these trying times."

Premier Hepburn spoke of their "great simplicity, power of understanding and graciousness at all times."

"They were game to the end," he added. "They were tired out but they stuck with it to the finish. At the platform they could have gone into their coach. But they stood out until the train had gone far down the track."

BISHOP ENTHRONED

New York, May 23 (AP)—With all the splendor of its age-long tradition, the Roman Catholic Church installed the Most Rev. Francis Joseph Spellman today as Spiritual Leader of the New York Archdiocese of 1,000,000 communicants.

His enthronement in succession to the late Patrick Cardinal Hayes as the sixth Archbishop of New York brought to the city some 50 bishops and archbishops and hundreds of the lesser clergy.

JOURNALS ARE CRITICAL

London, May 23— (CP)—London Financial Journals were critical today of the proposed Anglo-American Exchange of strategic raw materials useful as a reserve in time of war.

The Financial Times (Independent) said the idea of "barter between two nations to whom the very notion is repugnant is defensible only as an emergency measure".

VISCOUNT HALIFAX WILL CHAMPION RUSSIAN PACT

Willing to Go Farther Than Great Britain and France Have Hitherto Found Acceptable

Convinced Projected Three-Power Combination Should be Concluded as Soon as Possible

Geneva, May 23 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax was reliably reported today to have decided to champion in tomorrow's Cabinet meeting in London a closer form of mutual aid pact among Great Britain, France and Russia than Britain hitherto was found acceptable.

Lord Halifax's decision was said by informed observers to have been reached after last-minute round-robin talks among delegates of the three great powers here for the League Council session.

These informants said he had been influenced by Russia's refusal to consider any essential deviation from its insistence on comprehensive mutual assistance guarantees.

ITALY PREPARING TO COLLECT DEBT

Rome, May 23 (A)—Italy is preparing to collect war debts from Nationalist Spain by accepting Spanish materials valuable in munitions making, a reliable informant said today.

The total owed by General Franco for aid to the Spanish Nationalist cause is said to be approximately $500,000,000. This does not represent cash advances but airplanes, guns, munitions and other supplies.

Italy is said especially to want iron ore in return. Italian plans are to exploit the ore reserves with Italian technicians, and possibly laborers, and to transport the ore in Italian ships.

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Toronto, May 23.—(CP)—A distinguished figure among the "men of the trees" at the tree-planting ceremony which the King and Queen witnessed on the "Avenue of Remembrance" near Exhibition Park here yesterday was Sir William Mulock, 95-year-old former Chief Justice of Ontario.

Toronto, May 23.—(CP)—Thomas Southgate of Ottawa, who drives the King's automobile, knows His Royal Standards. When he came in to take charge of the car at the North Toronto Station for the royal tour of Toronto yesterday, he hauled down the flag which flew atop the windshield. Upside down wouldn't do, especially with the King and Queen behind it. It went up correctly.

Wellington, May 23.—(CP Reuters)—New Zealand "would be delighted to make the necessary arrangements" if it were possible for the King and Queen to visit the Dominion, Prime Minister Michael Savage said today. "I am sure they would be received with open arms by the people," he added.

Vancouver, May 23 (CP)—Bells of Holy Rosary Cathedral will peal the moment the King and Queen step from their Royal train here May 29 and special prayers will be said in Vancouver's Catholic churches that day, according to instructions of Archibishop William M. Duke.

Peterborough, Ont., May 23 (CP)—Three English Kings have been seen by 15-year-old Delina Anderson of Peterborough. She saw the King and Queen in Toronto yesterday and had previously seen King George V and Queen Mary during a trip to England. The trip also gave her a view of the Prince of Wales now the Duke of Windsor and formerly Edward VIII.

Oklahoma City, May 23 (AP)—An Oklahoma Indian Princess will appear before King George and Queen Elizabeth when they visit President and Mrs. Roosevelt in Washington.

The Princess is Te Ata, daughter of the late T. B. Thompson, last Governor of the Chickasaw tribe. Told Mrs. Roosevelt had chosen her to appear at a musicale for the King and Queen.

In private life the Princess is the wife of Dr. Clyde Fisher of Hayden Planitarium, New York.

MINOR ACCIDENT

Of the thousand or more school children and officials to go to Kingston to see their Majesties, only one minor accident was reported. At Kingston station Reg Moncrieff, one of those particularly responsible for the arrangements of the train, got a large cinder in his eye which became quite painful. Later Nurse Beaumont expertly extracted the cinder to relieve the irritation. Nurse Beaumont was one of the several nurses from the Belleville General Hospital staff to accompany the kiddies to Kingston.

WRECKING OF REAR PART OF STORE BEGINS.

Demolition of the rear part of the store owned by Mr. Ben Springer, 290 Front Street is now well under way. A modern up-to-date building will be erected and will house a new two-storey store.

The old building will be recalled by older residents of the city as being that in which the former George Ritchie Company originally started business. Later the firm purchased the E. W. Holden Company and later disposed of the business to the T. Eaton Company of Toronto.

GIRL GUIDES PLANT ROYAL OAK TREE IN HONOR OF KING'S VISIT

One living, permanent marker will stand in Belleville to mark the visit of Their Majesties, the King and Queen to this city.

On Saturday eighty members of the Belleville Girl Guides, under the leadership of Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, deputy commissioner of the local corps, visited the civic bathing beach at the east city limits and with appropriate ceremony planted a Royal Oak tree from the Windsor Forest, the gift of beach commissioner Reg. Moncrieff.

On the tree a simple bronze plaque was affixed bearing the lettering: "Royal Visit, 1939. C.G.G."

DECORATIONS MAY BE LEFT IN PLACE WHILE KING IS IN CANADA.

Though no hard and fast rule has been set for the length of time present decorations on stores and buildings along the business sections and on private homes may be allowed to remain, it was generally felt by the majority that such flags and bunting will be left in place until Their Majesties cross the border into the United States. It was believed that the city hall decorations will remain as long as the King and Queen are in Canada.

The King and Queen Seen In an Unforgettable Picture

Thousands Catch Vision on Rear Platform of the Royal Coach and Sovereigns Make Appearance to Acknowledge Greetings.

Their Majesties King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth stepped into the most intense scene or picture which will forever remain in the memory of thousands as the Royal couple came out upon the lighted rear platform of the Royal coach at the Belleville north station on Sunday night. No drama was ever more intense. A crowd of many thousands had been assembled for hours waiting for that moment. It had rained for a time and the night was dark. But lamps were alight on the station grounds and a floodlight illuminated the space between the crowd and that Royal coach. The light on the rear platform shone upon the doorway and wall of the car for a perfect background.

The band had played and the people had sung "God Save the King", they had cheered and had played and sung the National Anthem again. Moments passed. There was tension, everyone was expectant and yet fearful lest the Rulers, weary of a very busy day at Ottawa and at Kingston might have retired to rest. It seemed as if the time would soon come when the train would move away, bearing the King and the Queen westward.

Then someone started to cry out in the crowd, "We want the King". "We want the King", the crowd at the front took up the shout. And time went on.

Then the suspense was intensified. Those east of the train could see that light was now coming from within the coach. Then a sudden burst of light as the door was opened. Into that light moved with fairy-like silence a figure in white. The gathering realized it was their Queen. Taken by surprise the people had not had time to break into applause when lo! the King was coming out. The crowd burst into cheers, the band started to play the National Anthem and the thousands took up the words.

Almost as soon as the Royal figures had appeared on the rear platform stage, their Majesties began to wave those significant gestures of theirs. With her left hand she waved with that gracious style of movement which the world has admired so much, perfectly atune to the impression which she creates wherever she is seen. His Majesty the King who stood on the right and north side of the door waved a kingly gesture, indicative of the man. The crowd far away took up the cheering which burst into wave after wave of sounds. The gentle gestures continued to wave.

It was a picture that will never be forgotten. The thousands cheered and cheered without a break.

Then something appeared to move. Was the eye deceived? There was movement. The thought dawned on the loyal watchers that the vision of loveliness and queenliness and of kingliness and royal dignity and strength was slowly to disappear. The band was playing the National Anthem, the figures grew smaller as did their stage, the light grew dim as the train moved westward. Thousands who were the first privileged to see the Royal couple in the perfect setting of the rear wall of the coach kept eyes on that illuminated moving picture until it had become indistinct and merged with darkness.

But as the train moved westward, those who had been west of it found sweeping into their vision, the King and Queen. These were those watchers who were on the north side of the track, not far from the front lines and those who were west of the station. For a moment they had the full close-up vision, rapidly diminishing as the train gathered speed. Up to the Cannifton Road crossing this picture continued until the last watchers there lost the vision in the night. Last seen by all those thousands who could see were Canada's King and Queen wafting in their gentle style greetings in appreciation of the acclaim paid by the thousands of this district. To the Royal couple across the night air were borne the notes of "God Save the King" played by the band and mingled with the sounds of distant cheering.

THUGS FRIGHTENED AWAY

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Thugs dragging the strong-box from the Lansdowne Theatre early today were frightened away without the box when Mike Loukides, owner of a restaurant next to the theatre, heard them and shouted after them. They dropped the box and raced away on foot, leaving a stolen truck in a lane at the rear of theatre.

City and District Motorists Thanked For Co-operation

"There were at least 10,000 automobiles in the vicinity of the C.N.R. station on Sunday night when the Royal train passed through Belleville," estimated Chief Constable Alex Kidd today. Following the departure of their Majesties the worst traffic congestion ever seen in Belleville followed.

However, not a single motor accident was reported to Belleville police although it took fully ninety minutes before city traffic conditions returned to normal. City and railway police, assisted by War Veterans, slowed traffic down considerably along the streets adjacent to the C.N.R. station, while at the corner of Bridge and Front street a traffic officer was busied for nearly two hours directing the steady flow of motorized traffic, that was wending its way homeward after seeing their Majesties.

"The drivers were very courteous and I wish to thank all those who assisted us in any way on Sunday night," stated Chief Kidd today as he added that Belleville's free-of-accident record over the holiday was one to be proud of.

Police Blotter

Despite the heavy traffic and holiday atmosphere in Belleville, Chief Kidd stated today crime and law violations were at their lowest ebb, the only arrests being necessary resulted from several persons who had imbibed freely but not well.

Ten-year-old Thomas Schrieder, James street north, sustained bruises and general shock when he was in collision with a motor car, young Schrieder was riding a bicycle at the time. The automobile being driven north on Front street near the upper bridge by Mrs. Walter Sills of Corbyville, approached the intersection when the cyclist apparently made a lefthand turn in front of the car and the collision resulted. No great amount of damage resulted and Schrieder was not seriously hurt police were informed.

A local resident was apprehended setting off fireworks on Front street last night. Some of the displays lodged in store awnings, police were informed and upon investigation arrested the man on charges of intoxication. "Just a little celebration for the King," remarked the inebriate at the police station.

As railway traffic was withheld owing to the Royal train passing through the Belleville district, only two transients sought shelter at the police station last night. "There were no freight trains running yesterday, so the boys just couldn't get around," remarked one police official as he glanced over the transient register today.

Today's session of local police court was short, to say the least. His Worship, Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., concluded the proceedings with rapidity. An old offender, who was charged with third offence intoxication, was given three months in the common jail.

"Gosh, that'll knock me out of a whole summer's work," he mumbled as he left the docket.

CONSISTORY IN NOVEMBER

Vatican City, May 23.—(AP)—A Vatican News service said today that Pope Pius probably would summon a consistory in November to fill some of the eleven vacancies in the college of Cardinals.

GREATEST THRILL OF HIS LIFE SAYS LOCAL TRAINMAN

Thos. Hallam States It Was a Moving Sight To See the Country People Cheer As Royal Train Passed By.

ALL CROSSINGS PACKED

"It was absolutely the biggest thrill of my life. In all my twenty-seven years of railroading, I have never experienced the joy and pride that I did on Sunday when I acted as fireman on the Royal Train from Brockville to Belleville," Mr. Thomas Hallam, veteran fireman and engineer of the Canadian National Railways stated yesterday.

"It was a heart-thrilling sight as the royal train drove slowly through the country. Every crossing was jammed with cheering, shouting people while cars were parked for long distances down the roads. People sat on the fences for some distance east and west of the crossing, shouting and waving their hats."

"Farmers cheered their King and Queen and the gleaming blue and silver train as it sped easily along the tracks enroute to Kingston," Mr. Hallam said.

Mr. Thomas H. Crozier, veteran engineer of the Belleville division of the railway piloted the royal train from Brockville to Belleville.

Train Crews

On the pilot train that conveyed railway and press officials, were Engineer W. V. Fairbairn and Fireman H. A. Singer. Crews of both trains were relieved at Belleville. Engineer F. W. Potter took the throttle of the Royal Train, assisted by Fireman T. H. Gillett. On the pilot train were Engineer R. L. Muirhead and Fireman J. L. Clark. These crews were relieved again at Brighton where Canadian Pacific Railway crews took charge of the trains.

Train crews operating the Royal Train from Brockville to Belleville consisted of Conductor E. Milner, Toronto, and Brakesmen J. J. Cotter and E. B. Steel, both of Toronto. On the pilot train between these points were Conductor Alex. Martin, Brockville, and Brakesmen Charles Erskine, Toronto, and H. H. Ferguson, Montreal.

On the Royal Train when it left for Brighton were Conductor F. C. Morris and Brakesmen C. D. Ferguson and I. A. Cameron, all of Toronto, while in charge of the pilot train were Conductor C. F. Robinson, Montreal, and Brakesmen Dave Gallagher, Pickering, and J. F. Ferguson, Scarboro.

Brighton Girl Reporter Breaks Ankle While Running After Train

"Or I'll break a leg in the attempt." And she did . . .

Margaret Lapp, reporter on the Brighton Ensign, was determined to have a ride on the Royal train bearing their Majesties, and succeeded on Sunday night, but only after she had fractured her ankle in a fall as she pursued the Royal train.

On Sunday evening as the Royal train stopped east of Brighton, Miss Lapp was running alongside the train and slipped off a culvert, with the result she fractured her ankle. When the Royal train stopped R. C. M. . and Provincial Police on guard made an improvised stretcher, later placing her aboard the train where Capt. H. White, R.N., the King's personal surgeon, rendered first aid.

Later Miss Lapp rode in the baggage car of the Royal train into Brighton station where she was given into the custody of Dr. Rundle and removed home.

"She was very brave and never complained at all," said Royal train attendants as they waved adieu to the smiling young lady who had ridden on their Majesties' train.

Old Lady Waits Long Hours to See the King

A little old lady whom spectators said must have been in the vicinity of seventy-five years of age, huddled in the grass near the north station of the Canadian National Railway at Kingston on Sunday.

She had hitch-hiked from her home one mile east of Gananoque, she said, and had been given a lift of five miles. She arrived in the city shortly after five o'clock in the morning and took up her position near the station road at that time.

All day long she sat on an old sack near a barbed wire fence. At five o'clock in the evening when the scarlet-coated Mounted Policemen moved the crowd from the station grounds, a tear glistened in her eye when she was told she would have to move.

But the husky red-coated policeman had a kindly heart and a mother of his own. Gently he assisted the little old lady to her feet, and told her she could sit behind the barbed wire fence. He gently placed the tattered old sack in position, and helped her to her new position.

She got her wish. Spectators stood aside shortly before eight o'clock so that she could get a clear view of Their Majesties as they passed by in their gleaming purple car.

STOLEN WATCHES RECOVERED

Toronto, May 23.—(CP)—Sixteen watches stolen from a Yonge Street jewelry store last night were recovered soon afterwards in a lane near the store. It was believed the thief hid the watches in the lane, hoping to come back for them later.

Children's Trip to Kingston Will Live Long in Memory

Those Who Went Will Never Forget Sight in the Stadium As Royal Couple Passed.

ALL WERE WELL BEHAVED

A glorious adventure that will live long in the memories of those who took part in it.

That is the way officials entrusted with the arrangements for the Belleville school children's visit to Kingston to see the King and Queen on Sunday today spoke of the trip.

"Belleville's contingent of well over one thousand children from the city's schools, and the suburban schools of the immediate district, flaunting their gay banners with the names of the schools inscribed, and waving flags as they marched and sat in the George Richardson Memorial Stadium, were the smartest of the lot", Kingston officials were quick to comment on the arrival of the children there. And even counting the exuberance of spirit which marked the day, they were among the best behaved, it might be added.

Not an untoward incident marked the day, barring of course the slight accidents which are the part and parcel of any picnic or day's outing—one slight cut on a leg suffered by a little girl when she fell on a broken pop bottle; one fainting case, but the victim was revived by the Belleville nurses in attendance in full time to see the arrival of Their Majesties in the Stadium. Of lost or actually hurt children, there was none. It was a day full and replete spent in perfect harmony with the motif of the event.

Falling in on the campus of the Collegiate at one-thirty in the afternoon the children under the guidance of the monitors and supervisors marched with lunch boxes, flags and other equipment to the North Station where the excursion train awaited. Perfect order prevailed. Arriving in Kingston they were marched to the Stadium where every arrangement had been made for their care. The section in the grandstand reserved was perhaps one of the best locations in the grounds. A perfect view of the proceedings there was afforded.

"It was a sight to see those Belleville children in the stands there and to see the enthusiasm which is so much a part and parcel of youth, commented Mr. Reg. Moncrieff, general chairman in charge of the committee reviewing the events of the day.

To officials the fact many of them were so excited they forgot their carefully rehearsed parts and instead of breaking into the ringing song of "God Save the King" indulged in tempestuous cheering detracted nothing from the expressions of loyalty that were so spontaneously given.

Many Got Cinders in Eyes

Enough adult members of the trip were on hand to ensure the safety and comfort of the smallest child, and supervisors were busy during the day keeping track of their charges. One of the most frequent complaints reported by nurses were cinders in young eyes and many were given first aid for this trouble. A few children were temporarily lost while in the city of Kingston, but quickly rounded up. And so zealous were some of the supervisors in this regard that several cases of mistaken identity were reported. In the case of one child found wandering along the track near the special train as it was about to start after a brief halt to clear the line ahead, the small boy was hustled on the train before it was found out he was a Kingston school child who had innocently wandered by the train at the time.

Today an expression of appreciation was tendered by the committee of Belleville for all residents who assisted in making the day a success. Even parents who awaited at the Belleville station until well after one o'clock in the morning when the train returned to the city assured in the success of this original and memorable excursion which will ever be remembered by those who took part.

MOVING PICTURES OF LANDING SHOWN

HEARTILY CHEER

his wife. For a second there was a tense silence. The very magnetism of the personality of the Queen, her beautiful appearance acted like an anaesthetic on those that were in the vicinity.

Warmly Greeted

She smiled. She warmly greeted Mrs. Stewart and accepted with all the regal grace that is her's by nature the beautiful bouquet of purple orchids and lilies of the valley that was presented to her. The King, bronzed, handsome, stood nearby. His face lighted with that smile that is peculiarly his, as Mayor and Mrs. Stewart accorded them the official welcome of this historic city.

Then the Queen turned. Scarlet-coated mounted policemen, taken aback by the charm, and the beauty of the Queen, stood suddenly at attention. The tension was lifted. Veteran newspapermen threw their hats in the air. A cheer rent the air. Her Majesty still smiling, with a smile that has yet to be copied or described in mere words, moved slowly along the rich red of the royal carpet. The King stopped and chatted with the Queen. His eyes flickered upward for the fraction of a second to where the Crown Royal of England, draped with the Union Jacks and the Crosses of the nations framed over his head. His eyes swept over the assembled police, officials and newspapermen and women. Then His Majesty's face lighted with that warm illuminative smile, that has endeared him to millions of his subjects. The scarlet-and-white uniformed band of the Frontenac Regiment played the National Anthem.

In Morning Coat

Slowly the Royal couple moved along the carpet to where the Royal automobile stood gleaming in its purple colors. The King was garbed in a black morning coat with grey trousers.

The rich dark beauty of Her Majesty was offset by her beautiful white ensemble. She wore a white crepe suit over which was a three-quarter length white coat of magnificent material. On her right wrist was a gleaming bracelet of diamonds while on her neck her Majesty wore a magnificent three-strand rope of pearls, fastened at the back by a diamond catch. On the sleeves of her coat were cuffs of rich Arctic white fox fur. She wore white shoes and stockings of a gunmetal shade.

Smiling graciously, their Majesties moved slowly across the red carpet to where the royal car, gleaming in purple and gold, Royal Canadian Air Force officers in attendance stood waiting. One hundred yards away, cheering crowds, unable to witness the arrival of the Royal couple stood waiting to get their first glimpse of their Majesties.

As the cars moved off down Montreal street crowds that awaited the arrival of the King and Queen gave vent to their feelings. A prolonged roar mingled with the sounds of the National Anthem greeted the Royal couple as they turned the corner on their eight mile route of procession.

The Queen with that gracious motion of significance towards his Majesty the King absolutely captivated the crowds with her naturalness and personality.

Police Patrol

Ahead came the sounds of cheering. A scarlet-coated Royal Canadian Mounted Police Motorcycle Patrol with yellow-banded caps instead of the traditional Stetson hats rode on each side of the purple-colored Royal car. Immediately behind them came another car with the Royal Mounted Police guard of their Majesties. Yet behind rode the gentlemen of the Royal entourage, the Queen's ladies-in-waiting were not in the procession. Following the Royal entourage were members of the press.

The word flashed through the city, "They are coming!" And a thunderous echo to the tumultuous welcome already accorded their Majesties, resounded as this historic city gave itself up to one of the most wildly enthusiastic demonstrations that it has ever seen.

Forgotten was the disappointment of a few days ago when the Royal visit was shortened to forty-three precious minutes. Forgotten was the long tiresome wait of hours. Forgotten was personal discomfort. Eastern Ontario was out en masse to greet their King and Queen.

Along crowd-packed streets the Royal procession wended its way. Roaring crowds greeted their Majesties as the entourage crept along the route of procession.

Thrilling Experiences

It was thrilling. We who sat in the cars behind the Royal equipages may have, perhaps, got the aftermath of the response of Eastern Ontario to its King and Queen. But as we rode through the wildly cheering masses, we could not help but get that catch in the throat, as men and women, children, and their grandparents, their eyes agleam with the fervent fire of patriotism, call it that if you will, acclaimed that grand couple in a manner that has never been equalled in this historic city.

For, in the streets of this former key to the defences of Upper Canada, this city steeped in historic lore and legend, thunderous echoes of a tumultuous welcome already accorded the first British Sovereign to set foot on Canadian soil resounded as over one hundred thousand Eastern Ontario loyal subjects acclaimed its King and Queen.

From All Quarters

Here where the mighty St. Lawrence, silvery cord that binds two great nations in a gleaming bond of amity from its gulf to its source, twining and intertwining through the green gems of its Thousand Island coronet, empties into Lake Ontario, loyal Canadians from the far-flung districts of the north, south, east and west came to pay homage to their King-Emperor and his gracious lady.

They came from as far east as Brockville. They came from Cobourg in the west. In cars, in trucks, on foot, with horse and buggy. Twelve thousand flag-waving enthusiastic school children were whisked into the city by special trains. Infantry, artillery, tank corps, of the district rode special troops trains, cheering as they entered the confines of a city that a century ago rang with the cheers of victorious forbears.

Thirteen special trains from the far parts of the country brought their quota of cheering residents.

The streets were packed with a solid mass of cheering humanity as the royal procession slowly wended its way along the route. High in the branches of trees enterprising youths waved a salute to their Majesties. Rooftops of buildings were crowded. Residents of the city, with a few yards in their lots to spare, erected bleachers with seats costing from one to two dollars each. Verandahs of houses along the route of procession were crowded. Lawns, barns, vacant lots, in fact any place that afforded a more or less clear vision of the royal entourage were at a premium.

Drove Through Streets

Slowly through the crowd-packed streets, aflame with flags and bunting their Majesties acknowledged the greetings of a populace wild with enthusiasm. Along the route of march kilted soldiers and members of the militia stood proudly at attention as their Majesties passed.

Cheers rang out as her Majesty the Queen with that gracious motion, directed the attention of the excited populace to the King. His Majesty, his light brown hair, tinted a golden bronze by the rays of the setting sun, smiled a regal acknowledgment.

The scene as the royal entourage wended its way through the city that was ablaze with flags, was picturesque and beautiful. Spontaneous cheering broke out as the King and Queen passed by.

They drove through lines of militiamen from the regiments of the district. Bayoneted rifles held by the khaki-clad soldiers, some of them in kilts, gleamed in the setting sun as the King passed by. Officers, swords held at the salute, stoodly rigidly at attention. In the distance, came the sounds of the National Anthem. Cheers that crescendoed into a roar echoed and re-echoed in the old streets as their Majesties bowed and smiled their acknowledgment.

The scarlet coats of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Band; the plumed shakos of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery, military pride of this city, the dark green of the Brockville Rifles; the tall busbies of a kilted pipe band, unidentified as the entourage passed by, but skirling Scottish airs, those that quicken the pulse and the blood; cadets from the collegiate institutes of the district, prominent among which were the smart, beret capped youngsters of Belleville under Major J. Howard, provided a colorful touch to the flag-draped city.

Scottish Airs

Bravely playing "Annie Laurie" and other Scottish airs, the Children's Band of St. Michael's Parish, Belleville, caught the Queen's eye as little Miss Betty Forhan, waving the baton directed her organization of diminutive musicians. The Roman Catholic clergy of the district in all their colorful robes lined the steps of St. Mary's Cathedral as the royal procession passed by. The Belleville Children's Band with scarlet caps and capes, playing instruments "like daddy plays" drew the royal attention.

Lined in almost military formation, the undergraduate nurses of Kingston General Hospital stood at attention, blue capes flung over a shoulder over their white uniforms and providing a colorful addition to the grey of the hospital building walls that loomed in the background. On the green grass that lined the walls of the hospital grounds were elderly patients.

In their wheel-chairs they greeted their King and Queen. Little old ladies, grey-haired and feeble, eyes alight with a patriotic fervor that eclipsed or rather equalled any shown by the younger of the huge crowd, they waved their greetings to Canada's King and Queen, as they slowly passed by.

Black-robed nuns of the Hotel Dieu stood in a line outside their buildings, their garbs showing in contrast against the brilliant reds, whites and blues of surrounding decorations

Sustained cheering echoed along the route. From atop private residences in this, the residential part of this historic city, from the trees, from windows and from rudely-perhaps constructed bleachers, old and young gave vent to a wild burst of enthusiasm as the King and Queen rode by.

10,000 Schoolchildren

Heralded by the cheers and the singing of the National Anthem, the royal procession slowly turned into Richardson Stadium where ten thousand wildly cheering schoolchildren greeted Their Majesties. As the procession slowly turned into the gates, the scene in the bleachers beggared description.

The King and Queen half rose in their seats as a rippling wave of childish voices rose in a glorious rendition of the National Anthem. In the capacious grandstands, thousands of Union Jacks waved in anundulating motion of red, white and blue. The "kids" went wild. They forgot their instructions. The magic of Their Majesties, the Queen glorious in her white ensemble, half-raised from her seat in the royal car, genuine joy emblazoned in her winsome smile as she slowly turned from one side to another; His Majesty The King, his bronzed face illuminated with a smile that lighted up his whole countenance, absolutely captivated the youngsters.

Cheers in a solid, sustaining roar broke out into the evening air. Against the green of the infield grass of the stadium stood a scarlet and white children's band. Across the way another children's band in royal blue blazers and white skirts played the National Anthem. Girl Guides, smart in their blue uniforms stood opposite the khaki and jaunty Stetson hats of Boy Scout Troops of Eastern Ontario. A Kiltie band, resplendent in tall busbies and scarlet coats piping the songs o' bonny Scotland added to the general color.

But over all was the enthusiasm of schoolchildren. They rose as in one solid mass, ten thousand of them, if you can imagine it, and in a grand paean of song, said goodbye to their King and Queen.

The setting sun shone redly in the western sky as the Royal entourage wended its way to the historic Fort Henry. The Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) of Belleville guarded the right of way. Over the LaSalle Causeway, to the prolonged cheers of hundreds of war veterans, wearing the red, blue and green berets of the famous Canadian fighting divisions, who stood guard at this important point went the Royal entourage.

Throwing up silvery spray as they sped over the calm waters near the bridge, motor launches manned by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, dipped their colors in salute as Their Majesties passed over the Causeway.

Up the hill, car-dotted, crowd-packed, the Royal purple of the King's car wended its way. In the west, a red sun, cloud flecked, flashed a parting salute as it gradually sank towards the western horizon.

Through the gates, after it had crossed the famous drawbridge went the Royal entourage. The Royal car slackened speed as it passed as captains guard, resplendent in the colorful uniforms of His Majesty's Infantry of 1838, with red coats, black shakos, and muskets of that period, the guard formed a picturesque sight as they stood at the "present" while Their Majesties passed by. Twenty-nine Union Jacks fluttered idly in the quiet evening air, from slender white poles. These were placed at strategic points, ones that emphasize the military traditions so closely knit into the gray battlements of the ancient edifice.

Lights of the city flashed on as the Royal entourage slowly wound towards the Royal Military College. Through the green pastoral drive, it wended its way. Across the harbor a joyous citizenry could be heard singing the National Anthem.

Bursts of Cheering

Spontaneous bursts of cheering were wafted across the quiet waters of the harbor, broken only by the staccato bursts of the R.C.M.P. speed-boats as they dashed over the rose-tinted surface of the water.

The gray battlements of the Royal Military College loomed in the distance as the Royal cars and their escorts wound their way up the hill. Scarlet-coated mounted policemen suddenly dismounted from the cars as the entourage drew to a stop outside the time-honored buildings. At a given signal the Royal cars and its accompanying retinue moved slowly through the gates.

Gleaming in the half-light stood Canada's finest. From four to five hundred gentleman cadets "two thin red lines" stood rigidly at attention as the gleaming purple car carrying Their Majesties drove to a stop.

White helmets, scarlet coats, blue slacks lined with yellow stripes, shining black leggings, perfectly motionless, stretched in two lines; and you have the picture of the R.M.C. cadets as His Majesty and the Queen first saw them.

Not a quiver. Not a motion. Lights flickered on gleaming bayonets that were rigid. Officers of the battalion of cadets were called to the front. They were officially presented to His Majesty, who complimented them. Slowly the officers retreated to their original positions. A khaki-clad army officer escorted His Majesty as he inspected the battalion.

Meanwhile the Queen walked slowly down a long line, which this writer presumes was the faculty of the college and their wives. She graciously received them, and instantly won them with her charm and manner.

Many Photographs

The official inspection of the R.M.C. Cadets over, their Majesties chatted for a few moments with officials. Flashlights of news photographers stabbed the near-darkness. Scarlet-coated "Mounties", bodyguard of their Majesties dashed to the newspaper cameramen and warned them about taking pictures.

Suddenly in the quietness of the square, white helmets were jerked from the heads of the cadets. Someone called for "three cheers for the King." High in the air flashed the white of the helmets. Bayonet from white slung rifles gleamed in the half-light as the Royal Military College cadets gave three rousing cheers for his Majesty the King. Soldiers and civilians, mounties, photographers and news reporters, men and women, added their spontaneous acclaim to that of "those thin red lines."

Across the harbor the city lights gleamed. Over the quiet water could be heard the cheers of Eastern Ontario, impatiently awaiting the return of their monarchs on their journey to the station and the resumption of their trip.

Veterans re-echoed their cheers as the royal entourage retraced its steps across the LaSalle Causeway. Then up Princess Street. Solid masses of humanity gave voice to deafening cheers as the royal cars made their way along the city's main thoroughfare. People were packed from curb to curb to the walls. Cheers again resounded, a steady sound that echoed along the street. In the distance bands could be heard playing the National Anthem. Little groups of boys and girls sang "God Save the King" as tears streamed down their faces.

At the station their Majesties received General Constantine, D.S.O., L.H.; General A. E. Ross, C.B., C.M.G., and members of the city council Top-hatted, the city fathers slowly made their way along the line as they were introduced by his Worship Mayor Harry Stewart. Wives of the aldermen were formally presented to their Majesties.

With the cheers of the loyal subjects ringing in their ears, the royal couple stood conversing with Mayor and Mrs. Stewart.

Asks Questions

"What is the population of this city?" her Majesty asked the Mayor.

"About twenty-five thousand," he replied.

At this point the King bent forward and made a remark at which the Queen and the party laughed heartily. The King's handsome bronzed face lighted up with mirth as he turned toward the Queen and his Worship the Mayor.

Slowly, reluctantly, the Royal couple turned toward the royal train. In the distance cheers broke out. Their Majesties slowly mounted the platform the rear car of the train. Then all restrictions were laid aside. The crowd surged from the street to the rear of the royal train. On the observation platform stood their Majesties, as flashlights snapped in the darkness. Cheers broke out. Women shouted. Men wiped away a suspicious moisture about their eyes. Everyone had a lump in their throat. Again a steady volume of cheering broke out as the royal train started to move slowly out of the station. The King and Queen stood on the observation platform, smiling the wonderful smiles that have already endeared them to thousands.

Slowly the train moved away. The King with his winning smile and a farewell wave of the hand, turned and disappeared inside the coach. Queen Elizabeth, a radiant smile illuminating her beautiful face, stood alone, a white vision of loveliness, waving her hand in the beautiful gesture that is her's alone, as the blue, silver and gold train disappeared around the bend enroute for Belleville and Toronto.

LIFE AS SCHOOL FOR PRINCESSES

There is a fine lesson for everyone in the wisdom which the royal grandmother of the British Princesses, their Royal Highnesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, has shown. They are to know the life of the people. So Queen Mary took them into a subway train the other day and on a bus. They will know how the world moves.

That is wisdom in high places.

This democratic training is in thorough accord with the desires of the King and Queen, that their daughters should go to a school of life and be taught the real values, so essential to a healthy society and nation.

As the Daily Mail says: "the purpose behind the expeditions into the world of every day life which the little girls are making wth Queen Mary is 'to give the Princesses some knowledge of how life goes on beyond the glitter and glamor of the court." The Express also says that Queen Mary "does not believe that the children should be prevented from seeking life only from the viewpoint of the palace or through the eyes of a single class." For once there were no fanfares, no salutes, no bows and curtsies when Princess Elizabeth and her sister walked out.

EMPIRE DAY, 1939

Never in history has Empire Day been celebrated as in 1939. The King, who is the visible symbol of the world-flung British Commonwealth of Nations, forming the greatest empire of history, and the Queen are in Canada, they have been seen by hundreds of thousands of children and will be seen by hundreds of thousands more before they leave Canada after the twenty-seven days of their tour. The atmosphere breathes the spirit of loyalty and devotion to that very real princple of the Throne.

Canadian history has been made and is being made these days of welcome to the King and Queen and of celebration of the King's birthday, of Victoria Day, and now of Empire Day. No such grouping of events has ever taken place in Canada before. The visit of their Majesties has been so timed that they are able to stress every element of the national life and in this the schools and their pupils occupy the very highest place. There is no schoolboy and no schoolgirl who has not been caught by the inspiration of the scenes which are taking place everywhere in Canada. Those events at Quebec stir interest in Canadian history, Montreal's reception was the spontaneous outpouring of loyalty to the Throne, the impressive scenes in Ottawa touched the heart of the nation's life, when the King occupied the Throne of Canada and met his Parliament of Senate and Commons, and the Queen laid the foundation stone of the new Supreme Court building which she saw as a symbol of the free and democratic institutions of this land and of the Empire, and when the King on Sunday unveiled Canada's war memorial. Then yesterday in its capital city, Toronto, English-speaking Ontario paid its homage in a mighty demonstration of loyalty and affection for the King and Queen. So it will continue across Canada. The depths of the nation are being plumbed.

These things are having an invaluable effect upon the minds of the young.

But the presence of the British King and Queen is a human factor as well as symbol of the beauty of a nation's and an empire's spirit. The King and the Queen have come to the people's own firesides, they have conversed with Canadian children and parents. They are realties, yet symbols of the noblest in the home life of the British people and they know and love children. So these scholars come to love their King and Queen and their country and their empire in an unusual degree, because they have seen, have heard, or will see or will hear the King and Queen. These scholars of today have been peculiarly favored in being able to acclaim their Majesties and to find inspiration in the Throne.

In the schools patriotic songs have been sung today, inspired addresses delivered and the whole atmosphere has been charged with a fervor of devotion to country. This occasion will be remembered throughout their lives of the hundreds of thousands of the young whose minds are keenly receptive to the message of Empire Day.

A LESSON IN SECURITY

The world could take a lesson from an event the other day in Montreal where a group of Girl Guides formed a portion of the line of guards along the route of the royal procession.

Here passed a King-Emperor and a Queen-Empress, fortified in the hearts of the children and the people.

Here millions cheered their democratic rulers.

The fact that such a group could take so important a place is symbolic of the safe foundations on which the Kingship and the Empire rest—responsible government, which makes friends, not enemies, because the King is the expression of the people's hearts. History of many lands tells of tyrants, whose only defence was in suits of armour and in heavily armed battalions, but here is a case of innocence being the strong defence, because in British society those hands of innocence are more powerful than suits of mail.

WELL, WELL, WELL, HERE'S A BREEZE FROM ANOTHER QUARTER. Reams have been written about the transient problem, the army of young men marching up and down the country sleeping in police stations and box cars and learning to be at least proficient panhandlers while they are qualifying for hoboes, gaycats, and minor and major crooks. Here's a letter from an ex-transient in which he rather lets down his former pals of the road, comrades in misfortune:

> To the Editor: Some six weeks ago circumstances forced me to become a 'transient" and since then I have covered considerable territory in the Province of Ontario. But I started out with a determination to find work as well as working my way. I have at last secured a good job with decent people—as can others.
> The main object of this letter is to warn citizens of Ontario, and I utter this warning after the acquiring of much wisdom through association with other 'transients"—do not give assistance to men who beg food or money. You are really not helping them toward a permanent solution to their ultimate fate. No man "on the road" is worthy of help who does not ask for work. By that I mean temporary work to help him on his way. For these do what you can by way of an hour's work—or more—and for honest labor give them 25c per hour. Doing this will do a great deal towards helping that man retain his self-respect and eventually land him something worth while. His morale is strengthened as he goes along. The man who "bums" food and money without even offering a quid pro quo should be shuned by all. Now, doesn't it sound reasonable when you figure it out?—Ex-Transient.

NOW THAT THE ALDERMEN AND PUBLIC UTILITIES have voted themselves a salary taxpayers may realize that a small council is better than a large one. Five, seven, or nine councillors should be more efficient than a larger number—especially when being paid.

WAITING FOR A TRAIN IS DREARY BUSINESS, especially if the train is late. If it is an hour late it's h—l, if it's two hours late its hades and to be a passenger on a late train is something else again. Travellers in Australia had the unique adventure recently of being on a train thirty-four days late. Jeepers Creepers! How would you like to be on a train that long? A passenger train arrived at Alice Springs, the heart of Australia, from Port Augusta, South Australia, recently, 34 days late. Reason, floods in districts which seldom see rain, after a drought of three years it rained—did it rain? It poured, the heavens just opened and let water through in sheets—and it kept it up with the result that ordinary routines were sadly shattered. Until the train referred to arrived there had been no train reach that district in six weeks, resulting in a serious food shortage, with inhabitants perched on the high spots. Passengers on the delayed train had difficulty passing the time, every scrap of reading matter having been worn out in repeated handling. Correspondent of Montreal Star reported that card parties went on for hours, while children paddled in the water beside the track. When the train crossed one river, debris on the top of telegraph poles showed how high the flood waters had reached.

REPORTERS GET SOME STRANGE ASSIGNMENTS, but always manage to get away with any and all of them with efficiency and credit, but this matter of the newspaper boys on the Royal Train is something else again. 'Tiz said that dress orders are for striped trousers, morning coats and silk hats, bringing up the vexing question as propounded by the lad of the wide open spaces on the Peterboro Review: "CAN A REPORTER ACTUALLY REPORT WHEN WEARING A SILK HAT?" Peterboro scribe answers his own question thus: "Just offhand we'd say it couldn't be done." We'd be inclined to agree, for it seems ingrained in the cosmos of the restless newspaper man who has been around some that a high hat, morning coat and striped trousers go best with a binge—and afterwards go to Uncle, who does business under the sign of the Three Golden Balls.

This Poor, Old Battered Earth

For twenty-five years the world has been battered around like a half-submerged bean tin in the Niagara rapids. We have been forced to lay aside proud phrases like "the progress of civilization". We have stopped making catty remarks about the Dark Ages. It has been brought to our attention that the Greeks knew many of the things that we know, and that the Greeks forgot those things. We remember that Roman Britain had central heating and that Britain has not had central heating since. It has begun to occur to us that the sight of ancient ruined cities, where beasts graze, may have a fearfully intimate significance for our cities, for us. Behind the voice on the radio telephone we may well fancy the intruding whisper that inventions may be forgotten, broken and buried under the avalanche of events.

In almost every country dreadful things have happened since 1914 and other and even more dreadful things constantly threaten. Even the countries themselves change, so that in Europe and Asia the individual may scarcely know from day to day who he is. Living becomes too difficult to be managed by individual efforts. There is a tendency to cower into the herd, horns out, eyes glassy with fear.

This resort to crowd-mindedness is not good for the human brain. That brain can withstand great shocks, it is very tough; but there is no rest for the brain today, no period when it may have a chance to recuperate. The distribution of news is so good and the news is so bad that there is a continuous horror in the mind, with that pit of another Dark Ages always opening just ahead, newspaper issue after issue, radio news bulletin after bulletin.

Dr. Edward A. Strecker, head of the University of Pennsylvania medical school, says that he can find many psychiatric resemblances and few differences between most of the 500,000 insane of the U.S. mental hospitals and those who are motivated and actuated by crowd-mindedness.

It is also reported from Leeds in England that there are cases of children who have become stammerers through being frightened. Around the world there is a mass fright and it is suggested that there may be a mass insanity of escape.

This long-continued terror is in many of its aspects a new thing in the world. Certainly the widespread realization of the danger, due to modern facilities of news distribution, is new. It may be said with assurance that never before have so many ordinary people in so many countries known for so long a time that the very foundations of their way of living were imperilled. History will have much to recount of this unique period and not the least important feature will be the effect of the continuous strain upon the harassed minds of the individuals involved.—The Printed Word.

The Morning After Taking Carter's Little Liver Pills

LONDON TIMES HAD PROGRESS UNDER DELANE

Struggle to Consolidate Great Paper Told in Second Volume of Its Career in Victorian Age

TORONTO (CP)—The second volume of the triology, "The History of the Times" covers two generations of the famous British newspaper, from 1841 to 1884. It picks up on the death of the editor, Thomas Barnes, who shaped early policies of "The Thunderer", and introduces perhaps the most famous editorial figure of all time—John Thadeus Delane.

This volume, sub-titled "The Tradition Established" (The MacMillan Company, $5.00,) tells in more than 600 compact pages of the struggle to consolidate The Times and incidentally a free press in the modern sense, in the face of disapproving and often hostile government. For 36 of the 43 years covered, Delane ruled supreme in Printing House Square. He was staunchly backed by his proprietor, John Walter III., grandson of the enterprising printer who founded the paper.

Walter took the momentous decision not to lower the price of The Times in a period when the paper was facing unprecedented competition from cheap newspapers. The proprietor realized that he had in his hands, not only a family business, but a national institution, and he stuck to the belief that there would always be in England a public ready to pay more than a penny for "the best possible newspaper."

Stimulated Mails

The period covered by the book saw a vast development in methods of news gathering. As early as the year 1845 The Times and its rivals were creating competition between the French and Austrian governments in supplying fast steamships to carry the mails from India across the Mediterranean. By a system of "express coaches" and special trains, The Times managed to win a dominant position which it still occupied at the close of the book after the introduction of the overland wire, the Morse and the cable.

In fact between 1841 and 1846 The Times consistently "beat" the government and the East India Company with news of what their own agents were doing in the East. Delane frequently wrote to members of the cabinet enclosing extracts from the paper's foreign correspondence and sometimes he used such favors to extract news in return.

On March 24, 1846, for instance, Delane wrote ingenuously to the prime minister, Sir Robert Peel, enclosing a dispatch that reached Boulogne by government courier who found that "the only means of conveyance was the special steamer employed by The Times." The paper agreed to delived the despatch in London on condition that it was released by The Times the same night.

The Times of those days fully lived up to its pseudonym of "The Thunderer." Far from the staid journal that it became later, it was often in full cry after the government and was not above bearing the odd grudge against an individual. When Lord John Russell's Whigs assumed office in 1846, The Times had praised for every other member of the cabinet but roundly abused Sir John Hobhouse, president of the Board of Control. Sir John had recently defeated Proprietor Walter in an election at Nottingham. This piece of malice was noted in a memorandum by the Prince Consort.

Through the ministries of Peel, Aberdeen and Palmerston, to those of Disraeli and Gladstone, The Times filled its self-appointed role of national watchdog. There was a brief truce with the Earl of Aberdeen, but for the rest it was more often growling than tail-wagging, and the fall of more than one ministry was laid at its door.

Ministers sometimes fought it by manipuating the newspaper Stamp Tax in favor of its cheaper rivals and then again wrote humble letters begging Delane to be careful in his handling of a particular situation.

The controversy reached a climax in the Crimean War of 1854-6 when The Times kept up a sustained attack on the organization of supplies and hospitals for the army. Lord Panmure, Secretary of War under Viscount Pamerston, termed The Times' conduct "villainous" in revealing the dreadful state of the British army to the enemy. And Lord John Russell, whose ministry fell before The Times' barrage, wrote the Earl of Clarendon: "If England is ever to be England again, this vile tyranny of The Times must be cut off". Nevertheless, The Times did not cease fire until the commander-in-chief, Lord Raglan himself was recalled.

Pioneer War Writer.

The Crimea saw the first organized newspaper coverage of war. The famed Irish correspondent, W. H. Russell, covered the fighting for The Times and after prolonged friction with the army staff won the right to pitch his tent with the troops and draw rations. The men never forgot Russell for what he did in calling attention to their plight as he discovered later in 1858 when he covered the Indian Mutiny.

Russell lived to increase his reputation in two more wars, the American Civil War and the Franco-Prussian War. In 1861 he created a furore in the Northern States by his account of the flight of the Federal troops at Bull Run, which he watched from the Northern side. Eventually the feeling against him forced him out of the country.

In 1871 he scored a "beat" for The Times when he happened to learn of the presence of a French statesman in Versailles, held by the Prussians during the siege of Paris. It meant the beginning of negotiations that led to the capitulation of France.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Again That Bilious Attack

A physician called to visit a patient who had a 'billious' attack left this parting warning. "Remember now, no food for forty-eight hours."

The patient promptly replied, "Don't worry about food any more."

This distaste for food is just one more of Nature's little ways of guarding us when we are sick. While food—liquid, soft or solid—is now given regularly in many ailments, in the treatment of biliousness it is still considered wise to withhold food for 36 to 48 hours.

"The symptoms of a so-called bilious attack may come on more or less acutely. There is a feeling of mental depression, giddiness, headache, nausea or vomiting, loss of appetite or actual repulsion of food, spots floating before the eyes or other disturbance of vision, and a feeling of tiredness and no desire for mental or physical work."

While some of these bilious attacks are due to nervousness or emotional upsetments, most of them are due to poisons in the blood from wastes that should have been filtered out by the liver or thrown out by the bowel. Chronic infection of the teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, sinus, or other organ may gradually pile up enough poisonous material or wastes to bring on an attack. After this "explosive" attack which may rid the system of some of the waste or poison products, the patient may feel considerably better, just as following an attack of seasickness.

"Imperfectly digested food which has undergone putrefaction in the bowel or poisonous material allowed to remain too long in the bowel (constipation) may be the cause."

Thus the condition may readily follow a badly digested meal, the result of overeating of rich food, or worry or anxiety which so often upset digestion.

The first thought in the treatment of an attack is to avoid solid food for 24 to 48 hours, using sweetened water or fruit juices to maintain fluids in the system.

The old-fashioned remedy of a grain of calomel followed by a dose of salts is still good treatment.

The constant thought should be to try to avoid these attacks by eating less rich food, or eating four small meals instead of three large meals, and not eating at all or very lightly when under nervous strain or an emotional upset.

LADIES' NIGHT BANQUET IS HELD

Brotherhood of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Closes Successful Season

The Brotherhood of Victoria Ave. Baptist Church closed a successful season on Friday night with their annual Ladies Night banquet which was held in the church parlors.

A special programme of musical entertainment was highly appreciated. Participating in the festivities were Mr. Frank Whittle, who sang two splendid solols; Mr. Bruce Sills with two fine accordian numbers and Mr. Ross Hunter, who delighted the gathering with several violin selections. Mr. Alec Gordon exhibited several reels of motion pictures including one showing the Coronation of King George VI. This was particularly timely in view of the royal visit, now thrilling loyal Canadians and appreciated very much by the gathering.

Rev. C. T. Olmstead, who proposed the toast to their Majesties, spoke feelingly of the very high regard in which the Royal Family is held in the hearts of all Britishers and of the splendid qualities of the King as a husband and father and as a Christian gentleman. The hymn "To Their Majesties" was then sung, followed by the National Anthem.

A toast "To the Ladies" was proposed by Mr. Ted Russell. In simple and sincere language Mr. Russell welcomed the ladies and spoke appreciatively of the interest they evinced in the work of the Brotherhood. It was fitting that the ladies, who were essential to the happiness of the men, should share in the closing banquet of the organization, said Mr. Russell.

Mrs. Olmstead, in replying to the toast, stated that the ladies were happy to be the guests of the Brotherhood and to be associated with the men in their work. Speaking of the Royal Family, Mrs. Olmstead referred to the King's coronation address in which his Majesty graciously mentioned the way in which the Queen helped him in his work, to which she lends a special grace and charm.

Mr. G. H. Bray presided over a short business session and officers were elected for the ensuing year, as follows:

Honorary President, Rev. C. T. Olmstead, Mr. A. Lounsberry; Past President, Mr. G. H. Bray; President, Mr. Charles Franklin; Vice-President, Mr. Harvey Stewart; Secretary, Mr. Frank Cook; Treasurer, Mr. George L. Dixon; Pianist, Mr. John Jury; Song Leader, Mr. Frank Whittle; Chairman Program Committee, Mr. Arthur Wynee; Chairman Membership Committee, Mr. Howard Hall; Chairman Church Calendar and Publications Committee, Mr. A. E. Haw.

Following a worship period conducted by Mr. Bray, the Rev. C. T. Olmstead closed the session with prayer.

Troop Trains Going To Kingston Reminiscent Of Great War Days

Reminiscent of war days, military troop trains passed through Belleville on both railways all day Sunday, enroute to Kingston where the district militia acted as guards of honor during the Royal parade of their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth.

A bright warm sun shone on the district military troop train made up at the Belleville C.N.R. station and composed of troops from Prince Edward, Hastings, Cobourg and Belleville. Completed the train left Belleville amid the thunderous applause of hundreds of persons who lined the station platform waving fond farewells similar to those of twenty years ago or more. Nineteen coaches were needed to transport the district troops to Kingston from the immediate Belleville area.

Included in the military troop train made up at Belleville were the Cobourg Heavy Battery and Northumberland Regiment, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment (Picton), 15th Argyll (tank), 34th Battery (Belleville) and A.S.C. troops under their respective commanding officers.

The 15th Argyll (tank) and the 34th Battery entrained on Pinnacle street in front of the Armouries, some 300 strong, the streets being lined with thousands, of interested spectators as the train steamed north to meet the other sections at the outer station. A happy lot of khaki-clad men were enroute to honor their King and Queen at Kingston.

The 15th Argyll was under command of Col. A. B. Gribble, while the 34th Battery was headed by Major Van Steenburg.

Moira

Moira—Service was held in the United Church on Sunday morning with Mr. Phil. Carr of West Huntingdon, taking charge in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. H. Tristram.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Clare and Ivan attended service at Bethel United Church on Sunday and took dinner at the home of the latter's mother, Mrs. S. Coulter.

Mr. G. R. Mitts of Halloway, was a guest on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Williams.

A number of parents and many of the school children of this section atended the musical festival held in Tweed on Tuesday. Those present reported a very interesting program and one which was a great benefit to the children.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Poster and Lou Anne spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Dickey of Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Herity called on Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, Sr., on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Tufts of Tweed, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Emerson one day recently.

GOSPEL CRUSADE IS CONTINUED

Evangelist Addresses Three Large Congregations at Evangel Temple

The gospel crusade under the leadership of the Scottish Evangelist, Mr. Tom Miller at the Evangel Temple, Bridge Street West, was attended by three large congregations on Sunday, when the Old Country preacher was heard at his best. At the morning service following the Lord's Supper, Mr. Miller spoke on "What Is a Christian?" from the Book of the Acts explaining the meaning of the term in the first century of the Christian Church.

At the afternoon meeting, Christians were challenged to live a wholehearted life of devoted abandonment to Christ comparable to the Greek marathon runners who ran for a laurel-crown, when Mr. Miller spoke on 'A Crown At Stake" from the third chapter of Philippians. Mr. Miller and Mr. Edward Rupert sang a duet, "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

The evening service saw the Temple practically filled, after special seating arrangements had been made. Special prayer for the health and spiritual welfare for Their Majesties, the King and Queen, was made by Pastor Kulbeck, after which the congregation reverently sang "God Save the King." Special musical features were a duet by Miss O. LaFontaine and Mrs. C. LaFontaine, a vocal solo by Miss D. Morgan, and an electric vibraphone solo by Mr. Edward Rupert. Evangelist Miller gave a simple, moving Gospel message from the eighth chapter of Luke on the "Lost Legion." A goodly number responded by accepting Christ as their Saviour. During the announcements, it was announced that due to the continually rising interest, and because of the increasing number of decisions, the evangelist had agreed to extend his stay in Belleville and will continue the meetings throughout this week. Pastor Kulbeck expressed his gratitude for the evangelist's willingness to continue the meetings.

DOCTOR PROTESTS 'MEDICAL RACKET'

Declares British - American Axis Dictates Ancient System of Medicine

Hastings, England, May 23 (CP)—A 34-year-old Hastings medical practitioner has launched a one-man war against what he calls "the medical racket" in the British Isles.

Waging his campaign under the pseudonym of "Dr. Futuer", he now threatens to bring in a number of consultant surgeons to help him to fight those who would boycott him.

"Many British medical men," he says, "do nothing except write certificates, prescribe medicine, rush to over-burdened hospitals, rush out again, burn petrol and think they are busy. Some of them have only time for people who can pay."

"Dr. Futuer," who strongly advocates nationalization of medicine, with a nation-wide chain of clinics, also accuses the British Medical Association of hindering progress. The Rome-Berlin political axis, he describes as a danger to the world, but not as great as that of the British-American medical axis.

"This axis is a danger to the lives of those who make up the two great democracies. They dictate a system of medicine as antiquated as an ox-cart," he added.

WAR MEMORIAL UNVEILED BY KING

Royal Couple Passes Unguarded Through Throng of 100,000

Ottawa, May 23.—Two days and a half of Royal pageantry were climaxed Sunday in Ottawa when King George and Queen Elizabeth, departing entirely from schedule and custom, walked unguarded through a throng of 100,000 persons in Confederation Square.

Their Majesties became the centre of a surging, popular demonstration after the King had unveiled the National War Memorial. For half-an-hour they strolled among the cheering crowd, smiling and nodding.

It was their farewell to Ottawa and they made leave-taking a great open-air reception for everybody. Never before had a British sovereign and his consort walked into the midst of a large public gathering without escort of any kind. The scene was like a football field with the crowd pouring from the stands after a game.

Guarded By Veterans.

Actually, however, the King and Queen were at that moment protected by the largest guard of honor that could be mustered anywhere—10,000 wildly-cheering war veterans. All they wanted was to glimpse the Royal couple. They turned in with a will to make a lane through their own throngs.

An escort of the Princess Louise's Dragoon Guards had to be moved. They were simply in the way. The safety of the King and Queen was never in doubt.

The situation developed to a point where, overcome perhaps by the spectacle of the Sovereign and his consort losing themselves in a vast sea of people, men and women wept as they cheered.

His face wreathed in a broad smile, his Majesty eventually entered the Royal motor car at a point quite remote from that scheduled for his departure. Waving and bowing to the crowds and picking up their Dragoon escort, the King and Queen drove slowly off to their temporary residence at Rideau Hall.

The tumultuous wind-up of an historic Ottawa visit followed a dignified service beside the War Memorial as the King and Queen joined with the great throng in paying homage to the memory of Canada's 60,000 war dead.

The memorial is a mass of huddled troops, representing all Canadian services, moving in formation through a granite arch. It is situated in Confederation Square with the splendor of the Parliament Buildings for a background. Before it has been built a spacious new boulevard.

The King Speaks.

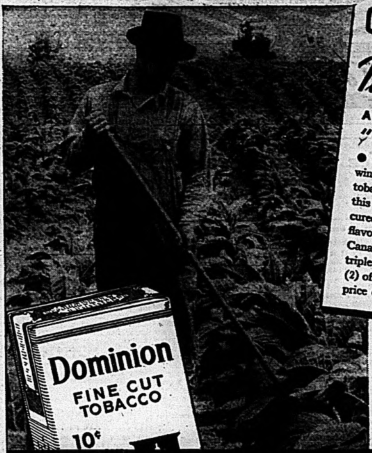
"The memorial speaks to the world of Canada's heart," said the King, in his address from a stand before the memorial. "It has been well named 'the response'."

His Majesty said the memorial was more than a commemoration of a great event in the past.

"Not by chance both the crowning figures of Peace and Freedom appear side by side," he said. "Peace and Freedom cannot long be separated. It is well that we have in one of the world capitals a visible reminder of so great a truth. Without Freedom there can be no enduring Peace, and without Peace no enduring Freedom."

For the ceremony, Confederation Square was surrounded with brilliantly-colored banners, streaming from slender flagstaffs. A low cedar hedge encircled the Memorial on three sides. The archway, through which the bronze figures of soldiers, sailors, airmen and nursing sisters press, and aptly gave the Memorial its symbolic name, was beflagged with 130 standards of the Canadian Legion and a similar number of battle-flags of the Canadian Corps Association.

Sixteen of the Legion standards had performed similar service at the unveiling of the National War Memorial on Vimy Ridge nearly three years ago.



CANADA GROWN and Nature Flavoured

A CIGARETTE TOBACCO THAT SAYS "COME AND GET IT!"

● Canada's hot summers and cold winters do something to the soil which, tobacco experts now agree, enables this country to grow fine Virginia flue-cured tobacco of exceptionally likeable flavour. So Dominion Fine Cut offers Canadians who roll their own this triple pleasure: (1) home-grown leaf, (2) of the finest quality, (3) at the low price of 10¢ a big package.

"IT'S GOT TO BE GOOD!"

"... That's why work never ends for us Canadian Tobacco Growers. The crop needs attention every day and all day. To be good, it's got to be nursed along. Hoeing's only part of the job. Try it some time under a hot sun! But it's mighty important in getting the tobacco which the manufacturer—and you, the smoker—insist on getting."—J. D. (tobacco grower).

Marmora

Marmora — The annual meeting of the Sodality of The Children of Mary was held in the school on Thursday evening with a fair attendance. The purpose of the meeting was the election of officers for the coming year. The retiring president, Miss Dorena Gehan, was in the chair. The result of the election was as follows: President, Miss Mary Paquet; secretary, Miss Rita Deacon; treasurer, Miss Margaret Shannon; councillors, Misses Rose Shannon, Joan Shannon, Rita Johnston, Marguerite Doyle.

Miss Mary O'Neill left last week for Sudbury, where she will spend a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. C. O'Connor.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Potts visited relatives here on Thursday.

Marmora L. O. L. No. 319 held an "At Home" in St. Paul's Parish Hall on Thursday evening with members of Harmony L.O.B.A. 600 and members of their families as guests. After Wor. Bro. Orville Leonard, Worshipful Master of L. O. L. 319 had extended a welcome to all present, Wor. Bro. W. J. Cottrell was called upon to act as chairman. The programme commenced with the singing of the National Anthem and included songs by Mrs. P. Gray, Glen McColl, and Albert Bartlett, a reading by Mrs. H. R. Haacke in addition to an entertaining lecture on experienced on the west coast of Africa by Rev. W. R. Tristram of West Huntingdon. It was the second occasion for Mr. Tristram to give his lecture in the village and those in the audience who heard him previously followed the narration of his experiences once more with rapt attention. Interspersed in the program were short speeches by sisters and brethren of the order. Following a recess for refreshments, dancing was enjoyed with Vernon Green and Jack Gray furnishing music.

Miss Joan O'Connor spent the week-end in Toronto.

Miss Mary A. Murray, B.A., spent the week-end at her home in Kingston.

Miss Pearl Wilson, B.A., spent the week-end at her home in Garden Hill.

Mr. R. E. Bonter and daughters, Hilda and Jean spent the week-en in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Wilson of Garden Hill, were in the village on Friday.

Miss P. Robinson spent the week end at her home in Ottawa.

Weddings

BLACK—FOX

Rednersville United Church Parsonage was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday, May 20th, when Margaret Beatrice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fox, Rednersville, became the bride of Mr. John Latimer Black, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willet Black of Huff's Island, Rev. W. H. Boomhour officiating.

The bride who wore a frock of Queen's rose crepe with navy accessories was attended by her sister, Mrs. Kenneth Green, who was attired in Mayflower lilac crepe with navy accessories.

Mr. Kenneth Green was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Black left on a short honeymoon to Toronto, Niagara Falls and other western points. Mrs. Black travelled in a navy suit with large picture hat and white accesories. Upon their return they will reside at 38 Dunbar Street Belleville.

SHORTT—TUCKER
POTTS—TUCKER

At noon Saturday, May 20, the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Tucker, Harold, was the scene of an interesting double wedding when their daughter, Laura Bernice, became the bride of Ray Ernest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Shortt, Springbrook, and their youngest daughter, Nellie Irene, became the bride of Carleton Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Potts, Mt. Pleasant. Rev. Jas. E. Beckel officiated at both ceremonies which took place under an arch decorated with roses, greenery and tulle.

The brides given in marriage by their father wore white net banded with suede lace and white net with Swiss embroidery and carried bouquets of butterfly roses and calla lilies respectively. Both sisters wore circular embroidered veils caught with white coronets. Miss Hazel Lough attended the elder sister in pastel blue sheer with matching blue sheer with matching circular veil and caried a bouquet of roses and baby's breath.

Miss Betty Hoard attended the younger sister, gowned in pastel pink net with matching circular veil and caried a similar bouquet.

Mr. Roy Shortt and Mr. Irwin Potts acted as their brothers' groomsmen.

Mrs. Carman Sine, sister of the brides and gowned in navy suede lace played Lohengrin's "Bridal Chorus" and accompanied Mr. Eric Capelle who during the signing of the register sang "Ah Sweet Mystery of Life".

The brides' mother and father received, the former attired in navy blue sheer with a corsage of snapdragons.

The grooms' mothers wore respectively violet embroidered sheer and navy sheer with corsages of snapdragons.

Following the ceremony the guests retired to the dining room, where the wedding luncheon was served by eight girl friends of the bride.

The happy couples left amid showers of confetti on their honeymoons attired in pastel flannel coats, contrasting dresses and black patent leather accessorels.

HAMILTON—DERRY

On Saturday evening, May 20th, at the Free Methodist parsonage, North Marmora, by the Rev. N. Bosko, Fannie Catherine, eldest daughter of Mrs. Derry and the late W. H. Derry, became the bride of John Harold, eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton.

The bride wore a navy ensemble with white accesories. They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Everett Derry. They will reside on the groom's farm at North Marmora.

HAMN—WOOD

A pretty wedding took place in St. Ola United Church on Monday, May 15th at two o'clock when Mary Marjorie Wood, only daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. Wood was united in marriage to Merton James Hamn, with Rev. W. J. Davis officiating and Mrs. Claude Phillips playing the wedding music.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a very pretty gown of ivory taffeta, made in Victorian style, with waist length veil of white tulle caught with lily-of-the-valley. She carried a nosegay of pink roses, sweet peas, and carnations caught with mauve tulle.

Miss Pearl Phillips of Trenton, a friend of the bride was her only attendant, wearing a gown of blue chiffon and floral hat with matching accessories and corsage of ivory roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Mr. R. J. Wood of Ottawa, brother of the bride was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. P. Plumbe and Mr. O. Tripp, friends of the groom.

A reception followed at the home of the bride when Mrs. Wood received the guests wearing a dress of navy blue sheer crepe with blue hat and corsage of red roses.

Mrs. Hamn, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of mauve and black hat with corsage of sweet peas.

The bride and groom left on a trip by motor to Ottawa and other points, the bride wearing a beige tailored suit, brown hat and accessories. They will reside in St. Ola, where the groom is in business.

Out of town guests were from Toronto, Trenton, Springbrook and other points.

Wonderful Recipe For Caramel Pudding
(Note: When well chilled, this dessert may be unmoulded.)
Stir ¾ cup brown sugar in shallow pan over low heat until sugar has melted and browned delicately. Slowly stir in ⅓ cup boiling water and cook; stirring often, until caramel has melted and syrup thickened slightly. Mix ⅓ cup brown sugar very thoroughly with 4 tablespoons Durham Corn Starch and ¼ teaspoon salt; stir in 2⅔ cups hot milk. Stir and cook in double boiler until mixture thickens. Add the caramel syrup; cover and cook, with occasional stirring, until no raw flavor remains. Remove from heat and add ⅔ teaspoon vanilla. Cool slightly and turn into wet moulds or dessert glasses. Serve cold. Delicious with cream; plain or whipped. Nutmeats or chopped dates a grand addition. Six servings. D13

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Chain Smoking vs Romance

To smoke or not to smoke, that is the question, whether it is wiser, and so on . . . . It's the gentleman, this time, who writes about his fiancee who rivals a factory chimney with her persistent smoking. She has a cough that defies cough drops, and the scent of tobacco is heavy on her clothes, in her hair, even her kisses have a strong flavor of nicotine.

The gentleman's emotions seem compounded about fifty-fifty of love and indignation. "I love this girl," he says, "and hate to see her kill herself with tobacco. Her almost constant coughing gets on my nerves. Do you know anything that will remove the odor of tobacco from this girl?"

I hesitate to say that I know of lots of things advertised to remove the odor of tobacco from the breath, for I can't vouch for them. His next question a wooden Indian could answer: "Do you think a home in which the wife smokes continually, and the husband dislikes tobacco, could be happy?"

No, I don't think a home, in which one of the partners pursues a fad to the last ditch, and the other one has no interest in the same thing, could possibly be happy. A reasonable amount of smoking, with ashes, ash-trays, smoke and odor would probably rasp the nerves of the non-smoker, who still regards tobacco as the filthy weed."

But minute-to-minute smoking, lighting a fresh fag from the tail-end of the last, is unthinkable, when the other "half" is a "smoke celibate"

Why do men and women imagine they can domesticate something which is an offense to their sensibilities, and be happy forever after?

In a country where so many roads lead to Reno, it's well not to assume excess baggage in the way of other people's annoying fads.

Most of the failures in marriage come from this kind of an unthinking choice. You wonder how the dull little woman, with a severely spinsterly outlook on life, marries the philanderer, and expects to keep him "forsaking all others".

And a girl who can never say no to a highball hopes to make a sober man of the drunkard. Spendthrifts who have never been able to save a penny expect that marriage, instead of incurring further responsibilities, will make them thrifty.

So there you are, the blind leading the blind, the lame leading the halt, to the altar, and wondering why they're not happy. What price romance, when all the cards are stacked against it?

In the case of my correspondent, it seems to me the sensible thing for him to do would be to break the engagement before the home of his dreams goes up in smoke. Evidently the girl doesn't care as much for him as she should, or she'd try to cure herself of excessive smoking. There are cures for the nicotine habit, even as there are for the excessive use of drugs and liquor. And her family physician, if she'd consult him, would undoubtedly recommend one of these.

When You Receive a Formal Wedding Invitation

When you receive a formal invitation to the church only—the invitation that "requests the honour of your presence"—an answer is not required.

But an invitation to the reception or breakfast —the invitation that "requests the pleasure of your company" —should be answered as soon as possible, whether or not it requests a reply. You should write your reply on formal letter-paper or note-paper (white, double-sheeted paper is in excellent taste.) The reply should be written on the first page, as is the invitation. And the words and the lines should be spaced similarly to the words and the lines on the invitation.

The idea to keep in mind is that an invitation should be answered in kind. That is, a formal invitation, which is an invitation written in the third person, should be answered formally, written in the third person.

If you are accepting the invitation to the reception, you write:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atwater
accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce
Graham's
kind invitation for their daughter's wedding reception
on Tuesday, the sixth of June at five o'clock
at The Park Lane

A shorter form is also correct:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atwater
accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce
Graham's
kind invitation
for Tuesday, the sixth of June

The regret reads:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atwater regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce
Graham's
kind invitation for their daughter's wedding
reception
on Tuesday, the sixth of June

(In the regret, the hour and place may be repeated, but this, obviously, is not necessary.)

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 23

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY of splendid opportunity for progress and prosperity is forecast from the predominant aspects. New and important projects are under fine stimulus for success, although there is danger of over-aggressive and impetuous action, which would prove detrimental. Composure, calm judgment, hard work and the co-operation of influential personages are needed to defeat obstacles when quarrels and ill-will threaten. Maintain harmony in the home as well.

Those whose birthday it is will find a very expansive and productive year provided they do not contribute to their own defeat by indulging in rash, quarrelsome and over-strenuous activities. Coolness, restraint, industry and wise initiative may lead to definite success in launching new and important projects.

A child born on this day may have much capacity for success and high accomplishments, despite obstacles and opposition which may be provoked by its own impetuous or belligerent nature. It should be resourceful, original and constructive.

For Wednesday, May 24

JUDGING by the lunar aspects for this day, there may be a sudden upset to cherished plans. This may be attributable to careless or irregular handling of writings, documents or even oral matters. Conflict or opposition may come from high sources. Also strangers seem to figure in the disturbance. A journey is fraught with anxiety or annoyance. However, with precaution, tact and a clever grasp of the menacing predicament, there is much to be gained. Resort to tactics of a social nature might smooth out difficulties and prove lucrative.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a quite unforeseen upsetting of desired plans, with strangers as well as powerful persons figuring in the disturbance. Writings, contracts and documents are concerned, and travel seems to hold annoyance. But with tact or finesse in handling difficulties there may be definite readjustments.

A child born on this day may have rather unusual talents and ambitions, although it may be disposed to put over its programs by expediency rather than principle. It may be restless, fond of change and inclined to social pleasures, in which it may find sensational popularity.

The Panther Glide

By HELEN FOLLETT

THAT panther glide practiced by mannequins at fashion shows gets a terrible hold on some younger members of the audience. They also want to be pantherish. All right if they do it well; what they don't know is that the pretty models have been trained. The novice swings her hips, looks dreamy, and the members of the family laugh their heads off.

To be able to walk beautifully is a blessed gift. Movements of trunk, arms and legs must be rhythmic. One must have grace and beauty in the mind to do that; one should feel graceful. When you practice walking, hum a little tune; it will put spirit in the steps.

If you will tighten the abdominal muscles and lift your chest, the body will assume the correct pose. When tummy fibers, tighten, you straighten your back bone; with chest lifted your head is balanced. Place your feet upon the ground so that by no chance can a person approaching you see the soles of your shoes. Step neither on heel nor toe but on the ball of the foot which was made to carry the body weight.

Think of yourself as being feather light. Let your arms swing naturally. Don't extend the upper portion of your body forward or hunch your shoulders.

Walter Whitman said: "Perfect walking in man or woman is a rare accomplishment."

Excessive heat is deadly to a skin that has started to lose tone. The only time when steaming is justified is in the treatment of blackheads and pimples on young people whose facial fibres are still firm and elastic.

For the faded complexion water only fairly warm is best, followed by brisk but light friction with a heavy cream, lots of cold water in the morning, an ice rub once a day. Such a treatment is tonic, has a revitalizing effect. The continuous use of hot water on a saggy skin will mark it with wrinkles. Look at the hands of a laundress, a mass of creases and flabby tissues. That tells the story.

Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

Advance Information on Screen Offerings Supplied by Theatre Managers.

AT THE BELLE

"Dark Victory"

"Dark Victory," the Warner Bros. picture which is next at the Belle theatre, presents Bette Davis as the ill-starred heroine of one of the tenderest, one of the most poignantly beautiful romances ever unfolded upon the screen.

It is a story of great love and dauntless courage, both pitted against an implacable fate, and it offers the brilliant Miss Davis what she herself considers the greatest role of her very impressive career.

While the character portrayed by Miss Davis might still dominate the narrative even if played by a lesser actress than the matchless Bette—so compelling is the role—the production is by no means a one-woman tour de force. It has a supporting cast that is fully worthy of its gifted star, and the brilliance of her performance serves to inspire them all to a superlative pitch of excellence.

Playing opposite the lustrous star is George Brent, and in uniting with her to bring this moving romance to the screen he has the most sympathetic role of his notable career. Another lover of Bette's, albeit a frustrated one, is played by Humphrey Bogart, and his portrayal of an uncouth but honest and genuine Irish horse-trainer, different from anything he has done previously on the screen, is fraught with interest, for it proves that he is not only an ace bad man but an superb actor.

Perhaps the most interesting personality in the cast, aside from the star, is an Irish lass named Geraldine Fitzgerald, who has the second most important feminine role even though this is her first American picture. Trained on the stage in Dublin and with some experience in English pictures she was signed by Warner Bros. after a sensational New York stage debut last year and is regarded as destined for certain stardom.

Other members of the truly impressive cast include such players as Ronald Reagan, Henry Travers, Cora Witherspoon, Dorothy Peterson, Virginia Brissac Charles Richman and Herbert Rawlinson. Unquestionable assurance that the talents of these players are utilized to their utmost is the fact that the production was directed by Edmund Goulding, famous director of many hits, the last of which was "White Banners." Gouling is known throughout the screen world as an expert at dealing with the interplay of human relationships in films.

The screen play, which was written by Casey Robinson, was based on a stage play by George Emerson Brewer, Jr., and Bertram Bloch.

Bette is presented as the gay and carefree young leader of a rich "horsy" set of society folk. There is nothing of the spoiled and petulant young heiress about her. She's a very modern young thing but a thoroughly likeable one withal. Then love and destiny enter her life and bring about a complete metamorphosis in her character. The unusual drama is essentially the story of her thoroughbred courage in facing a love that is greater than life itself.

Only an actress of Miss Davis' calibre would dare undertake a role which required such subtle shading of mood and character as is necessary to show the growth of an immature, pleasure-seeking girl into a woman who has tasted all life can offer and has triumphed above all fear.

The advance notices on her performance prove that it is the greatert one of her spectacular career. Twice-winner of Motion picture Academy Award for her performance in "Dangerous" and the recent "Jezebel" (which won her the 1938 award), she is already being named as the most likely prospect to receive the coveted honor in 1939 for her work in "Dark Victory" and "Juarez," a forthcoming Warner Bros. production in which she plays the Empress Carlota.

"The Hardys Ride High"

Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Fay Holden and Cecilia Parker are now appearing at the Belle in the 6th big hit of the Hardy series "The Hardys Ride High". The popular Belle newsreel, a funny Walt Disney cartoon "Goody and Wilbur" and "A Criminal is Born," a gripping crime does not pay story will be presented on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Flying Irishman"

A vital story, beautifully told, adroitly acted and directed is "The Flying Irishman," R.K.O. Radio's picturization of Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan's life story which is now on the screen of the McCarthy theatre. The noted flyer himself plays the title role.

Douglas Corrigan's ability as an actor is parallel to the surprise he gave the world when he flew his second hand $900.00 plane across the Atlantic. So sincere is his performance that every heartache, every disappointment, every job experienced by him is transplanted to those who witness the film.

The world had kicked him around—and yet he conquered every obstacle—to bring success to himself, truly when you see "The Flying Irishman" you will witness the most inspirationally told story by your lifetime, plus a picture with more excitement, more speed, more thrill and drama than you'll find in a dozen day-in, day-out movies.

Paul Kelly is cast as (Wrong Way) Corrigan's closest friend, Robert Armstrong as the man who taught him to fly; Eddie Quillan as his brother; Donald MacBride as an airport owner, and Dorothy Peterson as his mother, are seen in important supporting roles. Dorothy Appleby and Joyce Compton play the principal feminine parts. Please do not miss "The Flying Irishman."

"Fisherman's Wharf"

The companion feature which is currently at the McCarthy theatre is addition to "The Flying Irishman" presents Bobby Breen, the boy you'd love to call your own.... in his grandest picture of all.... "Fisherman's Wharf", Bobby himself, as the rough, happy-go-lucky son of Leo Carrillo, who is costarred, in the picture, as a Sicilian fisherman of San Francisco, has never before been seen to better advantage; in his new role he displays talents only suggested in his past performances. With a song on his lips and a pair of clinched fists, he sails into this new characterization with a vitality and a virility not before revealed. Gone is the goody-goody boy; he now stands on his own two sturdy feet and lets fists and quips fall where they may.

Another factor which places this picture above previous Bobby Breen productions is the fact that the story locale offers a unique background. Laid against a setting of San Francisco's colorful Fisherman's Wharf and the famous Golden Gate area, something new and refreshingly different, also the songs are more suitable and pleasing which Bobby renders in his excellent boyish style and include such popular favorites as "Sell Your Cares For a Song," "Fisherman's Chantey," "Blue Italian Waters" ("Songs of Italy") and "Ombra Mai Fu" a classic number that is sung by Bobby and a boy choir.

The supporting cast in addition to Leo Carrillo, include Henry Armetta, Lee Patrick, Tommy Bupp and Slicker the famous acting seal, the highest priced animal actor in Hollywood, who gives a grand comedy interpretation—and if there were any sort of award to animals for the finest performance of the year, Slicker should win it, hand—or flippers—down, a splendid all technicolor Walt Disney treat, Donald Duck in "Self Control" completes this ideal programme which should be seen by every member of every family in Belleville and district.

George Brent, featured with Bette Davis, Humphrey Bogart, in "Dark Victory," next at the Belle.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

YOU WILL ENJOY the subtle yellow shades that are so favored just now. A handsome ensemble has a sulphur yellow wool jersey coat over a black crepe dress with sulphur dots. The coat has two pockets at the waistline, and fastens with hooks and eyes of yellow leather.

Dance away the hours in sheer black lace. An exquisite gala frock has a wide skirt of cascades of pleated flounces falling from a nude pink lastex corselet belt. The simple bodice has tiny puffed sleeves.

Turn back the clock, for old-time fashions are ultra-new. One of the most daring dinner dresses is cut like a sheath, the high waisted corselet skirt finished with a large bow in front. The bodice, high necked with long tight sleeves, is of coarse white guipure in contrast to the black silk jersey of the skirt.

Easy to handle clothes are what the girls want. A grand dress is of white washable cotton pique, full skirted with short-sleeved bodice. Worn with a polka dot kerchief that is tucked in at the neck and emerges at a slit at the waistline to form a waterfall hankie.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest
Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"It leaps to the eye and the ear . . . Your accent, Mademoiselle, one could not mistake it."

"I am afraid you flatter me—but it is pleasant flattery."

"I will take you down to the Flying Field myself, but, of course—of course......! It is no trouble, I assure you!"

* * *

"These are the hangars, as you see, Mademoiselle, and—yes . . . the machines are in those at the far side of the field. This way—ah! and here at the right moment is Lieutenant Walters—one of the American pilots, who fly in your aeroplanes."

"Right here! Commandant," the young man with the pugnacious chin and broken nose saluted. And added to Leonie with an engaging twinkle in his green eyes: "Sounds as if I was called the same as that old French playwriting Johnny, doesn't it?—the way he says it—instead of being just plain Pete Walters."

"It sounds very homelike to me, your name," Leonie said.

"You're American?"

"Partly . . . and so you are one of those who pilot the aeroplanes which I helped to make over to the French."

"Say! Why! ....I hear they were given by a high-up Indian, those planes!" The young airman stared at her perplexedly.

"So they were," Leonie told him gravely. "I am an envoy from the Maharajah of Khotalghar, a kind of go-between."

"I see! Beg pardon, I'm sure. . . . Say! I'd be tickled to death to show you all round her; I've put in one or two neat little fixings."

"That's why I'm here. And if you can spare time to show me, I need not detain the Commandant any longer. I am sure he is busy."

The Pistol Again.

Monsieur le Commandant bowed. Duty was duty and there were certain matters which must be attended to very urgently in his office. After all, he would see her again before she left Bar-le-Duc; reluctantly he made his temporary farewells and departed, whilst Lieutenant Walters strolled beside Leonie across the Flying Ground.

His interest in her was not lessened when they stood beside his aeroplane in its hangar. For this most unexpected dame showed real knowledge of the points of a machine and discussed the various types in a manner which completely staggered Pete Walters.

"You must have studied airplanes," he commented.

"I'm interested in them," Leonie said, laying her hand on the nacelle of the machine almost as one might on the flank of a favorite horse. "And I can see you're fond of this one," she added. "You've made quite a pet of it."

Walters surveyed the aeroplane with honest pride.

"Well, yes," he confessed. "I've gone to some trouble to have her individual."

"You have succeeded," Leonie agreed.

On one side of the machine was painted the name "Pete" in large letters. All the upper parts were camouflaged in huge irregular blotches of red and green—"Wonderful how little you can see of her from above against the earth, especially when she's sitting down" the pilot commented. "She's a pretty thing and she flies like a pet angel."

"I'm glad that you like her so much," Leonie said. "And particularly glad because it may make you feel more inclined to do something for me."

"What's that, ma'am?" Walters looked up as he bent to examine the propeller. "I'd be right glad if there was anything I could."

"You can. And quite easily. You often fly in the Verdun direction, I suppose?"

"Sure! I'm due along there before dawn tomorrow."

"Well . . ." Leonie paused and then added, very deliberately: "I want you to take me with you tomorrow."

"Wha-at?" Walters stared unbelievingly."Why, you must be crazy. No! It's impossible—it's one great big impossibility!"

"There's no such word as impossible," Leonie said curtly.

"It's forbidden—strictly forbidden, ma'am—one of the most cast-iron 'dont's' here."

"Have you never done anything that was forbidden since you've been in France?" she asked him, her eyes meeting his directly, holding them steadily.

"Not this sort of thing anyway, not plain disobedience to orders—no. I couldn't do it."

"You can perfectly easily."

"I wouldn't do it, then!"

"Let me tell you my idea," Leonie calmly disregarded his interruption. "That waterproof cover at the back of the cockpit would hide me completely. I will wear overalls and a helmet, like your own: I shall be quite unnoticeable."

"I don't care if you're invisible, ma'am! I won't—do—it!"

"And I don't ask you to bring me back. That might be rather difficult—to explain my presence here," Leonie conceded reasonably. "All I ask you to do is to put me down behind the French lines at Verdun, as close as possible to the front trenches—and leave me there."

"All you ask! All you want? Say, you're modest, ma'am, aren't you? But it can't be done! It just cannot—be—done!" The young man thrust out his chin resolutely.

It can. Listen, Lieutenant Walters: I am not asking you to do this thing for amusement, as a freak. It is absolutely and urgently necessary that I should go to Verdun and with as little delay as possible," Leonie's voice had changed, hardened, her eyes were steely and the young man's fell before their glance, although he repeated doggedly.

"Can't help that. It's none of my business."

"Not your business? When if you refuse to help me, you will be losing a chance to serve France—to save France?"

"If I have it in orders from the Commandant I'll take you. Won't he give permission if it's all that

"No! And I cannot ask him. But—it will come to the same in the end: I shall get to Verdun whether you help me or not, if I have to shoot you down and take your 'plane to do it. Understand that!"

"You're threatening me?"

"Certainly I am — with this!" Grimly Leonie indicated the small, but businesslike revolver which she had produced from her pocket. "And I assure you I can and will use it, if necessary. But I don't want you to make it necessary."

"It's a hold-up!" Walters ejaculated.

"Yes. But not to rob you of anything, even your honor. Least of all that, believe me. If you do this thing, someday, when you know the whole truth, you'll be glad and proud that I gave you the chance to help. Won't you take my word for it—and take me to Verdun—voluntarily?"

Verdun.

Pete Walters stared at Leonie confusedly.

"Don't you see, if I did what you say I'd risk being court-martialled?" he said helplessly.

"Well? Are you so much afraid of that?" There was contempt in the cold tones and the boy reddened.

"No, I'm not. And I'm not afraid of you shooting me up either. You can take your tongue off that!" he blurted out angrily. "But what if we crashed or got into a fight? What if you were killed? And me in charge of the 'plane!"

"That's entirely my own business. If you were killed, too, it wouldn't matter to either of us. If you were not—there's not the slightest need for you ever to have known of my existence. I don't want you to."

"Well, but how'd I know you're not . . .?'

"A spy? You do know it, don't you?"

"Why—yes . . . I s'pose so . . ."

"Of course you do. You're not a fool," Leonie said incisively. "Well?"

"Don't see any 'well' about it, but . . ."

"I'm surely entitled to travel in one of the 'planes that I helped to give to the French Aviation? That seems to me only reasonable after all."

"Sure it does, but . . ."

"You'll do it, then? Thanks . . ." Suddenly, transforming, transfiguring, her smile shone upon the young pilot, and he stood shuffling his boots and colorings more furiously than before. As he said later to a friend:

"Up till then, I saw she's got a way with her—sort of distinguished, you know. But, by heck, when she smiled, she turned into a raving, tearing beauty, and you sort of felt you'd do anything for her and be proud of it."

Leonie's faith was fully justified. All went smoothly from the moment when Walters admitted an overalled, leather-coated, leather-helmeted figure into the hangar until that other, some time before six o'clock next morning when the aeroplane was run out from its hangar, over the frosted turf.

The air was still and very cold; every sound seemed unnaturally loud as the mechanics obeyed the pilot's orders to start the engine. The reverberating roar rose, deafeningly; the aeroplane taxied along some fifty paces, turned into the wind, rose—rose up into the clear darkness of the dawn.

At last Leonie was free to push aside the waterproof sheet which had covered her in order to look out. In front rose the head and shoulders of the pilot, silhouetted against the lucent space of sky which was visible to her, darkly, transparently blue with a tender green pulsing through it, foretelling the sun's coming.

And in that space of sky hung one great star.

They seemed to be flying straight towards it, to be using it as a shining skymark to guide the course of the 'plane. Leonie, drawing herself up, gazed at it steadily, its light reflected in her eyes. She hardly realized the incessant roar of the engines; she felt as though a great stillness enclosed her, and for a long time she sat motionless, unwilling to break that sense of unreality which seemed yet to be reality itself.

When at last she moved, the sky was clear amber, the star fading; leaning over the cockpit's edge, she saw the country beneath them slowly emerging from the shadows, glittering silverwhite under fresh fallen snow.

Snow hid much of the hideous mutilation of that torn countryside, snow covered the shell-holes, veiled the heaps of ruins which had once been farms and peaceful cottage homes, set about by poplars.

And now the dark streak of a river showed against the whiteness, bisecting the clustered buildings of a town, which appeared as a close pattern mainly of red and white in the growing light of day.

"Verdun . . .!" Leonie's brain commented, checking her knowledge.

There, guarding the great plateau, holding it against the enemy, Douaumont — Vaux — Hardaumont — Saures, the line of forts held by the French . . . Held? Who could be certain of it; who could say what was happening, for over all that sector hung the dense smoke of a bombardment, and from it rose the thud and crash and rattle, the infernal pandemonium of guns, great and small.

Down lower—lower. . . . Now they were no more than some five hundred feet above the earth. Walters took a short turn into the wind, nose down, with the motor stopped, so that the roar of the guns suddenly seemed to redouble itself in the engine's silence. They were skimming along, flattening out, gradually losing speed, until the wheels touched ground, slowed down . . .

As they did so, Leonie was standing up, climbing out of the cockpit. She swung herself down, raised one hand.

"Right! We can't shake — but thanks a thousand times. . . . And goodbye!"

"Sorry couldn't plunk you down nearer," Walters shouted above the rising roar of the engine, as he once more made contact. "Wouldn't have been a safe landing. Good luck!—good-bye."

His voice was drowned completely as the 'plane taxied along at ever-increasing speed, just skimming the ground, rising. He leaned over the side of the cockpit, waving his hand, saw the dark-clad figure, the face raised pale against the helmet which framed it, a face which had on its lips the smile which Pete Walters had only seen once before, which he was never to forget . . .

Up into the clear vault of the sky the aeroplane rose, grew smaller, vanished, whilst Leonie still stood with head raised, following its flight.

CHAPTER XXVII

Into Battle.

The gaunt farm ruins in which Leonie had taken shelter were nearer to Fort Douaumont than she had realized; one lip of the hollow in which the buildings crouched was indeed the actual crest of the escarpment and the road which ran down a cleft to the village and Fort of Vaux was close by.

The walls which still stood gave a semblance of safety, but she knew that this was illusory. At any moment the dream — and the ruins themselves—might be shattered by a direct hit; a shell had already fallen just beyond the enclosure, filling the air with brick dust.

Well, at least, standing in this angle, she was partly sheltered from the wind. So she remained there, head bent, hands thrust deep into the pockets of her leather coat, watching the snow drift higher and higher and higher against the opposite wall. She was waiting; waiting for some sign that the right moment had come. And that both the sign and the moment would come, Leonie never doubted.

Suddenly a movement caught her eye. She glanced up and saw a man stagger in through the ruined doorway, a man who was wounded—and dying. That was plain in his face.

He paused on seeing her, staring wildly, and in a second she was by his side, supporting and lowering him gently to the ground.

"Where . . . from, comrade?" he whispered. He was a French poilu, snow unmelted on the shoulders and back of his overcoat, blood and grime streaking his face.

"From the sky. An eroplane from Bar-le-Duc dropped me here, with a message for the Commandant at Fort Douaumont."

A ghastly kind of grin twisted the man's face. He spoke faintly.

"I've come . . . from there . . . we're cut off . . . no telephone. . . . Can't communicate. . . . No runners got through. . . . I . . . tried . . . to bring reinforcements . . ."

His head fell forward, then rose again with a jerk, as though he had suddenly remembered something. His hand fumbled at his breast, brought out something from under his coat which moved, turned a tiny head, bright-eyed, alert.

"Pigean . . .!" He indicated the message case attached under its wing, then loosened his grip.

The girl fluttered to his knee, seemed to try its wings, then flew up to the top of the wall, perched for a moment, rose again and circled round, its grey plumage strangely pale against the dark sky, so that it seemed a luminously white bird circling there.

It had turned, heading south when a long whine sounded from overhead, followed by a deafening crash. Leonie ducked involuntarily, as shell splinters and fragments of mortar fell around them. And something else. A little wisp of reddened feathers that fluttered helplessly down from the sky, turned this way and that by the wind, until it reached ground again close to the soldier's booted foot.

He stared at the shattered body of the pigeon and made a hoarse croaking sound in his throat, as though trying to laugh.

"Failed . . . like me . . .!" he gasped.

"Listen . . .!" Leonie bent over him. "Could I take the message?"

"No—chance . . ." he answered. "Their fire . . . sweeping the plateau . . ."

"But if no help comes?"

"Can't hold on—impossible—! Ah! What's that?"

He raised himself, his eyes staring in front of him, then fell back, lax against Leonie's supporting knee. She was alone again in the ruin, except for the broken bodies of the two dead messengers

She moved, gently lowering the soldier's head to the ground. Then she rose and crossed to the doorway; stood there, gazing across the plateau away from Fort Douaumont.

It was as the dead poilu had said. The ruined farm itself was in a kind of narrow zone of comparative immunity. But not more than a hundred yards away the enemy's shell barrage was dropping to cut off communications, to prevent reinforcements being brought up. And that barrage was like an ever-moving curtain of death, a cataract of explosives falling incessantly.

Leonie thrust both hands deep into her pockets and walked on, leaning forward into the icy wind. It was impossible to see more than a yard or two ahead; it was her feet which found and stumbled into a shallow communication trench, sloping upwards, filled with trampled, blood-stained snow, and wounded men. Seeing Leonie only as a newcomer, such of them as were conscious stared, questioned, some clutching at her coat, demanding whether she brought news of reinforcements.

As she shook her head gravely, a gaunt sergeant with both legs shattered fell back against the parapet.

"We cannot hold out—it is impossible," he groaned. "They come and come and still more come—like rats—like wolves. And who is to lead—to command? The officers—they are killed nearly all. If you are an officer—if you are a Frenchman, m'sieur, do what you can——"

"You are right," Leonie said. "I will do what I can—for France."

CHAPTER XXVIII

"Mademoiselle Napoleon."

Wilson Hall had just returned from a long day's fetching and carrying between the trenches and the hospital. He lowered himself carefully from the driving-seat and was hobbling away to his own tent, when one of the American orderlies called to him.

"There's a fellow waiting for you, Mr. Hall—been here for hours. A French soldier—says he's got a message; says it's important."

Hall quickened his limping pace. In his tent he found the messenger, a young infantryman with a corporal's stripes and the look on his face, under the steel helmet, which told so plainly of a long spell in the trenches to those who could recognize the signs.

"You are Monsieur . . .?"

"Hall is my name—Wilson Hall. I hear you have some message for me."

"Yes." The young soldier picked up a bundle which lay beside him, spread it out. The overalls of an airman, a leather cap and helmet. . . . Hall looked up perplexedly.

"I don't recognize these clothes," he said.

"But these were found in the pockets, and this note addressed to you."

"Ah......! At first sight Hall knew the note-book, the pencil-case, a silk handkerchief which he himself had given to her this last Christmas. "Yes, I know to whom those things belong, and the writing. . . . The note is from the same person."

The French corporal nodded gravely as Hall unfolded the sheets torn from the pocket-book and read:

"If these clothes with the note are found, they will bring them to you, I hope. I leave them, because I am wearing something underneath more suited to my purpose, something which I brought from India and fetched from my steamer-trunks in Paris. You are the only person in France who would have recognized them, those clothes of mine, and remembered the Maharajah's ball at Khotalghar. I could not tell you that purpose of mine; it would have sounded too fantastic...... mad, perhaps. I do not think I could have carried it out if I had put it into words. Whether it fails or not, this is almost certainly goodbye, or perhaps as you said, Wilson, au revoir. I should like to meet you again . . . somewhere."

Hall read, re-read—looked up at the other man.

"Where were these found?" he asked.

"In a trench at Verdun—behind Fort Douaumont."

"Verdun?"

"Yes. You know what the fighting has been, Monsieur? But no—you cannot! No one could who was not there, in that hell."

"You were in it yourself, Corporal?"

"Yes. I was at Douaumont from the first day of the attack, until the worst was over and we were relieved. Although the fighting may still be terrible—and doubtless it will—they will not pass, Monsieur."

"But—the person who wore these clothes?" Hall kept his voice steady by an effort.

"We know nothing of him—nothing at all. The clothes were there and your address, as you see, written on the note, Monsieur; that is why I have brought it. Nothing else and no body was found unidentified. I am sorry I can tell you nothing more concerning this friend of yours, but much, if you wish, of the fighting on those days when, as it would seem, he was there with us at Douaumont."

"Tell me," Hall found it difficult to speak. At least, he could be silent whilst the other told his story, and it might give him some clue, however slight. "I wish very much to hear."

"It is strange what I have to say. Most likely the world will not believe it. But we at Fort Douaumont, we know that it happened, we know that it is true, we know that when all was lost a miracle saved us."

"You need not fear that I shall doubt what you tell me, Corporal," Hall said gravely.

"We had been fighting for forty-eight hours unceasingly—no respite—no food. . . . And still they came on, flinging at us one fresh division after another, at us who were so weary. We had counter-attacked again and again, but still we were driven back and it seemed that the Fort must go — and Verdun — and France. For that is what they told us would happen if we could not hold on.

"There were more dead than living in our trenches, and scarcely an officer left . . . and we knew that a fresh attack was preparing. The snow was driving along the trench with the smoke of the guns; it was dim, like an ugly dream, and we stared and stared through the dimness, to see them coming. . . .

"Francois Bernard was beside me, a friend of mine; it was he who saw him first——"

"Saw who?" The pause was so long that Hall felt impelled to speak, but even so the Frenchman did not continue for a moment, remaining staring before him with an almost rapt look on his face.

"He caught at my arm—he whispered: 'Look!' And then . . . I saw him too, monsieur! He was standing in the trench, quite close to us. ....He wore a grey coat and a little black hat . . . just as one knows he did. And he was looking at us; and he was smiling . . . and he spoke. It was the Emperor; it was Napoleon himself. I swear it. Bernard would swear it too, if he were alive." Again a pause; the corporal leaned forward, his voice dropped almost to a whisper.

GEO. McCULLAGH'S ARCHWORTH WINS THE KING'S PLATE

Son of Worthmore Never Put to a Drive in Winning Ontario Classic

KING GEORGE PRESENT

His Majesty Presents Trophy and 50 Guineas to the Proud Owner

Toronto, May 23 (CP) — When George McCullagh bought his first thoroughbred two years ago for $500, he couldn't have dreamed that one day the comely brown colt would carry his orange and black silks to victory in the King's Plate before their Majesties.

To the astonishment of the King and Queen and 40,000 others Archworth galloped unchallenged at the Woodbine Park yesterday to a 10-length triumph over the pic kof Ontario's three-year-olds in the King's Plate. And from his Majesty's hands Mr. McCullagh received the Plate and the King's personal gift of 50 guineas. From the Ontario Jockey Club he received $8,750, the winner's share of a $10,000 added purse.

The proud son of Worthmore out of Archipelago was a horse to the King's taste and he told Mr. McCullagh so. The Queen, also showing deep interest, joined in with: "Your horse is a real champion. He was never extended."

Circled Racing Strip.

In an open carriage the Royal couple circled the racing strip to acknowledge the cheers of the multitude. Seated in the Royal box, the King eagerly turned to the race ahead and asked, too, about the history of the oldest continuously run race on the continent.

The King turned his field glasses on the favored Archworth as the colt leaped to the lead at the start. Two lengths ahead shot the speedster, then five, than eight. The King's glasses never left him.

Archworth was ten lengths on top at the finish of the mile-and-a-furlong battle over a slow track. He ran the distance in 1:54 2-4, just one-fifth over the record. He paid $5.40 to win, $3.60 to place and $3.50 to show.

Harry Giddings' Sea General finished fast in the stretch drive to take second place, a neck in front of the Parkwood Stable's Skyrunner. The rest of the field of thirteen was scattered further in the rear.

JIMMY BRUEN IS CRACK GOLFER

19-Year-Old County Cork Boy Expected to Win Open at St. Andrews

By SCOTTY RESTON

Hoylake, England, May 23 (AP)—Here is 19-year-old Jim Bruen of County Cork standing on the Hoylake practice tee cracking out drives and making his caddy duck 275 yards away. Henry Cotton is standing back of him shaking his head.

"Miraculous," says Henry, "you'd better tell them all about this boy."

Cotton's theory is that once in United States produces one golfer every generation Britain or the United States produces one golfer who sincerely believes that golf is an easy game, and Cotton's nomination for now is Bruen.

This is the same Bruen who, last year at 18, played No. 1 for the British Walker Cup team and carried Charlie Yates, the British amateur champion, to the thirty-fifth green before going down. Since then remarkable things have happened.

The boy who last year at St. Andrews weighed 189 now weighs 164. He has dieted and exercised away 25 pounds and he's hitting the ball about 20 yards farther. He also has completely changed his grip, despite these facts he arrived here a week ago and played this course — the longest in England—five times in 17 under par.

Bruen was asked today what he thought his chances were of winning the amateur this week.

"I'm hoping more to win the open at St. Andrews," he replied.

There are a lot of critics around here who give him a good chance to win both.

Vitt Says Yankees Will Live to Regret Their Present Policy

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 23 (AP)—All right, says Oscar Vitt, let the Yankees go ahead and make saps out of seven other American League clubs. Let them continue their policy of ruining the race before it is well under way. They will live to regret it, says Oscar, and the National League will get the gravy.

Manager of Cleveland Indians is a little steamed-up over the situation. He honestly thinks the champions are being short-sighted about their refusal ever to help a rival club. Furthermore, he dropped in on his old friend, President Ed Barrow of the Yankees, to tell him so.

"You ought to hear Ed rave when I tell him he'd better loosen up and give us a few trades," said Oscar. "What he says wouldn't bear repeating. And I didn't say a word about breaking up the Yankees. All I suggested was that they give the other teams a whack at all this talent they've got on ice and don't even need.

"They've got a 19-year-old kid named Priddy out at Kansas City that's blame near as good a second-baseman as Joe Gordon is right now. They don't need him and probably never will. But do you think I can get him, or any other club that figures to give the Yankees trouble? No, sir. Barrow will see that Priddy lands in the National League, or with the Browns.

"It's hurting the American League at the box office right now and it's going to get worse. The Yankees aren't such a big draw any more. What the customers want is a race like they get in the National League. But just go over and try to tell Barrow that."

AMERICAN HORSE SECOND CHOICE

Hypnotist, Owned by William Woodward, to Start in English Derby

(By Drew Middleton Associated Press Staff Writer).

London, May 23 (AP)—Three names—those of two trainers and a great sire—dominate Wednesday's field for the 156th running of the Derby.

The trainers are Jack Jarvis and Captain Cecil Boyd-Rochfort, each of whom will send several horses to the post, and the sire is Hyperion, with four sons in the race.

Among the Jarvis-trained horses entered are Blue Peter, the favorite at 75-20, and Admiral's Walk, currently priced at 15-1. Captain Boyd-Rochfort's include William Woodward's fine colt, Hypnotist, second choice in the betting at 17-2.

Hyperion, who won the 1933 Derby in the record time of 2.34, has a paternal interest in Admiral's Walk, Hypnotist, Heliopolis, the fourth choice at 13-1, The Casanova a well-liked outsider.

The fact that Gordon Richards, England's leading jockey, is to ride Fox Cub made that horse the third favorite at 21-2. The public made Blue Peter the favorite. the day after he won the Two Thousand Guineas at Newmaret. The money on him is piling up and may force the odds down.

However, wise racing heads point out that Pasch was an even greater favorite last year and finished third. One paper headlined, the morning of the race, "no race today, Pasch has it." A Derby favorite wins on an average of once in three years.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 23 (AP)—It isn't official yet, but if you're good Mike Jacobs may let you see Louis pin Galento's ears back for a $27.50 top. ....The Yankees' 11-game winning streak is their longest since Joe McCarthy climbed into the saddle..... Jack Roper and his manager, Dick Donald are near the breaking point ....Minneapolis in September is the next stop for the merry six day bike riders....Zebe Bonura denies he's sweet on a New York chorine.. Says baseball is stil his first love although he likes spaghetti and bananas pretty well, too.

Today's guest star—Marcus Griffin, New York Enquirer: "Larry MacPhail should send a wire to Bill Terrly asking him if the Giants are still in the league".

Sportsman's award—to Wild Bill Halahan: A week before the old Card southpaw was to have been paid a handsome bonus for signing with Minneapolis, he checked out leaving a note saying he didn't have it any more and was a liability to the club....Three cheers for Wild Bill and, boys, he had it once.

The people speak: Mule Haas: I played 11 years with the Athletics but they got the booing champions of the world right here in Oklahoma City....Max Baer: This Nova talks a hell of a fight doesn't he? ....Harry Mendel: This is the first bike race I ever ran exclusively for newspaper men......Charlie Gehringer: Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox is as good a second baseman as Joe Gordon and he outhit Gordon by 40 points last year....Max Schmeling: I beat Louis once; he beat me once. I deserve another chance, ain't it?

JERSEY GIANTS TOP INT. LOOP BY TIMELY SINGLE

Tommy Padden Puts Team in Front Over Newark Bears

LEAFS SPLIT

Second Game Finished Under Protest Due to Infield Fly Ruling

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City Giants are up there on top again. Thanks to a 10th-inning single by Tommy Padden the "Jints" are free, momentarily at least, of the pesky Newark Bears who have been giving them no quarter the last few weeks.

Actually the Bears took a two-place skid through Padden's blow that gave the Giants a 4-3 victory. Rochester, splitting a twin bill with the bottom-place Toronto team, stepped into second place—just .012 percentage points ahead of the Bears.

So Padden's blow was truly one that was heard throughout the League today. Incidentally, it was his third of the game and scored Johnny Dickshot with the winning run. Hy Vandenberg was credited with his fifth victory of the year after doing a neat relief trick. The "trick" was to keep the Bears blanked the last two innings.

Toronto Splits Pair

Toronto Maple Leafs, possibly urged to greater heights by General Manager Dan Howley's announced intention of leaving for a two weeks tour of the big leagues in search of talent, won one. But then they turned right around and lost one.

Howley's decision prompted the Leafs to dash out and whip up a 5-1 triumph over Rochester Red Wings. However, Mike Ryba came through for the Wings in the night game, second part of the double bill, and blanked the Leafs 4-0. The game was finished under protest due to a mix up on an infield fly ruling, which actually had nothing to do with the outcome.

Syracuse had to take to the lights to break a losing streak that threatened never to let them out of the League's lower regions. The Chiefs took the measure of Baltimore by 12-5 for their first victory in five starts.

The winners collected 15 hits off four Oriole pitchers, and John Bottarini whacked out a pair of homers and drove in five runs. Red Howell, Fred Tauby and Gene Cobrett batted in all the Oriole runs with a home run apiece.

Buffalo and Montreal were rained out.

Westmount Juniors To Play Senior

Montreal, May 23 (CP)—Suburban Westmount will have a senior football team next fall, members of Westmount juniors who reached the Dominion finals last year, were told at a dinner in their honor last night. The announcement came from R. Fred Porter, head of last year's Nationals of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, and James C. Riddell, former president of the Montreal Football Club and an executive of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

"We are definitely going to have a Westmount team in senior competition this year—with Fred Porter's help," Riddell said. "Whether we will be in the O.R.F.U. or Q.R.F.U., I cannot say. We may even be in the Big Four."

SCALP BROUGHT BAG OF FLOUR

Winnipeg (CP)— Frank Dobbs, formerly of Shoal Lake, Man., has just celebrated his golden wedding, his bride of 1889 being Miss Mamie McMillan. He is an ex-Mountie, and in a story in The Free Press he tells this interesting story of his early days:

"I was on patrol along the old Hudson Bay trail one day, when I saw an Indian caravan pass, with a stick protruding from one of their carts, and on the stick a fine Indian scalp floating in the breeze, with hair on it over 12 inches long and fragments of feathered headgear adhering to the skin. I traded a bag of flour for the scalp, and later presented it to the Dublin Museum."

PLANT BY STARS GET GOOD RESULTS

Venus for Flowers, Mars and Saturn for Vegetables Astrologer Says

Harrogate, England (CP— Mrs. Ada Parkes of Epsom believes that if gardeners could discover what the stars rule they would have no need of artificial fertilizers.

Mrs. Parkes told an astrologers' conference here that, for instance, peas should be sown this year two days before the full moon, to produce bumper crops. Root crops on the other hand, should be sown under a waning moon.

Giving the conference the astro-hosticultural lowdown, she said: "Venus' gracious rulership extends over all the kingdom of flowers, but the war planet Mars controls the beans and radishes and Saturn determines the length of the parsnips."

BAWDEN HURLS 'OILERS' TO A 10-2 VICTORY

Ace Softball Hurler Restricts Heavy - Hitting Corbys to Six Hts

MOON HOMERS

Harris Unable to Check the Heavy Hitting in Bunches of Winners

Johnnie Bawden is still tops when it comes to softball pitching in Belleville, at least he hurled far too good for the Corbys A.C. last night when the softball season was officially opened and when the dust (or rather mud) had settled on the diamond after a seven inning abbreviated affair, Frank Sedore's new Shell "Oilers" were far out in front of Corbys, eight runs to be exact, when the Oilers drew first blood in the Belleville City Softball League by winning the opener by a 10 to 2 score.

After a few innings of fairly good pitching on the part of the opposing moundsmen, Jack Moon cuffed one of Con Harris' slants for the circuit, with the base paths plugged to capacity. Moon's mighty blow came in the fifth, when the issue was finally settled with the Oilers shoving five runs across after Corbys had scored a brace in the fourth. With the exception of their fourth, when Corbys scored two and collected four of their six hits, Bawden was in complete control of the situation, striking out five, getting two three base hits, fielding superbly and showing splendid control when he failed to issue a single free ticket. Harris, on the other hand walked six, was nicked for 10 safeties, four being for extra base, and was generally afforded poor support in the field.

Corbys bunched four singles in the fourth, Cy Barriage, Murray, Cole and McMartin all ganging up on Bawden in this frame. Jim Barriage and Miller got scratch hits in the seventh, but failed to score. No Corby batter got more than one safety off the deliveries of Bawden. Ronsky, Bawden, Dickey and Moon all hit Harris freely, however. Once the youthful Oilers moved into the lead, they fielded and hit better, although they were held hitless for the first three frames by Harris. Subsequently the Sedore-led kids took full advantage of the loose ball played by the Barnett-coached squad and scored their ten runs in the last three innings. The game marked the opening of the local softball season and was officially ushered in when President Bowler, Ken Edgecombe and Harry Knott performed the usual official opening ceremonies. The Box score:—

History was made yesterday when George McCullagh's Archworth won the 80th running of the King's Plate. It was a runaway for Archworth as the big three-year-old led from the barrier to the wire to win by ten lengths, going away. It was a glorious affair despite the fact it was a one horse race. His Majesty King George personally presenting the Gold Cup and fifty guineas to owner George McCullaugh. 50 guineas that will never get into circulation. For fifty minutes the horses stood in the paddock awaiting the arrival of Their Majesties, the King and Queen. The 1939 running of the King's Plate will go down in history as the most colorful and unique horse racing event ever to be held on this continent, it was graced by the presence of the King and Queen of the British Commonwealth of Nations. It was undoubtedly a most impressive sight that was witnessed by a crowd of at least 50,000 persons.

Johnnie Bawden vindicated Manager Frank Sedore's pre-season statements and opinions of who's just about the top-flight softball pitcher in these here parts. The manner in which Bawden handcuffed the highly touted Corbys A.C. in last night's softball league opener was conclusive, as the young Shell "Oilers" hit and fielded well behind him to win over Corbys 10 to 2. With the possible exception of the fourth inning, when Corbys scored their lone tallies, Bawden was on top and all over Chuck Barnett's men. Incidentally Tom Miller supplied the fielding sensation of the night, with a running one hand stab of Sero's liner with three aboard. General speaking, however, the Oilers played much better defensive ball and as the box score indicated, out-hit them for good measure. When Cy Barriage turned his ankle and was forced out of the game, his loss at short was keenly felt by the losers. Barriage may be out for several more games. Aside from Bawden's fine mound effort, Jack Moon's circuit blow in the fifth, with three aboard, was the turning point in the game. Hereafter the young Oilers could not be beaten.

The heads of the city softball loop are to be congratulated upon the splendid work, that has been done at the Coleman Flats diamond this spring. Bleachers have been added along the first and third base lines, for the comfort and advantage of the patrons of the game. The diamond proper has been groomed and looks splendid, although unfortunately it was too wet for good ball last night. Incidentally the wet grounds and uncertain footing seemed to favor the Oilers, perhaps to a greater degree than the Corbys, but on the night's play the better team undoubtedly won. For the general information of the softball sponsors, we might make it clear that Freddie Vasil is indefinitely suspended from the association. This should help to clear up certain rumours which have been heard to the contrary, Secretary Harry Knott announced today. Apparently Frank Sedore had more faith in last year's juniors than did some other local softball managers. Frank had six of Red Townsend's 1938 junior team in his line-up last night. "Youth will be served," admits Sedore.

A new sailing threat loomed [illegible] the Bay of Quinte waters yesterday when Harry Semark piloted his Alaska to the season's first victory in the Belleville Yacht Club sailing races in the "A" class. Semark handily beat Maurice Callaghan's After You 2nd to inaugurate the point sailing season. The After You was well out in front for the first two laps, but Semark gained a strong tail wind on the upper leg towards the bay bridge and overtook the After You and later got to the weather. After that Semark continued to better his position. The "B" class boats failed to finish under the regulation time. While the sailors were getting their season's legs, Lloyd Hicks, well known speed boat driver, launched his newly decorated Baby Eugene, a 2.10 class power boat, that really showed some speed when Hicks "gave her the gun" out in the bay. Mr. Hicks intends to race his boat in connection with the Rotary Club's Gold Cup races here next August and a likely looking craft it is, capable of some 40 to [illegible] miles per hour.

Wet grounds forced the postponement of yesterday's Bay of Quinte League opener. Skipper Walt Gerow of Napanee was in communication with the baseball heads here yesterday and suggested the game be played this week. Incidentally the local baseball players could have shown a little more interest in the game, that is if they want to play ball.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean returned to his former pitching status on Sunday as he "fogged 'em through" to let the Bees down with three scratch hits.. ......"When I get to starting on a hot day I just can't figure how anybody will get on base," remarked Dean after his splendid effort against the Boston club......They're still staging a strong dog fight in the National League, Philadelphia, in the cellar slot, only being eight games behind St. Louis and Cincinnati, but take Boston and the Yankees out of the American League and what have you left?

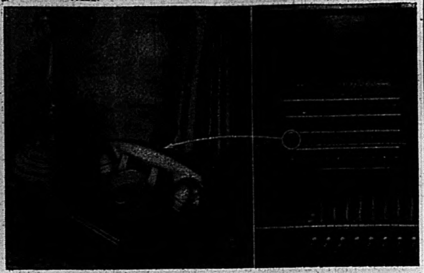
One of the Most Modern Telephone Systems Is Carried on Their Majesties 12-Car Train



LEFT, the gold finished telephone handset, of the latest bell-in-base design, which is installed in the King's car aboard the Royal train. To the RIGHT is the telephone switchboard located in the combined baggage and sleeping car. Encircled is the line through which His Majesty's telephone calls will pass.

Montreal, May 23 — The 12-car train which will carry their Majesties on their tour of Canada and the United States has been equipped with one of the most modern telephone systems in the world, it was officially announced recently by The Bell Telephone Company of Canada. Elaborate arrangements have been made so that any member of the royal party may communicate by telephone with anybody on the royal train—even when it is in motion.

Furthermore, at all important stops the train's telephone system will be "plugged in" to the nearest telephone exchange, and thus, by merely lifting the nearest telephone receiver, the King or any member of the party, will be able to place or receive long distance calls to or from England or any one of more than 75 other countries throughout the world.

Special telephone arrangements have also been made for the benefit of the officials, members of the press and others, who will travel on the pilot train. It has been equipped with six telephones which will be available for service to any point in Canada, Great Britain, the United States, or elsewhere at all overnight stops. There is no inter-communicating system between the cars of the pilot train, however.

On each of the twelve cars of the royal train there is at least one telephone, each of which may be interconnected by means of the royal train switchboard located in an electrically constructed room in the combined baggage and sleeping car, which is known as car number 11. As the King's car, at the rear of the train, bears number 1, car 11 will be the second from the locomotive.

In all, there are 16 telephone instruments on the royal train, including extension sets in two of the cars, and two direct lines in the King's car. The locals are numbered 1 to 14, but there is no local 13.

The King's personal telephone is a gold-finished hand set, of the latest bell-in-base design, but the other telephones are standard instruments, some walnut and some black in color.

At 31 points in Canada and at three in the United States (probably Washington, New York, and Hyde Park) the royal train telephone equipment will be connected with the regular telephone system by means of special cables which will terminate near the track on which the train will stand. At more than 20 of these points, the pilot train will also be connected with the Trans-Canada Telephone System.

Three employees of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada have been assigned to telephone duties on the royal train for the duration of the tour. They are J. M. Hay, assistant vice-president; LeSueur Brodie, exchange and toll engineer; and H. F. H. Smith, of the plant department, all of Montreal. Their work will include all public contacts, the operation of the switchboard when the train is in motion and at all overnight "parking" places and the maintenance of the equipment.

No women telephone operators will be on duty at the royal train switchboard except at certain daytime stop overs in the larger cities. On Ontario and Quebec, these points are Quebec City, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto and Niagara Falls. Local operators are being selected for this honor in each of these cities and it is expected that their names will be made public in a few days.

Although the royal train will be in Ottawa for four days, it will be unoccupied except on the last day of their Majesties' stay in the capital. Therefore no operators will be required and the regular telephone crew on the royal train will be sufficient.

The private branch exchange switchboard in the baggage car, more familiarly known as the "royal switchboard", will be a one-position (that is, one operator will be on duty at a time) manual board, and the locals connected to it will be manually operated—in other words, the operator will personally ask the calling party for his number.

Due to the different types of telephone equipment in use in various parts of the Dominion, special telephones have been manufactured and installed on the pilot train. These instruments can be used in three ways—as dial telephones, as ordinary manual telephones or as magneto telephones. In the latter instance, the user calls the operator by turning a crank.

The royal train switchboard, which was manufactured in the Montreal factory of the Northern Electric Company, has many novel features. In order to prevent vibration when the train is in motion it is mounted on a base of sponge rubber. Adjustable steel bars, with rubber fittings, will maintain it in a rigid position even when the train is going around sharp curves. To use the term invented by automobile manufacturers, the switchboard has "floating power".

The special room containing the switchboard has a window in the door and on one side. This room also houses the "ringing" machine which is designed to operate on 32 volts direct current, instead of on the usual 110 volts. The cables connecting the switchboard with each of the cars were manufactured by the Northern Electric Company especially for this purpose. There are special telephone cable couplings between each car and, if it is necessary or desirable, it will be possible to disconnect any car from the royal train without affecting the telephone circuits to the other cars.

The Dominion Government is assuming the cost of the installation of the telephone equipment on the royal train only. The cost of the telephone equipment on the pilot train and all other expenses, such as special cables at the various stations, equipment, etc., are being borne by the telephone companies oprating in the territory concerned, i.e. The Bell Telephone Company of Canada in Ontario and Quebec, the New Brunswick Telephone Company in New Brunswick, the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company in Nova Scotia, the Manitoba Telephone System in Manitoba, the Saskatchewan Government Telephones in Saskatchewan, the Alberta Government Telephones in Alberta, and the British Columbia Telephone Company in British Columbia.

From any telephone in any community on the route of the royal tour, it will be possible to transmit photographs by telephoto.

Keene. Miss Ellen Waite gave a short story of the King and Queen. Rev. Mr. Platt paid tribute to the mothers in his splendid message, which was full of interest and help to all. There was special music by the choir under the direction of Mr. Dave Thrasher.

The Y.P.U. entertained several other Unions at a social evening in the Y.M.C.A., Belleville, on Tuesday evening.

Great interest is being taken in the visit of the King and Queen to Canada and those fortunate enough to have a radio are getting the special broadcasts from Quebec, Montreal and Ottawa, which are very thrilling. Quite a number of the younger people are planning a trip to Kingston or Toronto to see the historic event.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg — The monthly meeting of Thomasburg United Church Women's Association was held in the Sunday School rooms with the president, Mrs. W. Vance in charge. Mrs. Clifford Adams was appointed secretary pro-tem. The meeting opened with the singing of a hymn followed by prayer by Mrs. George Walker. The Scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. George Jones.

During the business period ways and means of raising money were discussed and it was decided to use a travelling apron.

Readings were given by Mrs. W. Vance, "Kitchenitis"; Mrs. Ed. Way "With Strong Desire"; Mrs. Clifford Adams, "The Ladies' Aid" and Mrs. James Bateman, "The Tapestry Weavers."

The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

A very appropriate service was conducted in the United Church on Sunday evening in keeping with the thought "Mother's Day." The musical part of this service was in charge of the Young People's choir. The pastor, Rev. H. B. Herrington, delivered an impressive message with the theme "Hannah, the Mother of Samuel." A recitation "The Spirit of the Home" from Edgar Guest's poems, was given by Merle Bateman. A pageant, "The Children's Hour" ,was given by some of the children from the primary department, with Mrs. Herrington, the mother, telling the story of Jesus blessing little children. The children were Ruth Jones, Ronald Sherry, Aileen Diamond, Jackie Vance, Betty Vance and Gerald Morton. The choir rendered an anthem. During the service the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Clare Carter, "Morris Clare," was baptized.

A number of prizes were carried off by the pupils of Thomasburg School at the Music Festival for Centre Hastings held in Tweed on Tuesday. These pupils are to be congratulated on their success, and also their teachers, Miss A. Heasman and Mrs. W. H. Elliott.

CROSSWAY SLEEPERS

Durban, S.A., May 23 (CP)—South African railways are "wonderful" according to an American tourist, but "why do you Africans sleep crossways in your trains?" he inquired. He preferred the "fore and aft" American fashion.

Shannonville

Shannonville — The thrill and ambition of a lifetime of the members of the Trinity Church choir was realized on Tuesday evening when they sang at St. George's Cathedral at Kingston, joining in a choir of approximately six hundred voices comprising parishes from many different Ontario cities, towns and hamlets. This service was a part of the Synod service which is convening in Kingston at the present time. The address delivered by the Rev. Mr. Woodcock of Toronto, was very inspiring.

Members of the Trinity Church choir in attendance at this very inspiring service were: Miss Eliza Bell, choir leader and organist; Mrs. Albert Marks, Mrs. Percy Howard, Mrs. H. Crane, Mrs. J. C. Spencer, Bernice Maracle, Ruth Spencer, Catherine Brant, Irene Brady, Verna Reid, Charles Mayell, Robert Crane. Mrs. Ira Cook and Mrs. K. R. Vivian also attended the service.

Personals

Through the kindness of Miss Louise Stillson, teacher of the Shannonville Public School, the pupils of the school were able to hear the broadcast of the landing of the King and Queen. Miss Stillson had installed her radio in the junior room and the children, who are deeply interested in the arrival of the King and Queen, were able to hear the interesting broadcast.

Mr. Alvin Doxtator of Kingston, was a week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Doxtator.

Mrs. Jack Kent and Jean were Sunday evening callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bell, Tyendinaga Reserve.

Miss Marion Topping of Belleville was a week-end guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Toppings of Marysville.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Winters of Napanee, were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bell, Tyendinaga Reserve.

Mr. William Williams of Point Anne, was a Tuesday evening guest of Mrs. Jack Kent.

Local fishing enthusiasts report that mudcats are very plentiful in the Salmon River at the present time.

Mr. Laurel Burtt left for St. Catharines on Tuesday where he will visit with friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell MacFarlane of Trenton, were Sunday afternoon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Houston and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Houston.

Vivian's booth opened on Monday and the proprietor reports a fairly good business for this time of the year. Extensive revnovations of the year. Extensive renovations up-to-date booth were made previous to the opening.

Local service station proprietors expect a bumper week-end in gasoline sales and therefore they expect to keep their service stations open during the evenings in order to accommodate the motorists.

Centenary

Centenary — The W. A. pot luck dinner held at the church Thursday preceding the monthly meeting was enjoyed by twelve members.

The president opened the meeting with the National Anthem in honor of the visit to Canada of the King and Queen. The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. Mrs. H. Garrison read the Scripture reading. Mrs. Platt gave a reading, "The Last Testament," which was much enjoyed. Mrs. R. Hart favored with a solo as a tribute to Mother's Day. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved and the roll call followed.

Business was then discussed. Mrs. Robert Hart and Mrs. Edgar Ray were appointed delegates to attend the convention at Tweed on May 30th. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

The W.M.S. meeting was held on Thursday at the church The Call to Worship was given in a short poem by the President, Miss F. Johnson. Hymn 396 was sung and prayer followed. After the business session the collection was taken.

Mrs. Fred Aikens, group leader for May then took charge. The 23rd. Psalm and Apostle's Creed were repeated in unison. Mrs. H. Garrison contributed a reading on peace. Hymn 106 was followed by the Scripture reading by Mrs. E. Ray. A reading "Too Busy", was given by Mrs. W. Symns and was much enjoyed. Mrs. Aikens then gave a short talk on the Covenant of the Upper Room and closed with a poem, "One Day to Live."

Mother's Day was observed on Sunday with a very large congregation present, the church was decorated with cut flowers and plants for the occasion.

Mrs. Kelly, superintendent of the Sunday School, was in charge of the special Mother's Day program. A short story was dramatized by 5 girls of Miss Coza Calvert's class. A story entitled the "Room of Gold" was given by Miss Verna

Rawdon

Rawdon, May 23.—Mrs. Don Heath and Mrs. Don McLaren entertained thirty-five girl friends of the Misses Laura and Irene Tucker on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Kenneth Tompkins delighted with a solo. Misses Thelma and Vera Ketcheson rendered a duet. Miss Evelyn Bailey and Mrs. Will Heath staged several games.

Mrs. Don Heath read the address of the afternoon and Mrs. Don McLaren presented Laura with an eight piece set of crystal sherbets, plates, high and low goblets, and Irene was presented with an array of kitchenware in cream and red.

"Dear Laura and Irene: They tell us that the minds of young men and women turn toward love in the springtime and evidently you two sisters have been thinking about love for sometime and now we hear you are going to join your love with the love of another. Like the birds you have chosen your mates and are going out into the world to live your life the best way possible and before you leave the home nest your girl friends have gathered together to wish you well as you take unto yourselves your helpmates for life.

"Laura, as you are the older we address you first. In your own quiet way you have endeared yourself to us, your girl friends. You have been willing to enter into all our activities and we have always found you were willing to play the game and play it fair. Anything in life that you have undertaken you have seen it through, your influence has always been good and your ideals always of the best. It is our hope that you and Ray will have a very happy married life and that beams of sunshine may always lighten your path. As a token of our esteem for you we ask you to accept this gift with the hope that its bright rays may ever brighten your path of life.

"Irene, you being the younger sister we think of you now and to you also we wish to extend our good wishes on the eve of your wedding day. We have always found you to be what we would desire in a girl friend. Your attitude to the daily experiences of life has been a happy one and you have always brightened the corner where you were. You never seemed to take life too seriously as you usually said what you thought and when it came to actions you acted quickly. You were the life and light of things, which is a wonderful talent to have and to use. It is our hope that you will lighten and brighten that home that you and Carleton are building together. We ask you to accept these gifts not to use on your husband but for your husband with the hope you may always feed him well.

"So Laura and Irene, we wish you well as you go out to your new homes. You have been comrades in your own home and we except you to be comrades to those young men whom you have chosen as your life partners."

Laura and Irene graciously replied thanking their friends for the lovely gifts and thanking Marion and Lola for providing such a happy afternoon and invited one and all to pay them a visit in their new homes.

A delicious lunch of sandwiches, cake, ice cream, macaroons and lemonade was served and the girls clasped hands in a circle and sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

The pupils of Harold public school won first place in their chorus "O. Canada" among the ungraded schools at the Centre Hastings musical festival held in the Opera House at Tweed on May 16th under the direction of the musical supervisor, Mr. W. H. Morris.

Miss Dorothy Cooney was first in junior girls' solo and Miss Eileen Runnalls third in senior girls' solo.

Master Bobby Elliott was first in boy's solo and first in piano solo. Master Gerald Scott was first in guitar solo. Mr. Roy Fenwick, director in musical education in the Province of Ontario, was adjudicator and over a thousand attended.

Miss Edna Stillman is the popular teacher of Harold school.

Wellman's Young People presented their play "Adventures of Grandpa" at Ivanhoe on Wednesday evening. This will be the last time they will stage their drama this season.

Springbrook Young People have been staging their play "Whittler" at Rylestone and Burnbrae recently and are being most successful.

Graduation

VIVA STINGEL ELDRIDGE

Betty Lovett danced into the Lovett's shabbily comfortable home, as usual a few minutes late for dinner, and began:

"It's all settled, dear family. We had a class meeting today—and I need some money for—"

"Now see here Betty, you've got to cut out some of these shows, and dances and things." Father stopped serving the hamburg steak and canned green peas to gesture emphatically. "I'm not a millionaire. It's a dollar and a half here, and two dollars there—something all the time. It's got to stop."

"But, daddy! A dollar and a half. Two dollars! Why—why—" Betty was stammering in her excitement. "But, daddy, it's graduation!"

Betty's eyes turned to mother for encouragement; and father's eyes turned to mother for enlightenment.

Mother, with a quick little catch of her breath, evaded father's eye, and nodding to Betty, said, "go on Betty. Tell father what you need."

"Well, it's all settled." Betty was once more enthusiastic. "We are to have white linen for Senior day, flat crepe for Baccalaureate Sunday—"

"Clothes!" Father exploded. Then he threw his roll on the table. "Well, there it is—every last cent that can be spent for extras this spring. I told you I was not a millionaire."

Betty meekly ate her dinner until father became absorbed in the account of Batty Jones' home run, then she reached forth a dimpled white hand and gathered in the money.

"Oh, mother, I guess there'll be just enough," flipping over the bills, and calmly appropriating every last cent for herself. Betty knew that many of the girls were having only two, possibly three, new frocks but she had made up her mind to have five one for every day.

Mrs. Lovett mentally calculating, sighed inwardly, and resigned all thought of the excellent piece of blue silk that she had admired in Bessom & Company's window. But Susie, two years Betty's junior, sighed outwardly and exaggeratedly: "I see where I go without a new dress for Celia's party."

So Betty began her shopping and went through the whole list—and the whole roll of money.

The white graduation dress shimmered in finished beauty, the soft folds of the orchid reception frock hung in graceful completeness, and the rose-colored church dress was cut but unfinished when Betty suffered a change of heart. The blue silk in the shop window had been disturbing her for some days now. She wanted it for her mother. Also, coming quietly in one day, she had found Susie, shining-eyed, draped in the hose-colored silk, posing before the mirror.

Two lovely frocks at once, and a white linen one, ought to satisfy any girl, Betty thought to herself. She bundled up the sport silk and started for the silk store.

Timidly Betty approached the clerk. "May I exchange this for some of that blue silk in your window?"

"Usually we do not exchange cut silks miss," the clerk answered hesitatingly. "I'll call the manager."

Betty knew the manager slightly, and she again put forth her timid question. "Well, now, Miss Betty, that is a nice idea," he said when she had told him that she wanted to surprise her mother with a new dress. "But why not keep your silk, and I'll give you some for your mother on the charge account."

"Now that is an easy way out of it," Betty murmured. "I can have my dress, and mother can have one, too. Still—daddy looked pretty stern when he said 'every last cent.' He was generous with me, too—it's almost like stealing—cheating, anyway."

"No, thank you, Mr. Baker. Father said we were not to spend any more money for clothes. He gave me a lot, but I spent it all on myself." Betty blinked rapidly to keep back the tears.

"All right child, guess we can fix you up," and the manager got the silk himself and cut it for her. "Your mother will enjoy wearing that dress, I am sure, Miss Betty, he said as he handed it to her.

Baccalaurreate Sunday came and Betty wore her old silk dress, but her heart sang above all thought of clothes.

Class day came, and Betty wore the white linen she had worn on Senior day. Graduation night came and Betty, all shimmering white loveliness, stood on the platform to receive her diploma.

Her eyes sought out her family, where they sat in tense silence, their eyes fastened on her. There was mother, dressed becomingly in blue silk; Susie, proudly arrayed in an adored rose frock; father, his eyes alight not only with love, but with admiration and understanding as well. Betty felt that she had truly graduated.

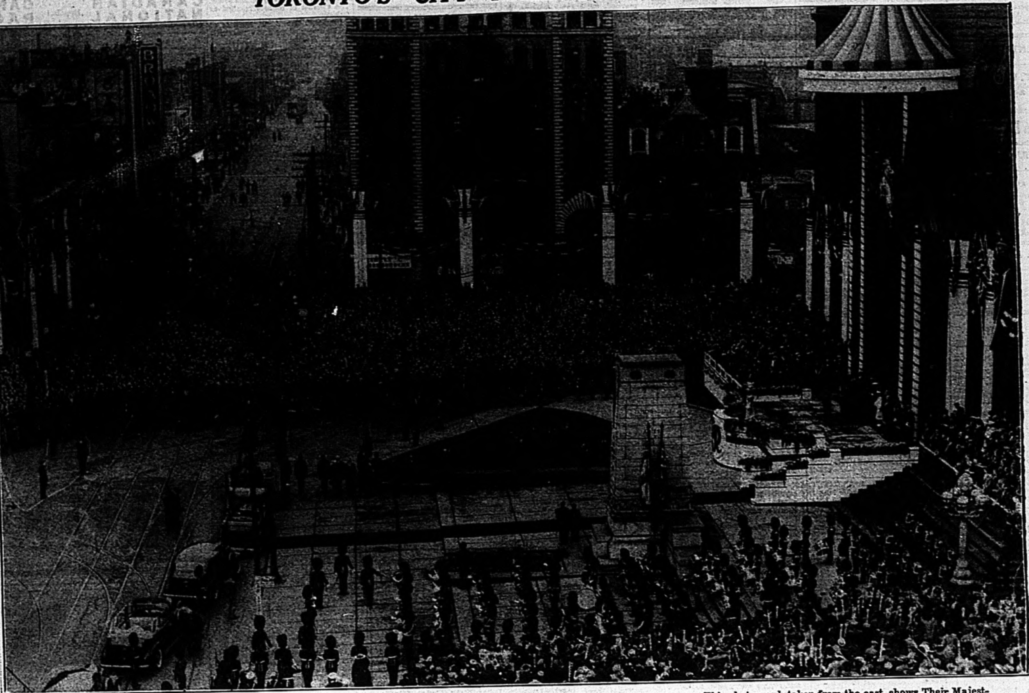
BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, TUESDAY, MAY 23, 1939

TORONTO'S CITY HALL RECEPTION



There were throne chairs ,newly covered in red velvet, placed for the King and Queen before the Toronto city hall, but they did not use them. Instead, they remained standing at the front of the platform for the entire 15 minutes of the welcome ceremony, so that the massed thousands of their cheering subjects could see them well. This photograph taken from the east, shows Their Majesties standing, with Mayor Ralph Day behind.

Their Majesties Wave to 25,000 Gathered at Station To Pay Homage to Sovereigns

People Wait Patiently for Long Hours to Greet Canada's King and Queen

CLIMAX TO SCENE

Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth gladdened the hearts of 25,000 loyal Canadian subjects, who lined Belleville C.N.R. station property to welcome the royal couple on Sunday evening. As the silver and blue sleek streamlined royal train noiselessly rolled into the station and stopped, the Belleville Municipal Band played the National Anthem and some minutes later their Majesties appeared on the observation platform, Queen Elizabeth being the first to appear. She was dressed in a cream ensemble. The King followed.

Their Majesties waved in response to the thunderous shouting from the thousands of throats assembled as the train moved slowly westward. Over-enthusiastic throngs broke down the snow fences, which lined the railway right-of-way and raced madly behind the ever-increasing and speeding train to get a better and last glimpse of their loved Majesties, who smilingly stood on the platform and continued to wave in response as the sleek royal train sped out of sight.

Long and Patient Wait

It was a memorable night in the history of Belleville, when for over six hours prior to the arrival of the royal train people from all parts of the district began to assemble in hopes of getting a glimpse of their King and Queen. The populace was not disappointed and the tumultuous and spontaneous ovation that followed was ample reward after the long wait. Chants of "We want the King, we want the Queen" did not go unrewarded as the 25,000 Canadians gasped for a split second when her Majesty appeared, but when the King stepped behind her a second later, the air was rent with thunderous applause as the royal couple acknowledged their subjects who had come to acclaim them.

Rain commenced to fall early in the evening, but as the pilot train, preceding the royal train, rolled into the Belleville station the rain subsided and no further precipitation was seen to dampen the greatest occasion in the history of the city, when the King and Queen of the British Commonwealth of Nations appeared publicly in Belleville to acknowledge their subjects, who had waited hours in fond hope of obtaining a glance of the royal couple. Not since the day of the Armistice had the streets of Belleville been so crowded, traffic disrupted or such a large crowd assembled in this city. Thousands from miles around drove into Belleville, streets and properties for dozens of blocks adjacent to the C.N.R. station were lined with automobiles but no parking was permitted on railway property which was a living, seething mass of humanity, lining both sides of the railway from Cannifton Road far into the terminal east yards.

Bands Plays Patriotic Airs

Prior to the arrival of the royal train the Belleville Municipal Band under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson, entertained the massed throng and relieved the monotony of the long wait. A section was roped off immediately east of the Belleville C.N.R. station in which Mayor Bone, C. A. Cameron, M.P., city officials, aldermen, members of the Board of Education, the Parks Board and others including Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., who was escorted to a place of honor in a wheeled chair. The band played numerous selections while Lieut. Jobson led in community singing to keep the crowd in a joyous mood as some had taken up preferred positions as early as 3.00 or 4.00 p.m., the royal train rolling silently into the station at approximately 10.12 p.m. Three hundred students from the Ontario School for the Deaf, with flags and banners were also given preferred space.

Impressive Scene

The entire program was completed with dignity, order and good citizenship prevailing throughout the entire proceedings. City police under Chief Kidd, C.N.R. police under Fred Chapman, and Great War Veterans patrolled the right-of-way and upheld perfect order, with the exception when the over-anxious throng saw their beloved Majesties leaving and then the pent-up feelings of loyalty became unleashed and snow fences were trampled down as large numbers sought to get a fleeting glance of the royal couple as the throng raced madly down the tracks in pursuit of the fleeting train, as the King and Queen smiled most graciously and continued to wave to the populace as they faded into the darkness, leaving 25,000 from Belleville and district more enthusiastic than ever.

Appearance of King and Queen

"He's a taller man than I had any idea," men were heard to remark. "She's as sweet as her pictures. She looks like a girl," women were heard to openly remark as all seemed joyous and happy, having seen a fleeting glance of their loved Majesties.

The throng gazed with wonder when the pilot train rolled through Belleville, but when the royal train —neat in its blue and silver paint and sleek stream-lined engine rolled silently into the station the throng gasped and stood in speechless amazement at the picture, the Royal Coat-of-Arms being prominently displayed on the front of the C.N.R. engine and upon each coach of the train. When the train stopped red-coated Royal Canadian policemen stepped from the vestibules and took up positsions at all entrances, standing at attention.

Emotional Silence

Strangely, a silence was felt as her Majesty appeared, it was an emotional silence, so to speak, but as the large throng seemed to grasp they were actually seeing their Majesties, the air was rent with joyous shouting as his Majesty joined his Queen on the rear platform, but that short space of emotional silence, something that comes deep from the heart will long be remembered by all walks of life who saw their Britannic Majesties in Belleville on Sunday night.

The civic reception of the band and preferred platform was arranged through Mayor Bone and Lieut. Fred Jobson, to whose efforts credit must be given , while City Engineer Charles Mott looked after the detailing of all preparations.

Why the Weather!

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

A northern summer resort! Labrador may seem a bleak place, but anyone who enjoys an invigorating, outdoor holiday with plenty of fishing and scenery will find it there. It is warmer than interior Canada, but even at that the coasts are ice-bound up to mid-June. There are, however, no fogs except at the strait of Belle Isle. The summer temperature ranges from 30 to 80 degrees on the coast and from 45 to 90 degrees inland, with occasional night frosts. Sunshine is abundant and rainfall is scanty, seldom interfering w a day of sport. The weather continues good throughout July, August and September. The geese begin to fly south in August and snow begins to fall in the northern part in September.

QUINTUPLETS HUG AND KISS QUEEN ON PRESENTATION

PICTURES PRESENTED

Callander, Ont., May 23 (CP)—The Dionne Quintuplets, the little queens of Callander, held court today after sharing the spotlight with the King and Queen at Toronto and prepared for their next big event—their fifth birthday anniversary, May 28.

It will be a big party but without the regal frills that accompanied their first excursion from the cosy Dafoe nursery that has been their home. The tots, wards of the King, won't be able to repeat the display of affection they showed yesterday for Their Majesties during the royal visit to Toronto.

During a private reception at the Ontario Legislature Building, the children, sparkling in their ankle-length white organdie dresses, hugged and kissed both the King and Queen. Queen Elizabeth said the children were among the "most beautiful I have ever seen." The Quints called Her Majesty "La belle Reine."

Right At Home

The children made themselves right at home with Their Majesties and chatted away to beat the band, speaking so quickly at times the Queen "couldn't get a word in," Dr. A. R. Dafoe, their physician, said afterward.

They bundled five bouquets into the Queen's arms and handed her a set of five pictures. The Queen bent down to examine the gift and they threw their arms around her, hugging and kissing. The King enjoyed it immensely, and beamed when he received the Quint embraces.

When the reception was over the children were taken across the floor of the House filled with 1,500 guests. Here the children, like veteran actresses, tossed kisses to the crowd and skipped and jumped.

The children were presented with their parents, Oliva and Elzire, to Prime Minister King. They returned to the train that carried them from Callander, "The Quintland Special" accompanied by Nurses Mollie O'Shaughnessy, Louise Corriveau and Gaetabe Vezina.

Schools Closed Here Today

Owing to the fact that schools in many centres were remaining closed from Friday until Thursday owing to the number of royal and patriotic events of Monday, when a civic holiday was observed and on Wednesday which will be Victoria Day, the decision of the Board of Education of Belleville was announced on the return trip by train from Kingston, which was attended by one thousand scholars of Belleville, that there would be a holiday on Tuesday as well as on Wednesday. This news reached most of the scholars, who had not gone to Kingston, and so today only a few found their way to school, and these then learned that this was a holiday for Belleville scholars.

In other parts of Ontario schools are open.

QUINTE APPLES PUT ON ROYAL TRAIN

Canadian apples, grown in the fertile valleys of the Bay of Quinte district, were taken aboard the Royal Train at Belleville when Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth, welcomed their subjects on Sunday evening. Two large barrels of the choicest Canadian apples were removed from the station baggage room and placed in the baggage car of the Royal Train for consumption by Their Gracious Majesties while touring Canada.

Former Tweed Student Given $750 Alexander Scholarship

Herbert "Buck" Leal of McMaster University to Study in Europe

A FINE ATHLETE

Tweed, May 23—Mr. Herbert "Buck" Leal, third year student at McMaster University, Hamilton has been awarded the Sir Douglas Alexander Scholarship, valued at $750 for general proficiency in French, German, English and History. This scholarship is awarded to a third year student to enable him to study in Europe during the three months' vacation between his third and fourth years. Travel in Europe will include Italy, Germany, France, Norway and the British Isles, with a six weeks' course at the Sorbonne in Paris or a summer school in Geneva.

The Alexander Scholarship is awarded not only for academic proficiency but also for evidences of leadership, and to a certain degree athletic prowess. In all three of these departments Herbert Leal has been outstanding.

In addition to this singal honor Mr. Leal has received what amounts in reality to an official nomination from McMaster University to compete for the Cecil Rhodes' Scholarship in his fourth year. Only three of these scholarships are given annually in the Dominion of Canada. Should he be successful in winning this scholarship which has a value of $2000 annually, Mr. Leal will attend Oxford University for two years with the option of a third year.

Herb Leal is a graduate of Tweed Consolidated and High Schools and his local academic career has been marked by a series of medals and scholarships; but, in spite of all the honours that have come to him, he is still "Buck Leal" to all his friends, who wish him every success.

The "Boys" at Christie Street Give Queen a Purse

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—The "boys" at Toronto's Christie Street military hospital presented Their Queen yesterday with a beaded purse made in a hurry by a "couple of the fellows."

So surprised was Queen Elizabeth when a veteran who had been presented offered her the bag, that she looked at it for a moment, smiled and turned to King George.

"Isn't it beautiful," her Majesty said. "How lovely."

"Who made it?" she asked Sergeant H. Cortman, one of five veterans chosen by the patients to meet the King and Queen during a short visit to the institution.

Cortmau told the Queen a "couple of the fellows" had done it. P. Caraher of the Queen's 16th Field Lancers and Sapper G. G. Love of the Second Canadian Engineers had decided when the Royal visit to the hospital was announced a little while ago that the "boys" should show their appreciation somehow. They did a quick but thorough job and the purse was offered on behalf of the patients.

The King and Queen, near the end of a busy day, extended a scheduled two-minute visit at least 20 and shook hands with many more than the five veterans elected to see them.

FEAR NATIONAL REGISTER

Melbourne, May 23 (CP-Reuters)—The executive council of the Australian Council of Trade Unions today decided to organise a boycott of the government's national register questionnaire. The council expressed fear that the National Register Plan might lead to industrial and military conscription of Australian workers.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw, May 22.—Rev. F. D. Allnutt, District Secretary British and Foreign Bible Society of Toronto addressed the meeting of the local organization held in Springbrook United Church on Thursday evening and showed several reels of moving pictures which were both interesting and educational.

The meeting was presided over by Canon W. G. Swayne of Bonarlaw. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Rev. A. W. Harding of Springbrook; secretary - treasurer, Mrs. H. Mumby of Springbrook.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Rev. Mr. Allnutt for his splendid address and moving pictures.

The president and secretary were named as a committee to select collectors who will soon solicit contributions for the Bible Society. All present were urged to make their donation as liberal as possible in view of the fact that they were not asked for anything last year.

Mrs. T. H. McKeown presided at the organ for the opening and closing hymns and the National Anthem.

On Wednesday evening the following members of Springbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 429 attended the special meeting and banquet held at Madoc when the Grand Master of Grand Lodge of Ontario, Bro. Dr. Hall of Little Britain was guest speaker and presented a number of veteran's jewels to members of Madoc Lodge, viz. Noble Grand J. M. Barlow, Past Grands W. J. Barlow, G. S. Eastwood, M. R. Neal, H. Mumby, Clayton Burkitt and J. P. Baker, Bros. Jas. McComb, Charles Lough, Chris Burkitt, C. P. Lloyd, Charles Burkitt.

Past Grand W. J. Barlow, who has been elected as the District Deputy Grand Master of this District for the ensuing year, replied to the toast to the visiting brethren.

Roslin

Roslin, May 22. — The monthly meeting of the W.A. of Roslin United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Wesley Copeland on Wednesday, May 3.

The president, Mrs. S. Carter, opened the meeting with a hymn followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Scripture reading was read by Miss Blanche Reid. A hymn was then sung. Mrs. Herrington led in prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary and approved. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand of $15.20. Mrs. S. Carter, Miss B. Reid and Mrs. H. Chisholm were appointed on the Cemetery Committee and plans are to be made to improve the cemetery. A collection was taken (50 cents). A hymn was sung and the meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

The hostess and her assistants served a delicious lunch and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

Mother's Day program was observed in the United Church on Sunday last. The pulpit was decorated with lovely flowers. During the service there were two baptisms. Mr. and Mrs. F. Howes' little daughter Margaret Evelyn and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Abbott's little son Arnold Richard.

The executive of the Roslin W. I. met at the home of the president, Mrs. W. White, on Tuesday evening and programs were planned for next year's meetings.

Rev. P. C. Beazer attended Ontario Diocese Synod in Kingston on May 16.

Frankford

Frankford—Mr. W. Todd of the H.E.P.C. staff has been moved to the Healey Falls plant.

On Thursday evening the members of the Bridge Club were entertained by Miss Ruby Snider in her home at Massassaga.

Mr. Ernie Carter returned home last week from the Belleville General Hospital where he underwent an operation. Mr. Carter is progressing favorably.

Mr. W. J. Bryant has moved to the house next to Trinity Church.

Mr. J. M. Dafoe has purchased the W. A. Ketcheson block on Trent Street and will conduct his store there in the near future.

The Women's Missionary Society held its May meeting at the home of Mrs. W. H. Rose on Thursday afternoon.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. P. E. Bonisteel. Minutes were read by Mrs. G. W. Dickson. Mrs. H. J. Madill presented the treasurer's report. Prayers were offered by Mrs. Lane, Mrs. W. H. Rose and Mrs. Bonisteel. This year being the 50th. anniversary of the founding of the Frankford Branch of the W.M.S. it was decided to hold a supper in June, to which all the societies in the district will be invited to help commemorate the event. At the close refreshments were served by Mrs. Rose, assisted by Mrs. Lane and Mrs. C. W. Scott.

Citizens of Frankford will observe Monday, May 22nd. as a holiday instead of Wednesday, May 24th.

The store fronts and windows of the local stores are being decorated with flags and bunting in honor of the Royal visit.

A number of United Church members attended the Christian Stewardship meeting held in Brighton United Church on Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Arnott have moved into the house owned by Mrs. Kehoe across the river.

Mr. Carman Pettit of Rochester, N.Y., spent the week-end in town.

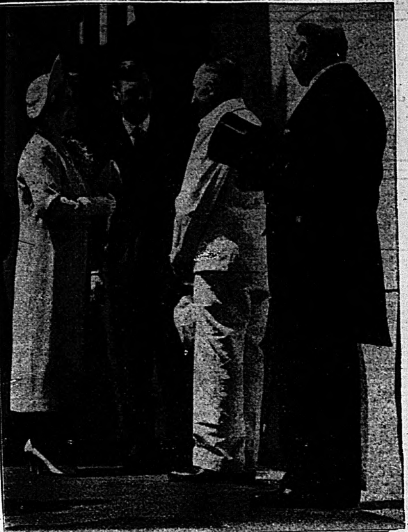
COLOR PRESENTATION

Escorted by Brigadier Alexander the Queen arrives to present the color to the Toronto Scottish.



After laying the cornerstone of the new Supreme Court building in Ottawa, the Queen, accompanied by the King, spent many minutes talking to the workmen who have been employed in the construction project. The workman talking to Their Majesties here is George Reid. At the right is Canada's Prime Minister.

Although he captured 56 enemy prisoners single-handed during the world war, and was awarded the coveted Victoria Cross, Corporal Filip Konawal had a far greater thrill at Ottawa when the King, smiling beneath his huge bearskin, shook his hand at Ottawa on May 20.

The Queen Recognizes Veteran She Had Seen 13 Years Ago in India

Ottawa, May 23.—The Queen on Sunday recognized a war veteran she had seen in hospital at Delhi, India, thirteen years ago.

Leslie Holden, once a drummer in the Black Watch and now a farm hand at Kemptville, Ont., did his chores before dawn and rode forty miles on his bicycle to take his place among comrade veterans at the unveiling of the national war memorial.

As their Majesties passed, the Queen stopped in front of him and treated him to her dazzling smile.

"Were you not in India?" inquired the Queen.

Drummer Holden said he was too dumbfounded for a moment to speak. "Yes, ma'am," he finally gulped. "I was in the second battalion, Black Watch, and you shook hands with me thirteen years ago in Delhi as I lay in bed in hospital."

"I remember," nodded the Queen. "Did you get over your operation?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the veteran.

"Do you recognise this?" said her Majesty, drawing his attention to a brooch on the left shoulder of her white coat. It was a replica of a Black Watch badge, set in diamonds and emeralds.

"Yes, I recognised it right away," said Holden. "It's the brooch the second battalion gave you when you visited Delhi."

Her Majesty held out her hand. Tears in his eyes, Holden clasped her hand for a moment in both of his.

"She's lovely, isn't she?" he said afterward. "She hasn't changed a bit in thirteen years."

W.C.T.U.

The W.C.T.U. meeting held in the Ladies' Parlour of Bridge St., United Church on Friday p.m. was a decided success in point of numbers as well as enthusiasm. The President Mrs. J. Moore, had put forth special effort in the arrangement of the following program for this visitors' meeting.

Opening prayer—Mrs. Coulson.

Secretary's report — Mrs. N. Farley.

Treasurer's report — Miss M. Reeves.

Appointment of delegates to Convention Mrs. Farley and Mrs. A. Sharpe.

With Mrs. Barlow as pianist the following hymns were sung "A Call to Loyal Soldiers"; "Our Stainless Flag" and Give to the Winds Thy Years".

Devotional—Mrs. Sweetman.

Receiving her inspiration from the many royal broadcasts heard today over radio she spoke of that important Bible broadcast from the Mount of Olives "The Sermon on the Mount". She said in closing "Just Because we Pray to God who notes even the smallest bird, is no reason why we should not throw a few rocks at the enemies of these small birds and the same she said applies to our protection of youth against their enemy, the liquor traffic".

Duett, Mrs. H. Hill and Mrs. Moore "In the Garden with Jesus".

Address, Mrs. (Major) Alderman Her theme was "Saved to Serve". Those who know the value of sermons, drawn from first hand personal contact with sin and suffering will be able to measure the value of Mrs. Alderman's practical address.

Solo—Miss Phylis May sang "There were ninety and nine" as a grand climax to the splendid program.

Mrs. Moore called for a standing vote of thanks for all assisting. Then an invitation was accepted from Victoria Baptist Church ladies for a parlor meeting in June.

While tea was being prepared the clip sheet was read.

Mrs. G. Sharp and Mrs. Scantlebury poured tea while the following women served, Mrs. Boyd, Miss Reeves, Mrs. Maguire, Mrs. Bell, Mrs. Farley, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Gartley, Mrs. Farnsworth, and Mrs. Moore visited with the guests.

VISCOUNT HALIFAX

General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, probably Generalissimo of French and British Land Forces in any major war, was said to have been thrown in favor of early conclusion of a pact.

Firmly Convinced

Lord Halifax talks in Geneva with the Russian delegate, Ivan Maisky, Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet of France and the Polish, Turkish and Rumanian delegates were understood to have convinced him that the projected three-power combination should be concluded as quickly as possible.

(Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons has insisted that Britain always had advocated "reciprocity" in the mutual aid negotiations, but that "misunderstanding" had kept "sort of a veil or wall" between Russia and Britain.)

Informed persons said conversations which Lord Halifax began in Paris Saturday had prompted a decision to present the plan for a comprehensive three-power combination to the Cabinet as the only possible way to obtain Russian support for the Anglo-French anti-aggression front.

Commissioner For Danzig

League of Nations officials announced after a meeting of the committtee charged with supervising affairs of Danzig it had been decided to send the League High Commissioner, Professor Charles Burkhardt De Reynold, back to the Free City'

Officials said the High Commissioner would be instructed to make a report on the Danzig situation. The committee includes France, Great Britain and Sweden.

De Reynold, a Swiss, has been absent from his post at Danzig and in Geneva since March 19. He has the power, on paper, to call for Polish troops to aid in keeping order in Danzig when he considers it necesary.

Poles were said to want him back in Danzig, where he could make such a request in case of trouble.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—At the opening of Toronto Exchange today the list took up some of the slack caused by New York's advance while Toronto was closed on Saturday and Monday. Gains were generally moderate and by noon the mining and the industrial index showed gains of .22 to .45. Due to the active selling of Anglo-Canadian at a loss of about 12 to 15 cents, the Western Oil index declined .15. Volume continued conservative and trade in the first hour was only 151,000 shares.

A group of the cheaper golds changed hands in sizeable volume. Straw Lake was active at a fractional gain to 6 3-4 cents. Augite was lower by 3 cents. Minor gains in the golds appeared for Lake Shore, Bralorne, Powell Rouyn, McKenzie, Little Long Lac and others.

The market was stronger for nickel and Noranda and Smelters and Waite Amulet lost some ground.

Steel, utility and beverage stocks were inclined upward and Walker's Common firmed a point. Along with Anglo-Canadian, Royalite, Prairie Royalties and Brown were a bit heavy.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 23 (AP)— Efforts to rally the stock market again today met with only feeble response.

The list slipped at the start, recovered mildly after an hour then shifted over a slightly mixed course. Fractional losses and gains were fairly well divided near the final hour.

Transfers were about 450,000 shares.

KING INTERVENES FOR ARRESTED MAN

Richard Heeley Broke Through Police Lines to Toss Letter in His Car

Toronto, May 23 —(CP)— The King, it was learned today, intervened on behalf of a man who threw a letter at the Royal car on its tour of Toronto and paved the way for his release from custody.

Richard Heeley, 40, who broke through police lines at University Avenue and Dundas Street West, to toss a letter in the direction of the King and Queen as they passed was arrested by Provincial Constable Alex Ferguson who jumped from his motorcycle and chased him.

When the King arrived at the Legislative Buildings he asked about the incident and was told the man was a war veteran who had tried unsuccessfully to join the King's Home Guard several years ago. The missive was a reply he had received rejecting his request.

Following a conference at police headquarters late last night, the man who had been held on an open charge was allowed to go. He told police he had a job to go to in Hamilton today. Hungry and downhearted, he had lived at a hostel according to police.

King Noticed Letter

The King noticed the letter flying through the air. He saw it light on the ground. His car was travelling upward of 20 miles an hour, trying to make up time lost at Woodbine race track. He looked back several times to see what was happening to the red bereted man with war veteran's medals whom he had noticed tossing the letter. It was the second such petition during the day.

The first of these was thrown on University at Wellington St. The letter landed in the Royal car and was later turned over to police, but they refused to discuss the case. They wouldn't admit or deny it happened. "It wasn't serious," said police officials. The King's chauffeur said later: "It was probably an old veteran's discharge papers which he wanted the King to see."

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 23—(CP)— Cattle trade was slow at mid-session on the Toronto Livestock Market today with prices steady on cows and bulls and unsettled on steers and heifers. The calf and sheep groups were steady while no price was set for hogs.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock branch were: cattle 3,220; calves 1,180; hogs 1,420; sheep and lambs 580.

Good butcher cows brought $4.75-$5.25 and common grades sold downward to $3.75. Canners and cutters sold between $2.50-$3.50. Butcher bulls made $4.75-$5.25 and bologna bulls brought $4.25-$4.75. A few lots of butcher steers and heifers traded at $6-$6.90. Fed calves ranged from $6.75-$8 and light stockers were $5.35-$6.

Choice veal calves were $8-$8.50 with a few tops at $9. Common grades sold downward to $4.

Previous close on off-truck bacon hogs was $8.35.

Spring lambs—sold by the pound—made $10.50-$13 cwt. One carload of western lambs was still unsold by early afternoon.

Sheep sold at $2-$4.50 cwt.

65,000 WORKERS NOW IN IDLENESS

Seven Plants of Briggs Manufacturing Company Closed Through Strike.

Detroit, May 23 (AP)—Approximately 65,000 auto workers were thrown into idleness today as a strike in seven plants of the Briggs Manufacturing Company caused widespread layoffs in the highly integrated motor industry.

Chrysler Corporation announced it would shut down 10 plants in Detroit, Newcastle, Ind., and Kokomo, Ind., and would be unable to operate any of its units here except Dodge trucks.

The spread of idleness resulted from the cutting off of automobile bodies which the Briggs Company supplies to a large part of the motor car industry.

Only 15,000 men were directly affected by the Briggs strike, which was called Monday by the C.I.O. United Auto Workers Union. The Chrysler shutdown, however, affected about 43,000 in Detroit and 3,400 in Indiana. In addition the Lincoln Division of The Ford Motor Co., which employs 5,000, curtailed operations.

James Dewey, Federal Labor conciliator, arrived here today.

ROYAL TRAIN ON WAY WEST

There Is Nip In Air, Remnants of Snow as the Train Rolls By.

(By R. K. Carnegie, Canadian Press Staff Writer).

Aboard Royal Pilot Train, enroute west, May 23 (CP)—The temperature was at freezing point today when the Royal train, carrying the King and Queen into the West, passed Ontario's famous cold spot, White River.

There was a nip in the air and remnants of snow on the ground when the 12-car special rolled through the rugged country where temperatures drop occasionally to 40 below zero in winter. The sky was heavily overcast but their was no rain.

White River was gaily decorated with flags and bunting and a large crowd cheered in the station. Hon. C. D. Rowe, Federal Minister of Transport, got aboard the Royal train there to accompany the Royal party to Port Arthur.

This is a country of magnificent distances. For miles the King and Queen saw no homes at all, no sign of habitation.

Then they saw, beside the tracks, a man and woman, waiting alone just to see the Royal train pass and to wave at Their Majesties.

This couple had evidently walked some distance from their home for no house showed on the skyline and the district was without a road.

Prime Minister And Mr. Hepburn Are Most Affable

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Those celebrated Liberals who are political enemies, Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario beamed amiably at each other yesterday under the influence of the Royal visit to Toronto.

While the King and Queen were awaited at Woodbine Park, they stood talking. After Their Majesties arrived, they walked together to their places in the rear of the Royal box. Political-minded bystanders could not resist the temptation to look away from the King and Queen to Mr. Mackenzie King and Mr. Hepburn.

When the seat next to the King was vacated, the Prime Minister moved down. After a moment, the King nodded assent to a question by the Prime Minister. Mr. Mackenzie King rose, returned to the rear of the box and motioned Mr. Hepburn to the seat next to the King. There Mr. Hepburn watched the running of the King's Plate.

Not long ago, when the Prime Minister announced his decision to accompany the Royal party on the entire tour, Mr. Hepburn commented, "cheap publicity."

PALESTINE PLAN CUTS PARTY LINES

To Place the Whole Case Before People — a Special Broadcast Ordered.

London, May 23—(AP)—Parliamentary observers express the opinion that while debate on the government's Palestine plan has cut party lines the government will muster sufficient votes today in the House of Commons for approval.

The plan, opposed by Jews on the ground it provides for eventual creationg of a self-governing state with Arabs in a majority through limitation of Jewish immigration ,was made public last Wednesday. Two days of debate on it started yesterday in the Commons.

The cases for the government and its opponents were to be placed before the public in a broadcast debate between Malcolm MacDonald and Sir Thomas Inskip, Secretaries for Colonies and Dominions, on one side, and Tom Williams, speaking for Labor, and David Lloyd George, for the Liberals, on the other.

Sidelights of Royal Visit

the King and Queen visited here yesterday. Three new-born boys were named George in honor of the King.

Toronto, May 23 —(CP)— The carillon on the Tower of Remembrance at the University of Toronto played Scottish airs while the King and Queen sat within hearing yesterday. Among the melodies was "Annie Laurie" and "Will Ye Nae Come Back Again."

Victoria, May 23—(CP)—Victoria expects an influx of 100,000 visitors from the United States during the visit of the King and Queen May 30. One American ferryboat company is reported to have sold out four trips to 6,000 persons from Seattle.

Edmonton, May 23 (CP—Fourteen nursing sisters who saw service overseas during the Great War will be among 374 qualified First Aid workers posted on the royal procession route here June 2, Dr. H. K. GGroff of the Royal Visit Committee announced last night.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, May 23 (Special)—Insofar as the great majority of Trenton people are concerned the Royal visit is complete. A huge crowd waited for several hours at and near Trenton Junction and station on Sunday evening to see the Royal train enroute from Kingston to Toronto via Brighton, where they were to change trains and Cobourg, where Their Majesties were expected to spend the night; saw only a few glowing windows in long blue coaches that flashed past them and was gone into the distance almost before most of the spectators realized, that the object of their long wait had come and gone.

Other of the local citizens drove to Belleville, where the Royal train made a brief halt, and to Brighton, where the change of trains was to be made and where, incidentally, one lady became a casualty, when she fell to the ground falling with such force as to break her leg.

However those who had by far the best view of the Royal couple were those, who went to Kingston to see them. By private car, by bus, by truck, by special trains hundreds of local citizens were represented in Ontario's oldest city to welcome Their Majesties, and in the Limestone City they found a marvellous opportunity to both see and hear the King and the Queen to wonderful advantage. Whether owing to the change of schedule which robbed Kingston of an all-day visit or whether as a result of the somewhat uncertain weather the crowds that were expected to throng Kingston streets were very much diminished, and almost anywhere along the Royal route spectators had wonderful opportunities to witness the Royal procession amid unparalleled surroundings. Troops brought into Kingston by special trains from all points of Military District No. 3 lined miles of streets, and as they stood stiffly at the salute the dozen or more cars bearing the Royal parties slid easily and quietly along while the thousands roared a welcome.

Many From Trenton

From Trenton many groups were represented, as well as the hundreds of private citizens, who made the trip. School children, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, other clubs, and adult groups were seen at vantage points along the way, and in the early afternoon over seventy officers and men of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment boarded a special train at the lower C.N.R. station and were whisked off to Kingston along with another three companies of the battalion, two of which came up from Picton, two getting aboard here, and one in Belleville. The same train was increased in Belleville with other coaches carrying troops from points west including Peterboro, Lindsay, Omemee, Port Hope, Cobourg, Campbellford, and other centres and numbered some twenty cars when complete.

One unfortunate member of "B" Coy. from Madoc became an absentee from the Royal welcome when he dropped his hat out a window as the train stopped in Napanee and going back for it failed to catch up as the train began to move.

Arriving in Kingston at six o'clock the troops were detrained and given a half hour in which to eat a hot meal served in the open from cook tents placed near the railroad spur. Later they marched off for their place on King Street, the band leading, and arriving there extended along both sides of the street, some six or seven paces separating the men, until they had lined more than a half mile of the Royal route.

Passing Brief

The passing of the Royal entourage was in itself very brief. Situated along the waterfront near the western end of the route the officers of the regiment could look up a gradual slope to see a distant corner around which the procession would come, and when the sound of cheering in the distance announced the coming of Their Majesties, the crowd shifted uneasily to get better vantage points.

Presently along came a single car with a red light on the front driven by a single policeman. A half mile behind him came the motorcycle escort a group of almost twenty traffic officers and members of the permanent force troops at Kingston, riding in pairs close to the opposite curbs, and making quite a display as they roared past in the gathering dusk, their headlights flaming. Another gap, then almost a minute later, cheering at the upper end of the route and around the corner came the Royal car bearing Their Majesties, who smiled and bowed graciously as they swept along. Behind came seven or eight cars bearing members of the party, Mr. Mackenzie King and his lady, two of the Ladies-in-Waiting, an equerry or two, several scarlet-coated mounties, and police officers and radio men.

All over in less than two minutes, and the troops relaxed for a brief smoke, then moved off to their train again where they were served with box lunches. Unfortunately for those who expected to get home early, the troop train remained for almost four hours after the procession was over before it was moved out to the main line. Local officers and men reached Trenton at half-past-three o'clock on Monday morning, and there was plenty of evidence in tired faces and aching feet that the day had been a long one.

Coal Barge in

The collier Henry C. Daryaw docked at the B. W. Powers wharf above the bridge late Saturday night and was unloading her cargo of coal on Monday. The Daryaw is the first large steamer of the season to enter the local port, although the Glen Allen has been seen locally several times.

Quite a large proportion of Trentonians were in Toronto on Monday many taking advantage of special bargain fares offered by the railroads to see Their Majesties, many others attending the running of the King's Plate classic at the Woodbine.

Officers of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment will gather in Picton armoury on Friday evening for a canvas model tactical exercise which will be marked by an officer from military headquarters in Kingston. The exercise is being prepared by Majors H. D. Graham of Trenton and Jas. Inrig of Picton.

Yourex Billiards and Graham's Garage put on the best softball show of the season on Friday evening when they staged a really excellent early season performance that saw Graham's top their old rivals 5-3 and take the league leadership by a good margin. Some really fine plays were provided, and neither team scored until the fifth when a momentary weakness by Niddery, hurling for Yourex, saw the Garagemen pound out a barrage of safe hits to net them their five runs. Yourex came back in their half for one tally, and two more in the next, but could not quite break the lead that the Grahamites had taken.

Town's Gala Dress For Royal Visit Damaged by Storm

Schreiber's Inhabitants Have Little Time to Repair Damage Before the King and Queen Arrive.

Schreiber, Ont., May 23 (CP)— The Royal Train bearing King George and Queen Elizabeth westward, arrived here for a 10-minute stop at 2.45 p.m. E.D.T., 20 minutes behind schedule.

Schreiber, Ont., May 23 (CP) — Schreiber's residents, not the least dismayed by an overnight rain that tore down decorations, pitched in early today to restore the town's gala appearance for the visit of the King and Queen here this afternoon.

They had a little extra time to make new banners and flags, the Royal train, originally scheduled to arrive at 2:25 E.D.T., was running about 15 minutes late.

A 45-mile-an-hour wind swept through this North-western Ontario community, two miles north of Lake Superior, and ripped flags and buntings, tearing down a huge arch of evergreens surrounding a message of welcome.

Spirit of Welcome.

But the damages of the storm seemed only a slight hindrance to the railway town's excited 1,085 residents, who have primped for the Royal visit a long time and weren't going to let a little thing like a heavy wind disturb them.

Bright sunshine had replaced the fog and rain that hung over Schreiber all day yesterday. A crisp wind off Lake Superior brought cooler weather and early today the temperature stood at 40 above.

Special precautions were taken on the railway as the Royal train headed west. Section-hands patrolled the track both sides of Schreiber.

Schreiber's women and children and the railway hands who dressed up as never before were fully prepared to make the most of the ten minutes the train was scheduled to stap. When the storm's damages had been repaired, the town started a trek to the gaily-decorated station.

cheerful and smiling.

Their Majesties stayed 45 minutes over their scheduled time to see everything and let everybody see them, finally getting away for the West at 7.45 E.D.T.

Nine Engagements

During their stay of nine hours and 15 minutes in Toronto, King George and Queen Elizabeth crowded in nine engagements, drove 32 miles through Toronto streets to the acclaim of 1,500,000 persons and, away from public view were hugged and kissed by the Dionne quintuplets.

The quints were won over completely by the smiles and intimate chat of the King and Queen. The youngsters' expression of affection was as spontaneous as their romp a few minutes later through the legislative chambers where they panicked 1,500 specially invited guests for a royal reception.

The Queen made her first formal appearance unaccompanied by the King during the tour. Dressed in the blue ensemble that she wore throughout the crowded day, Her Majesty presented new colors to the Toronto Scottish Regiment on the north campus of the University of Toronto.

Presented Colors

At this colorful military ceremony the Queen made her second and last scheduled public address of the Canadian visit when as Colonel-in-Chief of the Regiment, she expressed her pleasure at being able personally to present the "symbol of the loyalty and devotion to duty which marked the services of this gallant regiment in the last war."

After luncheon as guests of the Lieutenant-Governor, the King and Queen drove to Riverdale Park where they were acclaimed by 50,000 children and as many adults, and then went to Woodbine race track for what to thousands more was the big public event of the day.

There they witnessed the running of the King's Plate and expressed admiration at the winning effort of Archworth, owned by George McCullach, publisher of The Toronto Globe and Mail. His Majesty offered his personal congratulations in presenting to Mr. McCullagn the King's 50 guineas.

Enjoyed Tea

The round of official functions continued when the King and Queen were driven back to the Legislature Buildings—again acclaimed by the street throngs—where they had tea with the Lieutenant-Governor and a small party.

Before leaving for the royal train at Union Station, the King and Queen visited Christie Street Hospital where they talked with injured war veterans and then paid another visit to a gathering of 50,000 children at the Canadian National Exhibition Park.

Thousands were grouped about the station when Their Majesties, waving and smiling, went to the train for their first full night of travel.

Long after their departure the city celebrated the visit. Military bands played and there were fireworks displays in the parks. On a section of Coxwell Avenue in the east end of the city, a street dance was held.

side of the Great Lakes Divide.

Their Majesties awakened to find themselves moving through the heavily-wooded, big-rock country that gave Paul Bunyan, legendary figure of the woods and logging camps, to the world of fiction.

Moving To Chapleau

This morning the train passed through Chapleau, source of many a yarn of Bunyan, the giant lumberjack who—the stories say—planted all the trees in the North Country. At the camp-night entertainments they tell of Paul and his big blue ox, Babe, which measured 42 axe handles and a plug of chewing tobacco between the horns.

Bunyan, it is said, was drawn from life—from the life of a Paul Bunyan, bearded and bellicose, who raged among the Queen's troops in the Northwest Rebellion. From that picturesque figure, the smoke of tobacco pipes and the fancies of men far from home have built Paul into the frame of an inventor, an orator and an industrialist whose feats surpassed those of Hercules.

These men who tell of Bunyan and his ox, these restless pliers of the north-country trades, were among the hundreds who flocked to little stations along the Canadian Pacific Railway main line today, anxious for a brief glimpse of Their Majesties. All last night little groups could be seen about the stations as the lean silver and blue palace sped north and west. They were content with only the knowledge that the King and Queen had passed through.

Take On Fresh Fish

The train stopped to take on fresh fish at Chapleau for Their Majesties' breakfast, a meal planned to coincide with the run along the White River. The flash of [illegible] streams in the sunlight and the austere beauty of tall hills and trees were to present new vistas in the adventure-panorama that is the royal tour.

The King and Queen took keen delight last evening in the beauties of the Muskoka Lakes district, as their train raced through the lake-dotted country towards new wonders. As darkness fell they turned to some of the many books in their train library.

For the first time in the week since they arrived at Quebec, Their Majesties were able to sit back and relax for more than a few minutes. Until now their tour has been a long succession of public functions.

Stops at communities along Lake Superior's shore, notably at Schreiber, midway between Sudbury and Port Arthur, lay ahead today. But the Schreiber stop will be for only 10 minutes and others will be shorter, and at each one there will be an almost complete lack of formality.

To Visit Lakehead Cities

Late today the train will pull into Port Arthur and for an hour and a half Their Majesties will be shown the twin lakehead cities of Port Arthur and Port William, hub of the lumbering, shipping and grain elevator industries of Central Canada.

The tremendous interest the royal visit has aroused, was exhibited nowhere so strongly in the east as at Sudbury early today. There, at 1.30 a.m., 8,000 persons stood in silence while the train rolled through, allowing the King and Queen to get much-needed sleep. No stop was scheduled at Sudbury, but district residents lined the tracks hours before the train was due anyway.

REVIEWING HER REGIMENT

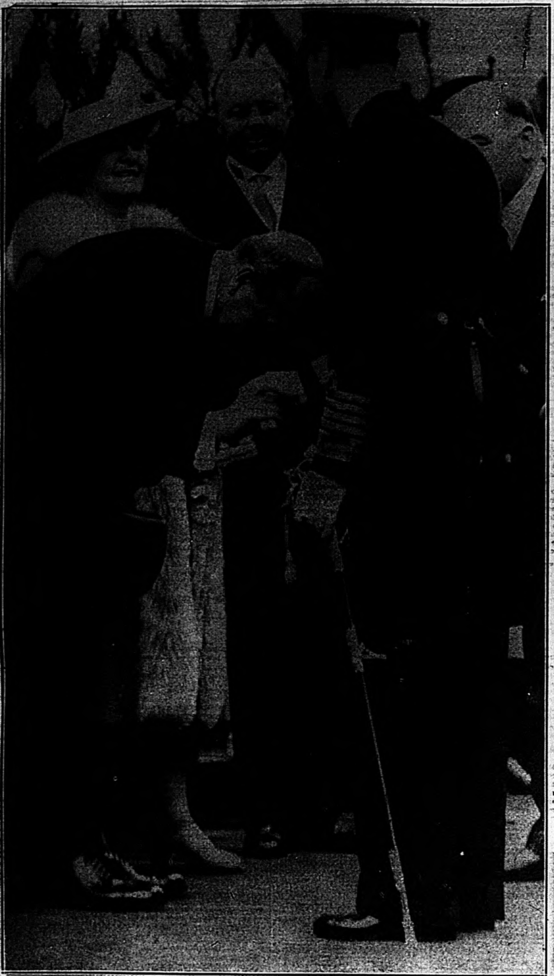
Pipes skirled until the prevailing Scotch mist almost seemed in order as Queen Elizabeth presented the colors to her regiment, the Toronto Scottish. The colorful ceremony took place on the north campus of the University of Toronto. The Queen is seen passing the regiment, whose files are a model of straightness, with the district officer commanding at her side, his bayonet raised at the salute. After the presentation, Her Majesty proceeded with the King to luncheon at Hart House. The Queen is colonel-in-chief of the Toronto Scottish, because of its affiliation with the London Scottish, territorial unit of the Gordons, the famous Black Watch.

THE KING RETURNS TORONTO'S SALUTE

Through living lanes of loyalty, through masses of crowding, shouting, cheering people, the King and Queen made a triumphal progress through downtown Toronto to the city hall. City hall square never held such a crowd as greeted with roars of cheering the arrival of the King and Queen. The whole area was a vast sea of faces, with a lane between the walls of humanity for the royal car to pass through. The King returns Toronto's ovation with a salute. The Queen is at his side.

While a great crowd stands in hushed reverence, His Majesty the King places a wreath upon the Canadian War Memorial in Ottawa a few minutes after unveiling the stone and bronze monument to the nation's war dead. The ceremony was the climax of the royal visit to Ottawa.

LIEUTENANT - GOVERNOR BOWS TO THE KING



With almost every new point reached in the royal tour, a new line of Canadian history is written. May 22 saw the King's representative in Ontario, Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, welcome the monarch governor and Canada's Governor-General has already greeted them. Beside Mr. Matthews, as he bows low over the King's hand, is Mrs. Matthews, and Premier Hepburn who with his wife Mayor Ralph Day and Mrs. Day were also in the welcoming party at North Toronto station.

With the rays of a warm morning sun on a white and red back droj providing a matchless setting for her regal self, the Queen officially laid the cornerstone of the new Supreme Court building at Ottawa on the King's birthday. It was the first Canadian ceremony at which she officiated. The Queen laid the cornerstone below a towering mass of steel. The new building, to cost nearly $4,000,000, is about six months away from completion. It will house the Supreme Court as well as two exchequer courts. It will be reached via wide monumental steps which are not duplicated elsewhere in Canada. Heh Majesty spoke to the immense throng through a specially-rigged public address system for nearly seven minutes. She was perfectly poised, nad spoke so clearly her voice carried far up the mall. Watching the ceremony were the King and His Prime Minister, Mackenzie King.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATIONS

QUEEN MARY

She drove away in another automobile which had been summoned. An official at Marlborough House, the Queen's official residence, said "we are informed that her Majesty is not hurt."

The eye-witness said the Queen appeared to have recovered greatly "when she left the doctor's house and was quite calm."

Cheers of Crowd Acknowledged

"She acknowledged the relieved cheers of a crowd who heard of the accident and had been making anxious inquiries as to whether she had been badly hurt."

He said the Queen "looked very white and shaken, but maintained her composure wonderfully," when she was assisted to the doctor's office.

"After a short time another royal car arrived and Queen Mary with a lady-in-waiting who also had been badly shaken, was driven away."

Onlookers who saw her Majesty arrive at Marlborough House a short time after the accident said "she seemed perfectly calm and all right."

Returns To Her Apartment.

Queen Mary retired to her private apartment immediately upon reaching Marlborough House, where she was attended by her doctor.

It was announced an official statement about her condition would be issued later.

Oscar Humphrey, who has been the Queen's chauffeur since the death of King George V, was reported suffering from shock. The Queen Mother was authoritatively reported "bruised and badly shaken" but otherwise unhurt.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

CAT MOTHERS BABY MINK

North Stoningham, Conn., May 23—(AP)—A cat saved $150 for Harold McLaughlin, mink farmer. A mother mink abandoned three young and they were about to die when the cat, misnamed "Elmer," showed an interest in the waifs. Mrs. McLaughlin turned them over to Elmer, who immediately began nursing them. A mature mink's pelt, McLaughlin said, is worth at least $50.

BEE STINGS FATAL

Orrville, O., May 23 —(AP) — Mowing weeds near a hive, Christian Conrad, 79, was attacked by a swarm of bees and stung 50 times. He died a half hour later.

LARG BOWL CRASHES THRU WINDOW AFTER A CAT

Batchawana, Ont., May 23—(CP)—A Great Horned Owl crashed through the glass of a home here and picked up the family cat Marcus. "Kill him, mother, he's got my cat," screamed five-year-old Sally Robinson. Mrs. Robinson, frightened and surprised, killed the bold bird with a piece of firewood. Marcus was unhurt and a pair of owl wings with a 60-inch spread adorn the Robinson wall.

MAY SUSPEND AIR PAGEANT

London, May 23—(AP)—The Air Ministry was reported today to be considering suspending its annual air pageant because of the danger of revealing defence secrets. An air force officer challenged a German assistant attache making notes at Heston during this year's pageant last Saturday, but allowed him to continue when identity was established, since an embassy official enjoys diplomatic immunity."

MAN NEVER HAD CHRISTIAN NAME

Chicago, May 23 —(AP)— Dr. Gatewood, 51, the man who never could find a first name that pleased him, died last night. At his birth his parents decided to let him choose a name when he grew old enough to make a choice.

He never took a name. During the war army officials objected to issuing a commission to "Dr. Gatewood."

ATLANTIC AIR SERVICE INAUGURATED

Southampton, England, May 23—(AP)—The flying boat Yankee Clipper, inaugurating Transatlantic air service, landed at Southampton at 12:45 a.m. (7:45 a.m. EDT) today from Marseille, where she had taken off at 7:50 a.m. (2:50 a.m. EDT). The Clipper left New York Saturday.

Birch Bark Canoe Gift to Queen

White River, Ont., May 23 (C)—A little birch-bark canoe, gaily colored and filled with trailing arbutus, a tiny white flower gathered from the surrounding bush country, was presented to the Queen today during a 40-minute stop of the Royal train here.

"I'll take this canoe home to my children," said her Majesty, thanking eight-year-old Joyce Adams for the gift.

Scores of Indians lent a primitive touch to the reception for the King and Queen. They joined prospectors, fishermen and trappers who helped the 500 White River citizens welcome the King and Queen to Ontario's northwest.

Indians were here from nearby Mobert. Scores of white residents came to the railway settlement from Chapleau, Nicholson, Dalton, Franz, Amyot, Heron Bay and Coldwell.

White River has the reputation of being Canada's coldest point, temperatures falling 40 degrees below zero and more in mid-winter. Today the temperature was at freezing.

The Royal train, greeted with a great cheer from the crowd at the station, was 25 minutes behind schedule. It arrived here at 10:30 a.m. E.D.T. and left for the west at 11:30.

THEIR MAJESTIES ARRIVE IN STATE FOR VISIT TO THE CAPITAL

With smiles on their faces King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth are pictured as they drove in a state landau through the streets of Ottawa, Ont., a few minutes after their arrival in the Dominion capital. One of the highlights of the visit of the King and Queen to Ottawa, was the garden party at Rideau Hall, residence of the Governor-General of Canada. Their Majesties, with the Queen leading, are pictured arriving to meet their guests at the brilliant gathering.

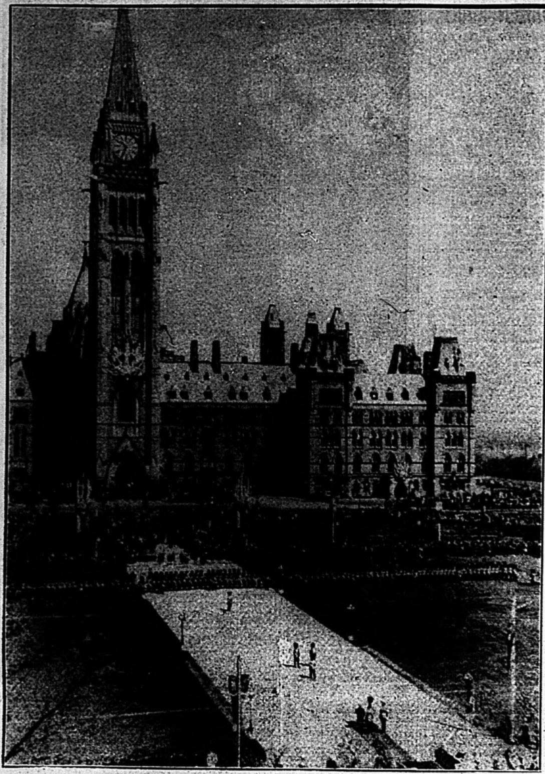
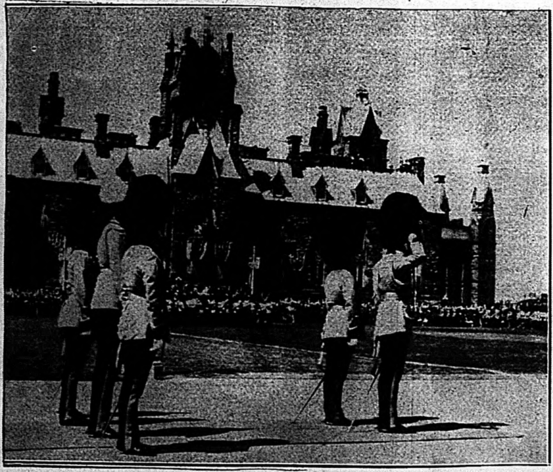
TROOPING THE COLOR



The photographer who caught this striking study of the trooping of the color at Ottawa looked down on the capital city's Parliament Buildings. The Queen, watching from the east block, had a similar view, seeing the noble arch of the peace tower. Across the broad white walk leading up to it march in flawless formation a regiment of Grenadier Guards, while other detachments are dotted about the lawn.

"POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE"



With all the pomp and color of the ceremony as carried out in the "Old Country," but in an even more beautiful setting, the traditional trooping the color on the King's birthday was carried out at Parliament Hill, Ottawa. The spectacle, seen outside London for the first time, was witnessed by the Queen from a window in the east block of the Parliament Buildings. Clad in the colorful uniform of a colonel-in-chief of the Grenadier Guards, the King salutes. He was not mounted, as is usual for the ceremony.

Chief of German Army Views Italy's Mechanized Might

General Walter Brauchitsch, chief of the German army, CENTRE, is seen here as he watched a recent parade of Italy's armed might from the reviewing stand in Rome, during a visit to Premier Mussolini. The mechanized units of the Italian army were featured for the benefit of the officer from the other end of the axis. Seen also on the stand are King Victor Emmanuel, LEFT, his Queen, and Premier Mussolini, who afterwards made a speech of a milder than usual nature in which he said that no present European problem was worth a war.

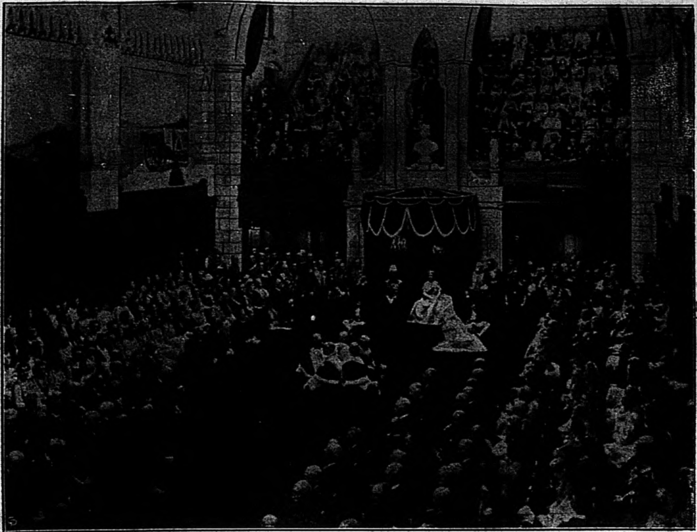
History is Made as King Gives Royal Assent to Bills in Canadian Senate



Hansard never recorded such a moment as this among all the great moments in Canadian parliamentary history. Seated on the twin thrones in the Senate's Red Chamber are the King and Queen of England, and her overseas dominions, now become for the first time in history, in a very real sense, King and Queen of Canada. Royal assent to bills passed at the last sitting of parliament, usually given by the governor-general, was received from His Majesty, another of the many history-making incidents that follow hard on the heels of each other during the royal tour of the dominion.

WINNIPEG WELCOMES ROYALTY AS RAIN FALLS

Twenty-Six of 59 Men on Submarine Feared Dead

Drop Rescue Bell To Hook on Sub By Deep-Sea Divers

Seven Minutes Required to Lower Chamber to Bottom of Ocean on Which Sub is Resting

ACCOUNT FOR 33

Rescue Work Considerably Aided by the Fact Sea is Perfectly Calm in Vicinity of Submarine

Portsmouth, N.H., May 24 (AP)—A rescue chamber, capable of carrying eight men to freedom, was lowered at 11.40 a.m. E.D.T. today to the sunken submarine Squalus, in which 59 men have been trapped since yesterday under 240 feet of water.

The brief message flashed from the submarine rescue ship Falcon, anchored 15 miles off this port, gave indication that an hour or more would be required to lower the rescue bell, attach it to the crippled Squalus and then raise it into the free air once more.

Nearly an hour and a half elapsed between the time a diver first reached the deck of the sunken submarine at 10.22 a.m., and the actual lowering of the huge bell from the deck of the Falcon.

Not Sure of Number

No one knew for sure what tale the first men to be saved could tell, but one high authority on the surface already had expressed fear that 26 of the 59 men aboard the sunken craft already were dead.

The rescue bell contains a cylindrical chamber at the bottom of which there is a rubber suction gasket which fits against a wide skirt on the submarines hatch. Within the bell is a watertight "rescue" hatch, a few feet above the bottom of the bell itself.

By means of a "wire rope" carried on a windlass inside the bell it can be lowered to a position over a sunken craft and guided to the submarine's hatch by divers.

Water Expelled

Inside the bottom of the bell are turnbuckles which hook into "cat-eyes" welded on the submarine's skirt. These can be taken up tight by pressing the rubber gasket of the bell firmly against the submarine's skirt. The water is then expelled by pumps from the lower hatch of the bell. Hatches are then opened and about eight men can be squeezed from the submarine into the bell.

The submarine's hatch and the lower hatch of the bell then can be closed and the bell, by operation of the windlass on the rescue vessel, can be pulled to the surface.

The big bell, capable of withstanding terrific pressure, contains lights and a telephone.

Soon after the bell was lowered divers started going down two at a time from the deck of the Falcon. Those who watched their lifelines reported it required about seven minutes for the 245-foot descent.

Only one man was inside the rescue chamber as it was lowered, making it possible to bring a full load of rescued to the surface.

Temperature differences! There is no coastline in the world where the temperature changes more rapidly than between Florida and Labrador. In this region, with only 1400 miles difference in latitude, the temperature averages from 75 degrees at Miami, Fla., to 22 degrees at Kain on the north coast of Labrador. This contrasts very sharply with Europe, where about the same range of temperature occurs from North Norway to northern Africa, with 2900 miles difference in latitude. This condition in America is an advantage, giving the people a wide range of products in a short distance, ranging from lumber, fish and furs in the North to semi-tropical products of the South.

THREE CANADIANS HOLD TICKETS ON DERBY WINNER

Each Will be Paid $140,000 for Holding Ticket on Blue Peter

$750,000 IN ALL WON

(By The Canadian Press)

Today's running of the Epsom Derby dumped a $750,000 treasure chest at the feet of Canadians.

Biggest winners were holders of three tickets in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes on the winning favorite, Blue Peter. These slips of paper will pay off at $140,000 each to Thomas McDowall of Calgary, to a Port Colborne, Ont., syndicate of cement workers headed by John Dworchuk, and to an unidentified Canadian holder.

The flying heels of Fox Cub, racing home in second place, kicked $70,000 each into the laps of two other Canadians, identified only by the pseudonyms "Sure to Click" and "Oh Boy". Their tickets respectively were numbered BT181186 and DE666089.

No Canadian held a ticket on third-place Heliopolis.

Two of Dublin's 50 residual prizes and 74 of the 900 consolation prizes, worth $47,000 in all, went to Canada when the drum of fortune spun in the advance drawings.

Seventy-one other Canadian ticket holders each receive $1,870, making up the remaining $133,000 which comes to Canada.

Toronto, May 24 (CP)—Ray Hunt of Toronto, announced today as a holder of an Irish sweepstake ticket on Blue Peter, the winner of the Derby at Epsom, said he would rather not make any comment for the present. His ticket nets him $140,000.

DRIVER'S NAME NOT GIVEN

London, May 24 (AP)—The 47-year-old driver of the truck involved in the collision which injured Queen Mary returned to his job today at the garage of a trucking firm.

"Apart from the fact he was a little late this morning, he was on duty as usual," said his employer.

"He is upset at having been involved in such an accident. Until such time as he tells me he has no objection I will not give out his name."

QUEEN MARY IS QUITE IMPROVED AFTER ACCIDENT

Mother of King George Suffers Injury to One Eye in Car Crash

RESTLESS NIGHT

Children in London Call on Mother Before Proceding to Witness the Derby

London, May 24 (AP) — Queen Mary suffered injury to one eye when her automobile overturned yesterday but her general condition is satisfactory, her doctor said today.

The physicians' bulletin said:

"Her Majesty Queen Mary has passed a restless night partly due to injury to one eye which, although painful, is not a source of anxiety.

"Her Majesty's general condition is satisfactory."

Sir Richard Cruise, surgeon-oculist to the Queen, called on her last night and again today with other physicians.

Doctors attending the Queen Mother remained at her residence, Marlborough House, for more than an hour before issuing the bulletin. No other bulletin was expected today.

In addition to Sir Stanley Hewett and Viscount Dawson of Penn, who signed last night's bulletin saying the Queen had suffered bruises and shock, the physicians in attendance were increased by the visit of Sir John Weir, the first homeopathist to be appointed to the Royal Family.

BRITISH GOV'T ACCEPTS 3-WAY MILITARY PACT

Soviet Plan Proposed is Now Adopted by Britain and France

NOTE TO MOSCOW

London, May 24 (CP)—The government has accepted in principle the Soviet plan for a three-way mutual assistance pact among Great Britain, France and Russia.

Military details of the alliance must be settled before it formally is signed, but Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons today he hoped "it will be found possible to reach a full agreement at an early date".

The government will send a note to Moscow by Sir William Seeds, the Ambassador to Russia, informing the Soviet Union of its decision.

One of the reasons for the delay in signing the pact is the necessity of waiting until Ivan Maisky, Soviet Ambassador to London who is attending the League of Nations Council meeting in Geneva, returns to London.

The prime minister told the House that while there were still "some further points" to be cleared up between Moscow and London over the terms of the pact, he does not anticipate these will cause any serious difficulty.

The alliance will bind Britain, Russia and France to fight as one if any of them are victims of unprovoked aggression. Anglo-French pledges to aid Rumania and Poland against aggression will be incorporated in the pact but the exact form is not known at present.

Finland, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania, Russia's Baltic neighbors, will be excluded from provisions of the pact.

Royal Train Stops on Isolated Siding Under Silver Birches and Poplars

Busteed, Man., May 24 (CP)—King George and Queen Elizabeth were given a chance to sleep among the silver birch and poplar trees of Manitoba as their 'official residence' on wheels coasted on to an isolated siding and remained there several hours.

The Royal blue and silver train slipped away early today just as quietly as it entered this hamlet last night. Thirty minutes earlier the Royal pilot train, carrying press representatives, left for Winnipeg, less than 100 miles west of here.

Heavy clouds hid the sky throughout the night but rain did not appear imminent.

White River's Mayor Named in 30 Seconds To Greet Royal Couple

White River, Ont., May 24 (CP)—For 40 fleeting minutes with the King and Queen Tuesday, George Freethy was Mayor of White River. Then he hurried back to look after his job as superintendent of the Young Men's Christian Association, for the place was overflowing with guests for the Royal visit.

Everyone was in a dither when an aide to the King stepped from the sleek blue and silver Royal train in the freezing air in the morning and, announcing that their Majesties wished to alight from the train, asked for the Mayor of White River. Now White River isn't an incorporated municipality and has no mayor.

"Why there isn't . . ." stammered an excited railwayman. "Oh, just a minute and we'll try to find him."

Then, while Indians from remote northern regions and loggers from nearby camps looked on in wonderment, the White River committee in charge of arrangements for the Royal visit unanimously elected George Freethy Mayor in 30 seconds. He wore a grey business suit.

Indian Brave Presents Canoe Filled With Trailing Arbutus

No one had expected that their Majesties would leave the train when it was learned a service stop would be made here. It was hoped they would appear on the rear platform, and in that hope grizzled Indians came by canoe from as far as 100 miles away. One of them, Michael McWatch, made a little birchbark canoe and filled it with trailing arbutus for the Queen on the chance a presentation might be made.

But soon everyone was at ease. Shaking hands with the King and his consort, Mayor Freethy asked them if they would like to stroll along the station platform. The Queen asked how much the big engine weighed and the Mayor, who had taken the trouble to learn all the details, said it weighed 432,000 pounds.

"Her smile was so dazzling I forgot everything after that," Mayor Freethy said.

The Queen asked to meet the Indian who had made the miniature canoe for her and McWatch was presented.

Congratulated On Work.

"She congratulated me on my workmanship," the Indian said afterward. "She asked me how I made it and I told her it took me three days to make because I didn't use nails, just string.

"She smiled at me and I don't remember much after that, because her smile made me hot and cold. After that she turned to the King and said: 'I think it's wonderful, don't you?'"

Then their Majesties walked along the muddy, unpaved street among the crowds of villagers and backwoodsmen, chatting and laughing with them. No one thought of telling them their train already was ten minutes late in leaving.

Michael Wiwissan, an Indian who hurried home 40 miles by canoe for the event, spoke for several seconds with the Queen.

"She stood beside me and asked me how long I had lived in White River," Wiwissan told a reporter. "I told her I was born here. Then she wanted to talk to my wife; but my wife doesn't talk English, so she spoke to me and I translated her words."

Queen Shows Interest When Papoose Disturbed by the Cheering, Shouting

A papoose started to cry and the Queen turned to his Majesty with the remark: "Poor thing, it must be frightened of the crowd and the noise."

The Queen, despite her grey fur coat, was obviously chilled by the cold morning air. But she continued to chat, turning to Chester Greenwood, a rural school teacher, who was on crutches because of a broken foot. The Queen talked of the health and scholastic ability of the district children, then broke into laughter.

Greenwood said afterward that when the Queen asked him about his crutches he had explained: "My wheels don't work so well."

Twenty minutes after the train was due to leave, the Royal couple climbed aboard. It was only then that the people realized they hadn't cheered as loudly as they might have. They had been too awed.

Then everybody went over to the ball park to see the game between White River and Cline Mine, which had been planned as the feature of the program of celebration. There was a big barn dance at night.

Nobody wanted to go to bed, either. They all wanted to talk about the gracious King and Queen.

The Boy Scouts who had pitched their tents in the Anglican Church yard talked far into the night. Fifty persons had to be put up in the school house, where beds imported from Chapleau were set up. Other beds were made in the United Church and the Anglican Church.

Indians, Trappers, Miners And Bush Workers Share Welcome With City Folk

by R. K. CARNEGIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Port William, Ont., May 24 (CP)—Indians, trappers, miners, and bush workers returned today to their lonely outposts of civilization—but they shared with all the city folk the picture of King George and Queen Elizabeth mixing with workmen and members of the Ojibway tribe.

Exodus from the city started shortly after the royal train left here early last evening for an overnight trip to Winnipeg. Indians, who came here in scores from their scattered settlements, started back to their homes; miners who took advantage of the special train excursions for the first time in more than a year, went back to the gold fields; hundreds of school children returned to the small communities where they had only read of royal lives.

It was a mixed gathering that welcomed their Majesties late yesterday afternoon as the royal flyer, the "Imperial residence" for a month, glided into Port Arthur station. The vocal welcome, while just as hearty, sounded as a soft echo of the vociferous cheering in the larger centres. But there were times when the King and Queen could not help but notice the sudden outbursts of renewed cheering, especially when the royal motor car passed the several thousand school children.

Smiled Repeatedly

It was here the King and Queen waved and smiled repeatedly in recognition of the childish singing and shouting that continued for minutes after the short royal procession passed.

The Ojibway Indians, too, held special attraction for their Majesties, who wandered through a specially constructed Indian encampment, asking questions of squaws, braves and children, some of whom were unable to understand English. The Queen ignored the uncomfortable walking as she stepped lightly over the soggy turf to the monotonous beating of the Tom Tom. Indian braves shrieked their warhoops while others displayed their prowess in birchbark canoes.

It was King George who expressed the desire to meet the eight Indian chiefs lined in a solemn row. But it was the Queen who poked her head into a birchbark teepee, and suggested it was "perfectly amazing" when told by a squaw that her six-months-old papoose was carried on his mother's back "all time."

Queen "Pokes" Around

For the newspapermen and photographers, it was a picnic. The Queen, never once losing her smile and displaying insatiable interest, just sort of "poked" around as would any tourist. The royal couple wandered freely among the

EARL ROSEBERY'S BLUE PETER WINS ENGLISH CLASSIC

Favorite for Epsom Derby Romps Home 4 Lengths Ahead of Fox Cub

HELIOPOLIS THIRD

Winner Went Into Lead at Final Furlong and Withstood Challenge of Fox Cub

Epsom, England, May 24 (CP)—Taking the lead after rounding treacherous Tattenham Corner into the homestretch, the Earl of Rosebery's Blue Peter, the 7 to 2 favorite, today won the 155th running of the Derby.

The colt, by Fairway from Fancy Free, defeated Edward Esmond's Fox Cub by four lengths. The Earl of Derby's Heliopolis, who led at Tattenham Corner but weakened in the uphill final stretch, was third, three lengths behind Fox Cub, and Lady Zia Wernher's Casanova fourth in the field of 27.

Blue Peter, with Jockey E. Smith aboard, covered the 1½ miles in two minutes, 36 4-5 seconds, adding the greatest of the turf's classics to the two thousand guineas he won at Newmarket a month ago.

The crowd sprawled across the downs, estimated at 500,000, cheered wildly as the favored Blue Peter went into the lead over the final furlong and held off the efforts of Fox Cub and Heliopolis.

GOV'T NOT TO BE HIGH PRESSURED INTO ANY CHANGE

Program for Disabled War Veterans Will Remain as Now Constituted

THREATS BEING MADE

Ottawa, May 24 (CP)—The Dominion government will not be "high-pressured" by any group into changing its program of assistance for disabled war veterans, even in a "so-called election year", according to a statement by Pensions Minister Power in parliament last night. Both Houses planned to sit today despite the holiday.

The pensions branch has a budget of $56,000,000 a year which it intends to continue to devote to the welfare of men who were disabled overseas, men since shown to have been "burned out" and, now this year, unemployed veterans needing medical care for recent causes, the minister says.

A stream of threats of election losses had been pouring into his office demanding broadened consideration for veterans, especially unemployed veterans, who are physically fit, Mr. Power informed the House. He was determined, however, that the man who suffered a service disability would be looked after first before aid was given those uninjured in service, he said.

Aid Unemployed.

The government had aided unemployed veterans by seeking jobs for them, and the success of that effort was demonstrated in the fact unemployment among veterans was much lower than among the population as a whole.

Mr. Power told a questioner some of the threats had come from high executives in the Canadian Legion

The King and Queen Enter Empire's Richest Grain-Fields

By D. E. BURRITT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, May 24—(CP)—Mythical gates to the Empire's richest grain fields were thrown open today to receive King George and Queen Elizabeth .

And Winnipeg, true to tradition, did things up properly to welcome Their Majesties. True, decorations possibly were not as costly as those displayed, say in Montreal and Toronto.

But there was a different air lent to the great, wide streets by the crowds that travelled the Royal route a goodly part of the night. It was a typical holiday crowd.

KING SEES PROGRESS

Progress of Manitoba from Pioneer Days to Present Indicated in Premier Bracken's Address of Welcome to the King and Queen

By A. E. FULFORD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 24 (CP)—King George and Queen Elizabeth came to the West today in the shower of rain, the first that has dampened a welcome to Their Majesties since they arrived in Quebec a week ago.

A great crowd armed with umbrellas and wearing raincoats, greeted the King and Queen when they stepped off the royal train and started a day-long visit, highlight of which was to be His Majesty's Empire Day broadcast.

Winnipeg's 200,000 population was swelled by an estimated 100,000 visitors from every part of the Province and the United States mid-west.

People Cheer In Crowds

Huddled in doorways all along Main Street and Portage Avenue hours before the arrival, the crowds forgot about the rain when the King and Queen appeared. They took a ducking and cheered the visitors enthusiastically.

The official reception committee included Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper of Manitoba, Premier John Bracken and Mayor John Queen.

Rain had been chasing the King and Queen for days. Their arrival at Ottawa last Friday was almost marred by a drizzle that stopped just as they stepped from the train. Monday at Toronto it rained immediately before their arrival and started again after they left for the West.

There was no escape here. Showers persisted from dawn.

Rain Starts Early

By CHARLES EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, May 24 (CP) —Winnipeg awakened today to find it[illegible] under a light but persistent ra[illegible] boon to the farmers but a b[illegible] the thousands who had selected curbside seats to welcome King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The rain started late last night and was still beating down as early morning crowds scurried along the broad avenues in search of shelters from which they might watch the royal tour.

Flags and bunting, soaked by hours of rain, hung dejectedly over streets which the royal route extended for 26 miles.

Gather in Early Morning

Previous points of vantage were deserted two hours before the royal arrival. Ignoring the rain, however, hundreds of children, some in school class groups, and some wearing potato sacks upside down with holes for the faces were among the first on the streets.

Women began filling the roped-off area at the city hall long before the milkmen had finished their rounds. There they sat in early morning solitude, under umbrellas and blankets, the latter to protect them from splashing by passing motor cars.

Bugles sounded calls along side streets where troops and guards "fell in" in preparation for duty along the route. Some wore great coats but most of them had only tunics.

Four hours before their Majesties' arrival at the Legislature, crowds in raincoats and carrying umbrellas lined up several deep in the shelter of the big limestone buildings. Some had hampers in

The King's Reply To Welcome by Premier Bracken

Winnipeg, May 24 (CP)—Following is the text of King George's reply to the welcome address of Premier John Bracken of Manitoba during their Majesties' visit to Winnipeg today:

"I am indeed most happy to receive, on behalf of the people of the Province of Manitoba, the loyal welcome which you have presented to me today, and desire, through you, to assure the citizens of the province that I highly appreciate, not only the kind sentiments expressed in the address itself, but the welcome accorded to the Queen and myself in so many other ways.

"Your reference to my revered father, his late Majesty, King George the Fifth, touches me deeply, and I am much interested to learn that there are many here today who were present nearly forty years ago on the occasion of his visit before he ascended the throne.

"The people of Manitoba, having united many races in a common citizenship, may well be proud that the practice of tolerance and democratic principles has borne such splendid fruit. By their energy and determination they have contributed in substantial measure to the building of this great Dominion.

"In my journey westward I have been struck by the immensity of the country and the many visible proofs of its material and social progress.

"For the Queen and myself, I thank you for your assurances of devotion and loyalty. It gives us the utmost pleasure to visit you, and we pray that under the Divine blessing the people of Manitoba may continue to prosper."

HOUSEKEEPER, 24, ADMITS CHARGE

One - Year Suspended Sentence is Imposed on Winnipeg Woman

Winnipeg, May 24 (CP)—Principal in a fantastic divorce plot, Katherine Rykunyk, 24-year-old housekeeper, charged with manslaughter following the death of six-year-old Rose Marie Eiler, pleaded guilty yesterday before Mr. Justice W. J. Donovan in Assize Court. She was given a one-year suspended sentence and, in addition gave her personal recognizance for $500 to be of good behavior.

Rose Marie was found dead Jan. 24. Bound and gagged, she died of suffocation. Steve Eiler, her father, was convicted of manslaughter last week and remanded for sentence.

Evidence was that Eiler and his housekeeper tied the child and then he bound Miss Rykunyk, planning to tell a story of a strange man having invaded his home in search for divorce papers.

"He hoped to gain sympathy for his divorce. He did not mean to harm Rose Marie," the housekeeper told the court.

500 M.P.H. PLANE SEEN

London, May 24 (AP)—A limited peep at Great Britain's air power was given a party of 300 members of parliament and government officials by the War Ministry today.

They saw one plane streak across the sky at about 500 miles an hour, well ahead of published speeds for the fastest chasers. Two "mystery planes" about which no details were given also flashed by.

BOAT OWNERS WANT CHECK ON POLLUTION OF THE MOIRA RIVER

Boating enthusiasts who this week and the week previous launched their newly painted and overhauled craft in the waters are already dismayed over the gummy, oily deposit of grime that has collected on both sides of their boats, and have announced their intention of seeking a remedy for the annoyance. An appeal is expected to be presented council for an immediate check on river pollution.

TRUCKERS BUSY WITH DISTRIBUTING 'FLATS' OF TOMATO PLANTS

Some local truckers are finding season employment conditions better later with first planting work in the district. This morning one truck owner reported a full week's work ahead on the job of moving thousands of "flats" of tomato plants which are being distributed through Prince Edward County.

MEN SEEK WORK IN TOBACCO FIELDS

First movement of local workers from the city and district who annually find employment in the tobacco fields of the western part of the Province took place this week. Harold Taskis, and three other youths who have for the past three years found steady summer employment at fair wages near Tillsonburg, left yesterday and expect to be hired at transplanting the young plants in that section. "Last year I managed to save up $400 during the season, after all living expenses were paid," one of the youths stated before leaving.

DAVE CALLAGHAN WAS BRAKEMAN ON TRAIN

One of the brakesmen on the pilot train that preceded the Royal Train before it left Belleville on Sunday night was Mr. Dave Callaghan, and not Dave Gallagher as was formerly reported.

FOREIGN NURSES STUDY OUTPOST HOSPITALS

Foreign nurses taking a course in Toronto are being taken on a tour of the Red Cross outpost hospitals of the province. The nurses who come from Portugal, New Zealand, Panama, Venezuela and other countries are at present at Bancroft where they are studying the methods used there. They will visit Coe Hill and Apsley hospitals before they return.

FIRE DAMAGES CAR

Dense clouds of smoke arising from a bonfire burning at the rear of the property of Harry Yanover, South John Street, yesterday sent fire squads racing to the scene. It proved to be a false alarm, however, as no property was in danger, and the alarm had been sent in by an over-anxious resident living in the vicinity.

A car that suddenly broke into flames while backing out of a Charles Street garage was responsible for the second alarm yesterday. Firemen succeeded in reducing the blaze, however, before any damage was done.

ONT. CIVIL SERVANTS MAY TAKE WEEK'S TRAINING WITH PAY

Local militia officers have been cheered by the announcement of the Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney General of the Province that all civil service employees are to be given ten week's leave with pay in addition to their regular holidays to attend training camp, if they are members of the non-permanent active militia. The statement was made at a banquet of the Civil Servants' War Veterans' Association in Toronto yesterday.

While this announcement will affect only a comparatively few in Belleville and district, this is the first step toward the official acknowledgement of the worth of such training in connection with Canada's defence, it was stated today by one officer. This may inaugurate a move to have all employers recognise this training period and allow all employees to take time off with pay to attend, it was pointed out.

FEW TOURISTS YET

Overnight visitors have been few as yet at the city tourist camp, now refinished and redecorated for the first influx of the travellers from throughout the Dominion and across the border, who annually take advantage of the best facilities offered by any camp within the province. Fresh paint, neatly trimmed grass and blooming flowers have transformed the camp after its winter somnolence. Several first day visitors have already been accommodated, however, it is reported by camp caretaker, George Wilder.

PICKEREL FISHING REPORTED GOOD IN PLACES ON RIVER

Pickerel fishing is good almost within the city limits, according to anglers who have lately been visiting sections of the Moira River where angling is reportedly good. Fishing from the pier at Lazier's Dam last evening, Ray Stenson, a local youth, landed two pickerel, the largest of which weighed almost three pounds. O'Brien's Bridge was also a favorite spot last evening, with several anglers observed whiling away the time. Catches at this point were declared light.

BELLEVILLE MAN HAD HONOR OF SHAKING HANDS WITH THE KING

Mr. William Coulby, 166 Foster Avenue, who was in Ottawa on Sunday during the Royal visit, had the honor of shaking hands with the King. Mr. Coulby was lined up with the veterans about the War Memorial and was one of the ex-soldiers with whom King George exchanged a hand-shake.

Marjorie Alderman read a Psalm previous to a pianoforte solo by her sister, Dorothea. Mr. Adams of the C.N.R. gave a helpful talk on First Aid. Mr. Austin Sager closed in prayer.

Pamphlet Explains British System of Handling War Pensions

To meet suggestions that have been made by the Canadian Legion and the British Empire Service League the United Kingdom Minister of Pensions has issued a pamphlet for distribution in Canada describing in detail the basis on which British war pensions are administered there.

The procedure is the same as in the United Kingdom and the ministry wishes to make sure that all Imperial ex-service men resident in the Dominion shall receive exactly the same benefits as if they had made their homes in Great Britain.

The rights of the ex-service man, the way in which they are dealt with and the manner of presenting claims and grievances are all carefully explained in the pamphlet. A list of district and sub offices in the Dominion of the Department of Pensions where ex-service men may apply is also contained.

Marine Code Flags Carried No Message But Help to Decorate

With strings of vari-colored marine code flags fluttering in the fresh breeze from stays and guys, the trim oil carrier, Britamoil of the British American Oil Company carrying a cargo from the western refineries, entered port this morning and was busy during the earlier part of the day pumping her cargo into the company's local tanks through the huge pipe line.

The whipping flags caught the attention of many who gathered to watch the arrival of the tanker.

"What's the code say, skipper?" asked one resident waving at the pennants.

"Danged if I know," responded one deck hand busy unrolling a short length of fish pole preparatory to a spot of fishing from the side of the dock.

"What's the message you're carrying, Chief," pursued the questioner, shouting at a first mate who guarded the upper works.

"Don't say anything. They're just flags. We've got them up because today's a holiday....Queen's Birthday or something," he megaphoned back.

Chapman Defeats Charley Yates

Hoylake, England, May 24 (AP)—Dick Chapman of Greenwich, Conn., today defeated Charley Yates of Atlanta, the defending titleholder, in the third round of the British Amateur Golf championship, 5 and 3.

Jim Bruen, 19-year-old Irish star and co-favorite with Yates at the start of the links classic, ousted the Scottish champion, E. D. Hamilton, by 3 and 2.

Chapman gave a great exhibition of putting to defeat Yates

Bill Holt of Syracuse, N.Y., advanced with a 3 and 2 win over D. S. Coates of England.

Edgar Rutherford's Automobile Stolen

Removing the hinges from the garage door, robbers stole an automobile, the property of Edgar P. Rutherford, 52 Alexander St., some time last night, the owner discovered when he went for his machine early today.

Efforts to steal the next door neighbour's car, belonging to Alex Saunders, failed when the robbers could not gain entrance to Mr. Saunder's garage. Failing to gain entrance to Saunders' property, the robbers turned their attentions to Mr. Rutherford's garage and here were forced to remove the hinges fom the door of Mr. Rutherford's garage before they gained entrance to the building.

Mr. Rutherford assured police today that both the ignition of his car and the garage door had been securely locked last night. It is believed the robbers pushed the car out of the garage onto Alexander St., before starting it by means of crossing ignition wires, a starting process known to professional car thieves. The vehicle was equipped with 1939 Ontario licence plates number 16-N-72. The stolen car was a gun metal colored Plymouth sedan. Police departments throughout the province were notified of the theft by Belleville authorities early today, although the thieves are believed to have gained many hours start before the robbery was discovered.

Name of Derby Winner Given King at Rennie

Aboard the Royal Train, May 24 (CP)—News of Blue Peter's victory in the Derby reached the King today at Rennie, Ont., within a few minutes after the race at Epsom.

His Majesty was so interested in the result of the turf classic that it had been planned to hold the train a few minutes at Rennie if the race was not finished when the Royal train passed there at 10:19 a.m. E.D.T. However, a Canadian Press flash was awaiting the King there.

Business is Quiet During the Morning

Belleville's industrial and business wheels turned slowly today, May 24th. Although merchants of the city had agreed to close their places here on Monday, in honor of the Royal visit, and remain open today, there appeared to be little business activity in the main thoroughfares this morning.

School children of the city observed the holiday as did government and county offices. Typical May weather, a departure from the usual rain and storm that marks the average Victoria Day celebrations, was evident and a number of country-minded residents forsook the city to find diversion along the highways and byways.

Fishermen were noted leaving in the early morning for the streams of the district where the speckled beauties abound, while owners of camps and cottage took advantage of the fine weather to enjoy the day in their summer homes.

France, Poland Sign Trade Accord

Paris, May 24 (AP)—France and Poland supplemented military ties today with a commercial accord under which the Polish government will buy electrical and automotive products and France will take Polish coal. The total value of goods to be exchanged was estimated at 500,000,000 francs (about $13,250,000).

$1,250 Needed This Week To Reach Objective in Salvation Army Fund

For the Salvation Army Building Fund there has been collected subscribed already $1,750. This leaves $1,250 to be raised by Saturday.

Subscriptions in large and smaller amounts are needed to bring the fund up to the objective of the building drive.

Generosity is asked from those who have not already subscribed to this worthy project.

If those who are yet to subscribe will act as generously as those who have already made their donation, the committee is satisfied that the total objective will be reached.

The work of the Salvation Army is known to everyone to those who make their contributions and to those who have felt the benign social influence of the "Army" workers. A new citadel will make possible greater service to mankind.

Next three days of this week will see the drive intensified and liberal contributions are urgently requested.

Children Make the Most of Extra-Long Holiday

Soft Ball, Picnicking and Paddling Around in Boats Favorite Recreations

SCHOOL ON THURSDAY

Streets and byways, country lanes and nearby woods are filled today with shouting, exuberant youth of Belleville and district enjoying one of the longest and unexpected mid-period holidays in many years.

Not until tomorrow (Thursday) do classes resume, and younger residents are making the most of their time of freedom from irksome lessons and examinations just ahead.

Yesterday was Empire Day, and today is the Queen's Birthday, so revered as a holiday in childish hearts for generations past. Saturday and Sunday there was too much excitement in anticipation of the visit of the King and Queen to Kingston and Belleville to enter much into the spirit of a real holiday unmarred by "best clothes" and better behavior. But today the most was being made of the opportunity of bird-like freedom.

Along the waterfront, paddling in the harbor in frail craft some gathered; others angled from the nearby dock and wharves. The corner sand lots were occupied by many and soft ball was apparently the favorite sport. In the backyards of homes bicycles were overhauled and repaired and along the country roads small parties of picnickers trudged since early morning, paper bags filled with lunches, and purloined potatoes for baking in the open.

Many families of the city who are observing this holiday today seized the opportunity to visit nearby summer homes and camps and at Oak Lake and elsewhere, a scene of activity was reported as summer tenants undertook the first airing and repairing.

SETTLER WANTED FOR QUESTIONING

Police Wish to Get Information on Disappearance of Two Prospectors

Sudbury, Ont., May 24 (CP)—Police and settlers started a widespread search in the Lake Wahnapitae district, 30 miles northeast of here, today for a settler wanted for questioning in connection with the disappearance of Gilbert Bennett, 69, wealthy prospector, and Wilbur Sawyer, 53.

Inspector A. R. Knight of the Ontario Provincial Police said Bennett and Sawyer may have met with foul play. Bennett's canoe was found two days ago on Lake Wahnapitae, drifting seven miles from shore.

The canoe was right side up and it was regarded as impossible by police that Bennett and Sawyer could have fallen out and been drowned. They believe the canoe drifted out into the lake from in front of the prospector's cabin.

The settler, whom police wish to question, had not been seen in the neighborhood since last night.

Memory of Royal Visit to the City Will Linger Long

The graciousness, charm and beauty of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth and the frank, manly appearance of His Majesty the King, that have been taking Canadians by storm since the Royal arrival in Canada, left an indelible mark on the residents of this city following their brief glimpse of the Royal couple here last Sunday night.

This is borne out in the fact that the charm and the undeniable attractiveness of Their Majesties have been on the tips of residential and district tongues since their brief pause here.

On Front street, war-veterans and others have been talking ceaselessly of the impression made by the royal couple. Schoolchildren in their own naive manner are giving each other their own idea of royalty. Staid men and elderly women talk frankly of the impressions made upon them.

Copies of The Ontario Intelligencer that carried colorful pictures of Their Majesties activities in Toronto and Kingston were at a premium last night. A number of news stores announced today that their supply was gone at an early hour. Interest in Their Majesties and the wholehearted welcome being given them by Canadians in general is at a high peak. News stories are being avidly read by the public while pictures and photographs are being eagerly snapped up by a large number of people, whose scrap books will carry a colorful photographic record of the royal visit to Canada.

Belleville's loyalty, never doubted, has flamed anew since the appearance of its King and Queen here. The red white and blue of the Union Jack now holds a deeper significance. It will be many a year before the memory of the gracious couple that wear the crown of England is deleted from the minds of those who were privileged to see them.

SCRIBES ON PRESS TRAIN NOT BUSY

Unable to Get Information from Royal Train About Royal Couple

Aboard Royal pilot train en route west, May 24 (CP)—Isolated from the King and Queen, fifty-five pilot train newspaper writers worried last night over what was happening on the Royal train. They hadn't seen the Royal couple since they left Toronto and wouldn't until they arrived in Winnipeg today.

The forty-nine men and six women covering the Royal tour through Canada moved through Northwestern Ontario thirty minutes ahead of the Royal train and had little to write about but the scenery.

They were particularly anxious to know the reaction on the Royal train to Queen Mary's accident in London and dispatched a telegram to George Steward, press liaison officer aboard the Royal train, asking whether His Majesty had phoned London and whether the accident would have any effect on the Royal visit.

Write About Scenery.

While they awaited a reply typewriters clicked aboard the ten-car special and English and American writers especially described the scenic wonders of the district. One enterprising woman reporter typed madly even while the train was passing through one of the dark tunnels that dot the line along the north shore of Lake Superior.

But life aboard the pilot train is not all work and the bridge addicts got down to business as soon as the departure from Toronto ended the toughest part of the trip for the writers. There hasn't been a poker game in evidence yet, but cribbage is almost as popular as bridge.

When news was received at Schreiber of Queen Mary's accident the dozen radio technicians and commentators aboard all had a whirl at trying to operate the radio for news, but the district, highly mineralized, was a bad one for reception. Because telegraph officials are handling messages at each stop without counting them there is no estimate available of the number of words sent from the train each day, but it must run about 25,000.

Finds Stores Closed.

Whenever the train pauses, even for water, batches of telegrams and cables are handed to local telegraph agents for transmission to Great Britain, France and many cities in the United States and Canada. British Broadcasting Corporation commentators unable to broadcast to England, write their stories aboard the train and cable them to London.

Picked crews operate the train on an exact schedule, and porters look after the newspaper people splendidly, but travelling for days on end with the only stops filled with work inevitably brings a lack of fresh linen and flocks of unpressed trousers.

That wouldn't be so bad, but in every city the pilot train stops a civic holiday has been declared, and the reporters are tearing their hair at not being able to buy fresh clothes, drugs and—not by any means least—a little liquid refreshments. Quite a few of the wires going off the train have been to friends in cities ahead asking them to have a supply on hand when the pilot train arrives.

A Bone for the Dog Brings Extra Business For Country Butcher

A new departure in rural merchandising is being tried in this district with unlooked for success.

A country butcher who has been serving the Belleville and Rossmore areas with his supply truck recently found business slack and conceived the idea of mounting a large box on the truck, a box which is kept well filled with large bones. At the home of each customer the family dog is well treated.

Dogs along the route of the meat salesman have come to know the familiar truck, and wait patiently each day, tails awag at the first glimpse. Orders have picked up considerably, it is reported.

Police Blotter

Following complaints that a man was disturbing the peace, begging from door to door and generally frightening the residents on Elmer Street, Constables Evans and Taylor later arrested a transient, who gave his name as Donald McLean and address as New Brunswick. McLean was lodged in the city jail and today remained in custody on a charge of intoxication. Police alleged the accused was intoxicated, when he was annoying the residents on Elmer Street.

With railway schedules back to normal following the passing of the Royal train from Eastern Ontario railways, a general influx of transients was seen 'riding the rods' yesterday. On Monday night only two transients arrived in Belleville and sought shelter at the police station, last night fourteen were accommodated, however.

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine reported today there had not been a single major motor accident throughout the Bay of Quinte area during the holiday period and while Their Majesties were attracting large crowds while passing through this district. 'Every city, town and hamlet was crowded and the highways literally a seething mass of motor cars over the holiday, but the drivers were careful with the result that no serious accidents or injuries occurred in this region", reported H.T.O. Ervine today, as he added that thousands of automobiles passed along the adjacent highways over the week-end.

MRS. P. McCORMICK

Picton, Ont., May 24 (Special)—The death occurred at Greenbush, on Monday, May 22nd, of Bridget Kinney, widow of the late Patrick McCormick aged eighty-five years. The late Mrs. McCormick had been in gradually failing health for some months. She is survived by one brother Jerry Kinney, with whom she made her home, since the death of her husband about fifteen years ago. Requiem Mass will be sung by Rev. Fr. Meehan in St. Gregory's Church on Wednesday morning, and interment made in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

MRS. ED. F. DYER

Mrs. Edward F. Dyer passed away at the family home East Lake Road on Saturday, May 20th, in her 83rd year. The funeral service at her late residence was largely attended on Monday afternoon with interment taking place in Orser Cemetery.

Almost every one in Prince Edward County had the pleasure of seeing the King and Queen, on Sunday in Kingston or Belleville or in Toronto on Monday. It was 3.45 a.m. Monday when the school children arrived by train from Kingston. Those returning in cars from Kingston arrived even later. At one time early Monday morning, 72 cars were lined up to cross six at a time, on the Ferry to Glenora. Those on the end of the line arrived home after five o'clock Monday morning. But all were agreed that the sight of the radiant Queen, and our beloved King was ample reward for the trip. The Royal train, seen at Belleville station at 10:30 Sunday evening, was a magnificent sight. The scarlet-coated Mounted Police, the profusion of baskets of flowers, the beautiful furnishings glimpsed through the bright windows, made it a sight long to be remembered, and the suspense when their Majesties did not appear immediately! The children from the Ontario School for the Deaf seemed for a while doomed to disappointment, and one felt that it was a pity these children, so far from their own homes, might not see the King and Queen. But the delight caused by their delayed appearance was breath taking. Those who went to Belleville seemed to see a great deal, with far less fatigue than those who travelled to Kingston.

The funeral service for Emmett Brown was attended by many friends, at the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown, Portland St., on Saturday afternoon. Death occurred following an operation, at St. Luke's Hospital, Montreal, on Tuesday. Mr. Brown had spent the winter as usual in Picton, and had left but a short time ago to join his boat. He was forty-two years of age. He is survived by his parents, one brother Claude Brown, and a sister, Mrs. Clayton Gordon of Picton, a brother Hugh E. Brown, passed away in Chicago two months ago. Interment was made in Glenwood Cemetery.

FIRE WASTES MILLIONS ANNUALLY

BELIEVE IT OR NOT . . .

the peoples of the pre-Christian era who sacrificed to the God of Flame would look like pikers beside modern Canadians whose purely preventable "fire sacrifice" costs at least thirteen million dollars and sacrifices over 300 lives annually.

One hundred $1 bills in a pile would make a fairly impressive heap. A $13,000,000 heap would be vastly more impressive and every normal individual would certainly shriek in protest if anybody tossed a lighted match into it.

Yet that's what Canadians are doing, figuratively speaking, every year—not that they are boringly rich or have no use for such a fortune, but simply because so many are downright careless. As for the estimated amount it's only a part of the real amount since it is based merely upon a cursory study of the hazards which cause some 45,000 fires annually in Canada with a total loss of about $23,000,000 in the fire insurance field alone. And according to the Canadian Underwriters Association 74.49 per cent of the total fires in which insurance companies are involved, could be avoided and over $$13,000,000 saved per year if a little more prudence was shown. And that doesn't take into account an average of over 300 Canadian lives lost annually in blazes caused by a combination of ignorance and indifference.

Using the Royal Tour as an incentive, the Underwriters are urging every city, town and municipality—and every individual for that matter—to launch a Clean-Up campaign movement because it has a direct bearing on fire prevention.

If the visit or "passing through" of Their Majesties inspires individuals in communities from coast to coast to clear away rubbish and litter, to paint unprotected wood and thus keep it from drying out, to rid attics and cellars of winter accumulation and generally make them conscious of fire hazards, then the cause of fire prevention in Canada will take a mighty step forward they claim, and the public will be the direct beneficiaries.

Two ideas are being placed before Mr. and Mrs. John Canuck:—One is that when a plant burns its payroll stops and the purchasing power of the community drops—the butcher, the baker and the milkman are affected as well as the actual employees . . . that property destroyed is entirely destroyed and no matter how replaced, whether by slow and painful thrift of the owner, or by more rapid operation of fire insurance indemnification, it represents a total loss—criminal loss if the fire was preventable.

Consequently, since it concerns the lives, property and means of livelihood of the community, it is claimed that fire prevention work is a very important social welfare problem to be met by the removal of dilapidated and useless buildings, the inspection of industries and mercantile stores, the removal of hazards in homes and places of amusement . . . all in the realization that Clean-Up campaigning is Fire Prevention and both spell Community Economy because the lower the fire losses, the lower the general rates.

The task of fire prevention is one which, as far as the Canadian Underwriters' Association and the "board" companies are concerned is a gigantic one and leads the Association, as part of their regular work, to the inspection of fire risks, general preventive work, surveying fire protective systems, the strength and equipment of fire brigades, the framing of building construction codes, the maintenance of devices associated with fire or accident prevention, the inspection of sprinklered risks, planning of municipalities and communities insofar as fire risks are involved, and the inspection and testing in laboratories of thousands of devices to prevent fires and accidents.

The reason for all this work is to increase safety, for instance through the standardization and supervision of waterworks, fire-fighting appliances, machinery and devices of fire-extinguishing or preventive character.

The determined effort to curb the appalling fire wastage in Canada is getting results for Mr. John Canuck today pays an average insurance rate of 69 cents per $100 of property insured whereas in 1905 he paid $1.33.

From 1920-37, the Dominion Fire Preventive Association estimated the cutting of insurance rates saved the Canadian citizens a total of over $376,000,000 — a huge saving made possible by the steady decline of fire losses during the seventeen-year period from an average of $60,000,000 per annum to be approximate $23,-000,00 per annum two years ago.

A further decrease in fire losses with an accompanying decrease in insurance rates is still possible in the opinion of the underwriters.

Accidents will happen, fires will always occur, but nation-wide Clean Up campaigning strikes directly with the fire prevention sword at fires caused by carelessness, ignorance and indifference. The reward of fire prevention, it is argued, in the light of experience is lower insurance rates plus elimination of financial disaster for many Canadians and the saving of lives and suffering for others.

QUEEN MARY IN AN ACCIDENT

The world will pray that Britain's Queen Mother, Queen Mary, will be fully restored after a short rest from the effects of an accident in a collision of her automobile and a truck at Putney, London, She is reported to have sustained shock and considerable bruising. It is realized that there will be concern on the part of the King who is at this moment in Mid-Canada on his tour with Queen Elizabeth. However there have been reassuring reports from London that the shock is not severe and the expectation is that Queen Mary will be herself in a very few days. The people's sympathy is with their King in his natural anxiety for the time.

Queen Mary won the hearts of the Empire as the consort of the late King George and as the mother of the now reigning King. She has had a noble influence on her country and is beloved everywhere.

ROYAL HISTORY MADE

Royal history and democratic history were made these past few days in Canada. Events stand out sharply, symbols of the spirit of British royalty and their interest in the people and all they represent, and symbols of democratic loyalty.

The scene Sunday in the vast throng about the base of the Canadian memorial at Ottawa, which His Majesty had just dedicated was one never witnessed on this continent before and possibly never in the history of the entire world, when the Rulers moved and gladly lost themselves, as it were, in the midst of the thousands who had gathered at this, the last appearance of the King and Queen at Ottawa, before their farewell to the capital city. Moving among veterans the King and Queen and people met. Words cannot faithfully depict the spirit of that event. Guards were not needed for the strong defence of the royal guests, the King and Queen, was in the love and devotion and goodwill of the people.

The Sovereigns and the people met on a very human footing, which is the final bedrock of life, whether of individual, group, nation or empire.

When the ruler loves and understands his people, nothing can prevail against the state.

In this scene veterans who bore the strain of upholding the Empire and the democratic civilization of the world in the fateful four and a third years of the Great War came into their own. From the standpoint of the Rulers and the people the demonstration was spontaneous in its origin and inspiring in its effect—it was the true relationship of Crown and People.

Other scenes show the freedom of a democratic nation. There is the rightful honor paid the King and the Queen, there is brilliant military pageantry, and there are demonstrations of the power of the nation.

There is another scene—the royal progress through the great cities of Canada through streets of cheering children and adult citizens, with few or no guards, only police helping to preserve the lines of the crowds and to see that no one is in a position in which he may be injured.

Children can be the guards on such a royal progress. Not fifteen or twenty feet away from these rows upon rows of children and citizens pass the King and Queen. The air is shrill with the voices of children and there is the increasing wave upon wave of hurrahs and cheers which swell into a roar sweeping along street and avenue. A democratic King rides by, guarded in the love of his people.

FINE MENTAL TEST

Intelligence tests do not as a rule stir the pulses of this department, but William Lyon Phelps has proposed one such test which does evoke a ready response. Speaking at the luncheon of the American Booksellers Association the other day, Professor Phelps said, "I don't know a single intelligent person who isn't fond of murder stories."

After this it is, we trust, not ungracious to point out that it need not always be murder. The meat of the thing is the mystery and not the massacre, though admittedly the world of the mid-night thriller is heavily peopled with corpses and drenched with human gore. Robbery will make a very good detective story if it is Sherlock Holmes in "The Red-Headed League" of Father Brown in "The Blue Cross" and "The Queer Feet."

The enormous vogue of mystery novels in our own time has probably brought a certain lowering of standards in the matter of spinal thrills, with a heavy swing to murder as against the subtler creepy sensations. Too many crime novels today have murder in the very title of the book.—New York Times.

THOUSANDS OF ONTARIO CHILDREN have had the thrill of their lives in seeing their King and Queen close at hand and observing their kindly manner. "A Kingly King and a Smiling Queen" as one heading writer happily put it. This will be an event of remembrance to stand out distinctly as a highlight of life in the years to come, deepening the loyalty and making more real the knowledge that we are a part of a great and glorious Empire of which the Throne is the cornerstone, an Empire on which the sun never sets and a Throne which is emblazoned with the love, devotion, loyalty and respect of millions of happy subjects. Dictators may rave and imagine a vain thing but Great Britain will go on forever. The children of all Canada are having a wonderful opportunity of getting acquainted with their Sovereigns, appreciating their worth, and swelling their pride in being a part of such a wonderful Empire.

IS HITLER JEWISH? This question is asked by "Word and Work," a religious journal published in Framingham, Massachusetts, and answered in the same journal by Otto J. Klink, Ph.D., University of Berlin ,one time under-secretary of Kaiser Wilhelm. "There are reasons to believe that Adolf Hitler, Germany's dictator, has at least an eighth, if not a quarter, Jewish strain. Not only in Branuma, but in other communities where Hitlers lived, it is agreed by the peasant majority that not only did the father have Jewish blood but his mother, Klara, as well. Hitler is a common Jewish name in Eastern Europe. The burden of evidence is that Adolf Hitler's uaternal grandmother, Johanna Hitler, was a Jewess of Moravia, and that she migrated to Vienna—Pro-Nazi agitators please copy."

PEDLARS ARE A PERIPATETIC NUISANCE, as a rule, and what to do about them has been a vexed question for some time. They are good salesmen and can convince some people that black is white or nearly so. They are here today and gone tomorrow, for the most part, while local merchants stay here for ever and help us pay for police and fire protection, sidewalks and all modern conveniences and utilities. Hastings Village has banned the padlar despite the claim that a provincial license gives them carte blanche everywhere, a very doubtful claim. Some counties have provided licenses for pedlars from fifty dollars up and that seems to discourage most of the itinerants. Some raw deals have been pulled in the hinterland by clever travelling house to house salesmen who will never return to face their victims.

CIRCUS TIME IS NEAR. Last year the Circus went high hat and developed labor troubles, everybody from razorbacks to trapeze performers trotting around with a chip on their shoulder and a union card in their pocket. This year John Ringling North says he has got all the circus troubles smoothed out, and a streamlined circus from Big Top to Kid Show, Not only that but he claims to have the first air-conditioned circus in captivity, needing an extra section of his mammoth circus train to carry the equipment. Also, sez he, we have cut down the magnificent distances which the great and only has grown to, made the Big Top higher and wider but not quite so long, so that customers can see the whole show without undue straining to see what is going on at extreme ends of the tent at the same time, and trying to watch the middle and both ends. John Ringling North says the Greatest Show on Earth will tour right through to the West Coast and will also play part of Canada. Cole Bros. Circus has fixed up its financial troubles and will tour again, while Hagenback and Wallace, and Sells Floto, and the Barnes Circus may take a holiday. Andy Downie's Circus is already on tour and going strong—Andy goes on forever it seems, despite the rumor that Andy, personally, has crossed the Great Divide.

40 YEARS AGO

May 24th., 1899

There will be a display of fireworks at the D. & D. Institute this evening.

Anglers in twelve boats competed in the competition yesterday. H. Bell and E. Hubbard won the Chown prize with 12 heaviest rock bass, also the prize for the heaviest lot of sun fish. R. Tuite and W. Crysler won W. B. Deacon's prize for 12 heaviest perch. No pike nor pickerel were caught.

Dr. Hudson and Mrs. Hudson of Roslin were in the city today.

Mr. D. W. Kain of Montreal, an old Belleville boy, is spending a short time here with friends.

Mr. H. M. Tait of the Bank of Montreal here has been transferred to the Lindsay branch of the bank.

Mr. Hugh Walker is spending today with friends in Shannonville.

50 YEARS AGO

May 24th., 1889

Seven members of the Forest and Stream Club competed for the Corby and Burdette prizes at the traps. The match being the first of the season, all showed lack of practice and a strong and gusty wind made the shooting from the leeward trap very difficult. The scores were as follows: Judge Fraleck 5; R. S. Bell 5; H. Day 2; R. Day 8; George Twining 8; Fred Roote 9 R. A. Davis 3. The Burdette prize, six single blue rocks, 18 rise: R. A. Davis 0; F. Roote 4; G. Twining 1; R. Day 3; H. Day 1; R. S. Bell 3; Judge Fraleck 2. Fred Roote scored a win in both matches.

Messrs. A. R. Elliott, A. F. Wills and H. A. Yeomans of this city have passed the final examinations of the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Mr. John Williams, barrister, of the firm of Messrs. Clute & Williams of this city, will sail on May 28th., for the Old Country where he will spent several months.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

CANCER IS CURABLE

Drs. Banting and Best, the Toronto research physicians, have given insulin to the world and thus saved or prolonged the lives of diabetic children and adults. Diabetes was formerly an incurable disease. Similarly, Drs. Minot and Murphy, Boston, showed that liver, and, later, liver extract, would prevent death in the formerly incurable pernicious anaemia.

With these two wonderful achievements within the past ten to fifteen years, it was confidently expected by research and practising physicians that the cause of cancer would soon be discovered and another fatal disease conquered. Despite the great expenditure of time and money throughout the civilized world, the cause of cancer remains unknown.

Now, there is really no known cure for diabetes or pernicious anaemia, yet these diseases are being conquered—by prolonging lives for several years—by the use of insulin and liver respectively. We should therefore, in justice to cancer research workers, appreciate the fact that, if discovered early, cancer can be actually cured, by the use of the knife, Xrays, and radium.

Instead of waiting for a sore or a lump to develop to the point where there is no doubt of it being a cancer, what is called a biopsy is now made. This is the examination of a piece of the suspected tissue under the microscope.

The Canadian Medical Association in its Handbook on Cancer says "Biopsy is a most useful procedure and the 'only' means of making certain that the growth is cancer".

It certainly illustrates the great "team" work in hospitals now to see the pathologist take a small piece of tissue from the operating room at once to the laboratory for microscopic examination.

"The outlook for cancer of the lip is extraordinarily good. Over 75 per cent of all cases, without selection, may be cured. The importance of recognizing cancer early and giving immediate treatment is shown by the fact that less than 2 per cent of the cases treated early die of the disease, whereas 60 per cent of neglected patients die of cancer.

Of course, the lip is easily get-at-able, but in early cases of cancer of the tongue and the inside of the cheek, the result of treatment by surgery and radium gives 60 per cent of cures.

Unfortunately, about half the cases of cancer of the stomach are not discovered until it is too late to give help. Stomach cancer often gives no warning. When cancer of the stomach is discovered early, it is considered the easiest form of cancer to cure".

A GERMAN LESSON

A Baltimorean has taken into his household as his own son a fair-haired, blue-eyed refugee from Germany. The boy is officially a Jew, but physically he fulfills exactly Herr Hitler's idea of an Aryan.

He tells with some glee what happened when the Nazification of the German schools began and the study of racial differentiation became obligatory. The teacher told off to give the course began his lesson by explaining that Jews were dark of skin, hair and eyes and were, therefore, ugly, as for example — and here he made a dark-eyed boy in the class stand up as exhibit A.

"But we Germans," he said, "are fair and beautiful, as for example" — and here he pointed to the little boy who is now living in America. The class guffawed, the teacher demanded an explanation and when he got it blushed and collapsed. The boy says that it was a long time before they had another class in race differentiation. —Baltimore Sun.

SPANISH MOSS

Northerners making their first journey through the South gaze with interest at the Spanish moss which festoons trees, lending to the landscape a strange, misty appearance.

But what they see is neither Spanish or moss. It is indigenous to America, and some authorities assert that it belongs to the pineapple family.

Until recently it was regarded as purely ornamental. When they perceived its commercial possibilities, industrialists did not trouble their heads over its classification. In Florida the moss is gathered with hooks attached to long poles and draped over racks. When dry it is hauled to a processing plant, several of which are in Orlando, and its outer covering is removed. The centre fibre, which resembles horsehair, is baled and shipped to northern factories, where it undergoes further treatment that renders it tough, pliable and curly.

The final product has many commercial uses; an important one is as stuffing for cushions, mattresses, upholstered furniture and automobile seats.—N. Y. Sun.

Outlining Royal Tour of United States

While the King and Queen tour the Dominion, plans are going ahead in United States for that part of Their Majesties' journey that will take them below the 49th parallel, and here Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to United States, is seen as he held a press conference in Washington in which he outlined plans of the Embassy for entertainment of the royal couple. The King and Queen will be in United States from June 8 until June 11.

Periscopes were a handy addition to anyone's equipment in Ottawa when tens of thousands jammed the entire route of the Royal procession.

THE EUDEMONIST

It is common talk around Hollywood that Will Hays, the movie czar, is always giving Sam Goldwyn headaches. The latest headache arises out of Hays' annual report on the movie industry, in which he asserts that the popularity of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs shows that in a world devoted to isms and schisms "there are still a number of eudemonists left in the world."

Mr. Goldwyn is not, of course, the only person to whom the word "eudemonist" will give pause. It has a sinister sound, which, however, is quite alien to its meaning. The dictionary gives "eudemonism" as "that system of ethics which finds the moral standard in the tendency of actions to promote happiness." Eudemonists, therefore, are people who think it is worth while to work for happiness as a very fine thing in itself.

Snow White has demonstrated that movies which give people a few minutes of happiness can be popular, even if they make no attempt to get to grips with anything. And people who go to the movies merely to be amused can henceforth hold their heads high. It is something in these days to be a eudemonist.—Winnipeg Tribune.

ARMOR-PIERCING

The latest type of 14-inch armor-piercing shell produced by Messrs. Hadfields, Limited, was referred to by Major A. B. H. Clerke, joint managing director, at the company's annual meeting. He said that, as a result of important experiments in close cooperation with the Admiralty, the effective range of their latest 14-inch armor-piercing shell, as measured by the perforation of any given thickness or armor, materially exceeded that of the 15-inch shell, in spite of the reduction in calibre.

He added: "I think that is an effective answer to the criticism that arose in certain quarters against the adoption of the 14-inch gun for the first five new battleships."

Referring to the ordnance side of the firm's business, he said that during the last three years they had been steadily replacing the older units of their plant with the latest high-duty machines, and extending their output capacity wherever possible. The result was that last year their ordnance output was five times that of four years ago. Output of the light armor department was 10 times that of 1935.—British Engineering.

LEST WE FORGET

In te war of 1914-18 throughout the world there were:

64 million men mobilized.
10 million killed.
3 million missing.
19million wounded.
10 million disabled.
7 million prisoners.
9 million orphans.
5 million widows.
10 million men, women and children were forced to flee from their homes.

Six thousand, four hundred men were killed daily, and this went on for 1,558 days.—From Voix du Combattant, Paris.

Democratic "boss" in Kansas where he has been a leading political figure for three decades, Tom Pendergast, ABOVE, enters prison owing the United States government almost $1,000,000. Failure to pay income tax, the Achilles' tendon of so many American criminals, caught up with Pendergast, who received a 15-month term as well as a fine of $10,000. The district attorney also said he had evidence of previous evasions with penalties totalling more than $800,000.

Keen Competition in Field Day Events at Tweed High School

Tweed—The annual Field Day of the local High School was held on the High School grounds on Friday afternoon. Weather conditions were ideal and the competition was keen in most of the events. The boys' events were run off under the direction of Principal T. E. Moffat and T. J. Calnan who were assisted by Herbert "Buck" Leal, of McMaster University. Miss H. Grindell, Miss K. Jordan and Miss M. Hammett had charge of the girls' events.

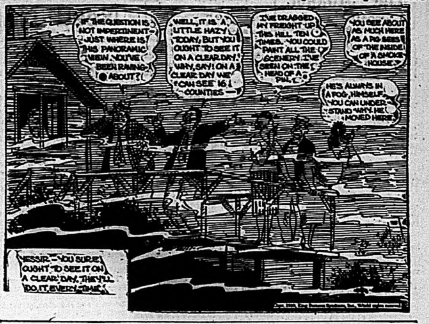
They'll Do It Every Time :-: By Jimmy Hatlo

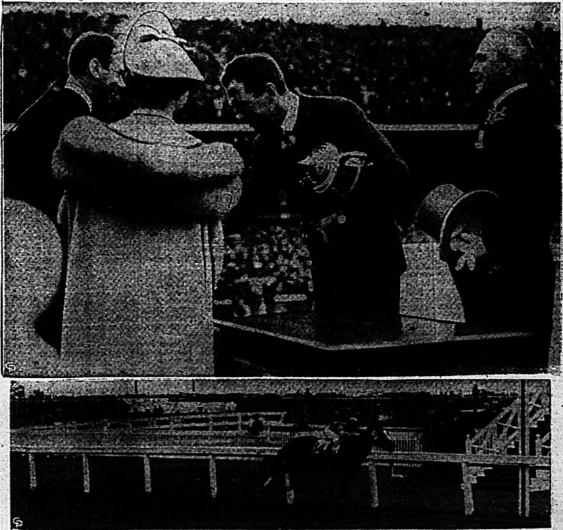


IF THE QUESTION IS NOT IMPERTINENT—JUST WHERE IS THIS PANORAMIC VIEW YOU'VE BEEN RAVING ABOUT?
WELL, IT IS A LITTLE HAZY TODAY, BUT YOU OUGHT TO SEE IT ON A CLEAR DAY! WHY, SAY! ON A CLEAR DAY WE CAN SEE 16 COUNTIES—
I'VE DRAGGED MY FREIGHT UP THIS HILL TEN TIMES. YOU COULD PAINT ALL THE SCENERY I'VE SEEN ON THE HEAD OF A PIN.
YOU SEE ABOUT AS MUCH HERE AS A PIG SEES OF THE INSIDE OF A SMOKE HOUSE.
HE'S ALWAYS IN A FOG, HIMSELF. YOU CAN UNDERSTAND WHY HE MOVED HERE.
YESSIR—YOU SURE OUGHT TO SEE IT ON A CLEAR DAY. THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME.

Where Three Died in Three-Train Ohio Wreck

Three trainmen were killed and four injured in a wreck near Bradford, Ohio, that resulted in this pile of twisted steel. The accident, involving three freight trains, took place in a dense fog as one train crashed another waiting by a water tower, and then a third plowed into the wreckage which had fallen on to a second track. The three men killed came from Logansport, Indiana.

The King Presents Guineas to Owner of Winning Horse in King's Plate at Toronto



Only sporting event on the itinerary of the King and Queen in their current tour of the Dominion was the King's Plate, oldest continuously run race on the North American continent, raced annually at Woodbine Park, Toronto. In 1860 Queen Victoria donated 50 guineas as a prize for the event and succeeding monarchs have kept up the tradition, but this year for the first time, the royal donor personally presented the winning owner with the guineas and trophy. These pictures show the historic sporting event. Archworth winning all alone, and His Majesty presenting the trophy to George McCullagh of Toronto, owner of Archworth. As the trophy is presented, Mr. McCullagh holds in his left hand the actual guineas. The Queen, her back to the camera, looks on, as does A.E. Dyment, president of the Ontario Jockey Club.

On Thursday evening, May 18th, at the Imperial Hall, Front Street, a large number of friends gathered at a miscellaneous shower in honour of Miss Anita Shorts and Doug Pindall. The early part of the evening was spent in euchre, after which little Miss Barbara Donovan entertained the guests with songs and tap dancing, which were very much enjoyed. Before lunch was served an appropriate address was given by Mr. Wm. Finkle of the Belle Shirt Co., of which the future bride and groom are employees. The young couple were then presented with many lovely and useful gifts. Anita and Doug very graciously thanked their friends and invited them to all come and see them in their new home. Lunch was then served after which dancing was continued until the early hours of the morning.

Queen's Choice of Costumes Admirable For Varied Climate

(By Muriel Adams)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, May 24.—(CP)—Seven days of varied Canadian weather mostly sunshine, but rain at Ottawa and snow at White River, today proved that Queen Elizabeth had chosen wisely and well when she gathered her wardrobe to withstand an ever-changing climate and to suit morning, matinee and evening audiences.

Although Canadians have seen her at 25 formal functions and numerous small stops so far, she has worn but 14 different ensembles. For daytime mode the dainty Queen selected pastels, each costume of a distinctive shade—pearl grey, hyacinth and crocus blues, violet, oyster white, honey beige. Each costume has been trimmed with feminine frippery, soft touches of fur at the cuffs, necklines or hem and her hats have had bits of fluffy feathers, small bunches of matching flowers and wisps of tulle veiling.

She favors long smooth-fitting gloves for daytime, but not in the evening and wristlets of diamonds or stones to harmonize with her color scheme. Pearls are her favorite throat piece during the day but in the evening she sparkles with diamonds, simply worn but exquisitely cut.

The Queen walks well and firmly and she wears high-heeled pumps to tone with her outfits. Her stockings are soft beige shades and very sheer.

Except in Ottawa, where Her Majesty moved some of her luggage to Rideau Hall and time allowed for several changes during the day, she has worn but one all-day ensemble—a dress and long fur-trimmed coat—for the royal rides of welcome and the luncheons and afternoon teas. By removing her dress-length coat and adding a fur scarf or short jacket, she changes a morning ensemble to a luncheon or tea outfit.

A smartly dressed woman, well-groomed and outfitted as any Canadian woman with daily social obligations would be, the Queen is distinctive by the radiance of her smile and charm coupled with her chic modes. But in the evening the Queen is Her Majesty, regal and poised.

Satin, lame and tulle, gleaming with brightness of colored sequins, silver and gold paillettes and metallic threads, clothe her when she takes the lead in precedence among the country's notables at evening functions. However, sophisticated raiment does not hide the womanly demureness of the little Scottish bride.

At times one wonders if Her Majesty is not a little shy about showing her smoothly rounded shoulders in her fashionable off-the-shoulder picture frocks, stiffened from the hips to the floor in panniered effect.

As she enters the West, interest is directed toward the Queen's outdoor outfits when she wanders freely in the mountains at Banff on Their Majesties first day of rest Saturday. Whether she will wear Highland tweeds and a bit of tartan, her hats, shoes and sportswear generally are awaited by those who have watched the revelation of her wardrobe on the Canadian royal tour.

Weddings

BROWN—WEESE

A quiet wedding was solemnized on Friday, May 19, at the United Church Parsonage, Shannonville, by the Rev. Craig when Phyllis Vivian, daughter of Mrs. Bertha G. Weese, 182 James Street, Belleville, became the bride of Charles Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Brown, 86 Pinnacle Street, Belleville. They were attended by the groom's sister, Miss Ruth Brown and Mr. Ray Pridmore. The young couple after a short trip to Ottawa, will reside in Tweed.

LONEY—GLENN

Apple blossoms, tulips and narcissus against a background of ferns made a lovely setting for the wedding in Holloway Street United Church at two-thirty yesterday afternoon when Muriel Margaret Glenn, daughter of Mrs. R. C. Andrews and the late Lewis Glenn, became the bride of Mr. Norel C. Loney, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Loney of Frankford. The Rev. R. H. Newman officiated.

Given in marriage by her step-father, Mr. R. C. Andrews, the bride was charming in her gown of white marquisette, with lace jacket, short tulle veil and white accessories. She carried a shower bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Helen Smith was bridesmaid and wore a pretty gown of pink marquisette in basque style, with lace jacket and long full skirt. Her flower hat was of turquoise blue on a pink net foundation and her accessories were in the same turquoise shade. Her bouquet was of Better-time roses. Little Miss Lorraine Bourk, niece of the bride, was a dainty flower girl in blue marquisette with pink trimmings and pink flower hat, and carried a quaint nosegay of roses and sweet peas.

Mr. Vince Loney of Ottawa, was his brother's groomsman. Wedding music was played by Mr. Alec Gordon.

A reception was held at the bride's home which was beautifully decorated with apple blossoms and Spring flowers. Mrs. Glenn, in lilac sheer with orchid accessories and corsage of white roses and ostrich tips, and Mrs. Loney, attired in navy blue taffeta and sheer with blue accessories and corsage of red roses and white tips, received with the bride and groom. Luncheon was served, the bride's table being effectively decorated in pink and white.

The groom's gift to the bride was a leather week-end bag, to the bridesmaid and flower girl gold lockets, and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Loney left on a wedding trip to New York State, the bride travelling in a Venetian blue coat, over an orchid sheer dress, with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Ingersoll, Ontario.

ZION W. M. S.

The May meeting of Zion W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Myron Hawley and took the form of a Grandmothers' Day. The meeting opened in the usual manner.

A short memorial was held for the late Mrs. W. C. Ketcheson, a life member of Zion W. M. S. and who passed away one year ago. Lois, the grandmother, was the Bible woman studied, with Mrs. Ralph Sills conducting the discussion.

Mrs. Percy Ray had charge of the programme which consisted of the singing of hymn 136 and very fine readings by Mrs. Bunnett, Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson and Mrs. Ray. Mrs. Wm. Sills contributed a beautiful solo entitled "God Gave Me a Wonderful Mother."

The study book was taken by Mrs. Floyd Sheffield. Mrs. Ralph Sills who had had the privilege of being a delegate to the branch meeting of the W.M.S. which was held in Lindsay gave an interesting and detailed report of the sessions.

The meeting was closed with the benediction and the ladies served an appetizing lunch. During the lunch period the seven grandmothers present were asked to register their names and ages. Mrs. Sills gave some beautiful thoughts relative to Mother's Day. Miss Margaret Tufts, the youngest member of Zion Auxiliary paid tribute to the Grandmothers, the reply was made by Mrs. H. H. Denyes— our one life member. A little memento of the occasion was presented to the oldest grandmother present — Mrs. (Capt.) H. Dulmage—a lady well advanced in the eighties. After lunch the grandmothers were asked to assemble on the lawn for a picture.

There were 18 members and 3 visitors present at this interesting meeting, and the offering amounted to $2.86.

Dr. Dafoe Describes the Meeting Of the Quints With King and Queen

By Dr. A. R. Dafoe

I watched today with my heart in my mouth while Their Majesties, the King and Queen of England, played with our own quintuplets.

It was just a mother and father meeting five normal, natural little children and every one of them gave the Queen a great big kiss and a hug and sent their love back to the royal princesses, Margaret Rose and Elizabeth back in England.

Here is the way it happened. We waited the royal couple in a room at the parliament buildings, Toronto. In they walked, the Queen on the arm of the Hon. Mitchell Hepburn, premier of the province, the King escorting Mrs. Hepburn. I was introduced to the royal couple and in turn I introduced the babies and the father and mother to them. Well, they made the curtsies we were teaching them; then Cecile took matters in her own hands. She marched to His Britannic Majesty, admired his blue uniform, and informed him that blue was her favorite color. The King smiled, and when she asked him about his medals and buttons, he graciously explained them to her.

Then the children presented their autographs and photographs to the King for his own children the princesses.

Then came the biggest moment of all. Annette walked over to the Queen, threw her arms around her, and gave her a kiss.

The other four little ones weren't to be outdone. They ran over and simply smothered the royal visitor with their embraces.

What a scene it was! I had a lump in my throat as big as an apple. I just couldn't seem to swallow. Here we had been expecting a sober formal presentation. What we got was, as I told you, a meeting of a mother and father, who have been too long separated from their own babies, with five normal little children who incidentally happen to be the wards of Their Majesties.

Believe me, it was THE big moment of my life up to now. And I think Their Royal Highnesses were just as thrilled as I was. I was so happy that we, the guardians appointed by the King to care for these quintuplets, were able to give such a good account of ourselves. For Their Majesties could see that I had presented them with five as fine little subjects as any King and Queen could wish for.

Before it was over, the children came to me and told me that the Queen was very beautiful and very lovely. They culminated the visit by presenting the Queen with bouquets which they carried.

The beauty of this whole trip is that the children have come through it in better shape than any of us have. They just took it in their stride.

When Her Majesty came to me and said: "They are wonderful children", I was speechless. And the King just kept repeating "Wonderful! wonderful!" He couldn't seem to think of anything else to say, and to tell the truth, I could not either.

So the children have met their King and Queen, and all they remember about them, is that they are two very lovely, and very loving people. It is a lucky Empire that can claim such people as its sovereigns.

Hip Wrigglers Need Not Apply

By HELEN FOLLETT

IN WHAT manner do you get about? How do you walk? Or don't you walk? Maybe you lope or take long strides. Whatever you do, don't wriggle your hips and take little mincing steps; everybody will think you are a big sissy.

The hip wriggler makes herself a particularly obnoxious sight when she clumps along on spiked heels. Perhaps she conducts herself in that manner to get attention, of which she gets plenty. Women should be graceful, svelte, move with dignity and beauty. That many fall short of carriage splendor is proved by the way that the average girl ambles on her way.

When you step out of the house pull in your tummy, hoist your chest, take a deep breath. Feel vibrant. Step firmly on the ground with the body balanced. Let the arms swing naturally; don't hunch your shoulders or throw your head forward.

Keep tall, as tall as you can be. Your backbone likes that; and the habit will strengthen the muscles of the back and shoulders, giving them lovely lines.

Poor posture throws a girl out of the beauty race. On her the smartest frock loses snap and ginger. Many a woman has a reputation for wearing beautiful clothes, when there's nothing remarkable about her wardrobe; she just knows how to carry dry goods.

Some women are wearing artificial finger-nails. Just why, we don't know. If you want to play with these new whimsies you can get them at almost any beauty shop. If the shop hasn't them in stock the boss will order them.

Each nail has to be fitted, filed to conform with the finger-tip, attached with a special adhesive agent. Then the tinting is done. A real convenience if one has an injured claw.

Not much care of artificial eyelashes. However, all these novelties are interesting, give the pretty dollies something to talk about besides haywire millinery.

PRESENTATION

On Wednesday evening a large crowd of friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe, 8th. of Sidney, for the purpose of showing their appreciation of their life-long service to Scott's Church, and the neighborhood.

As Mrs. Dafoe's aged mother is an invalid there was no program.

Rev. H. B. Johnson of Sidney circuit, called the gathering to order. Miss Hutchison of Thurlow, favored with some instrumental music, and Mr. Wilmot Rose then read the following address and Mr. Earl Chapman presented them with a trilight floor lamp and a plant for Mrs. Sine.

The address:

Frankford, May 17, 1939

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Dafoe:

Dear Friends,—

We have gathered here this evening to spend a pleasant hour with you before your departure from the community.

We deeply regret your leaving, but at the same time wish you every happiness and success in your new home.

It is with joy that we extend our grateful appreciation for all your willing services in the church, choir, Sunday School and all social intercourse.

On all occasions you have been only too ready to assist in times of difficulty and sorrow.

To you, Mrs. Dafoe, the Women's Missionary Society, Women's Association, and Young People's Union, especially, owe more than an idle tribute for your unlimited interest in their work, in time, and in energy and talent.

We are glad you will not be far away, and trust you will carry with you happy memories of your friendships made here at Scott's.

Kindly accept this gift as a token of our gratefulness and an emblem of remembrance. May love, peace, and prosperity reign throughout your lives.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors:

Earl Chapman.
Ethel Chapman.
H. W. Rose.
Stella Rose.

Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe graciously replied, thanking one and all for their kindness and a cordial invitation was extended to all to visit them in their new home.

After singing "They are jolly good fellows", a delicious lunch was served which all enjoyed.

SALEM W. M. S.

The regular meeting of Salem W.M.S. was held in the church on May 10th. Meeting opened with the Call to Worship and Hymn 12, followed with prayer by Mrs. Sills. Business was discussed. Mrs. L. McLaren read a letter from the Presbyterial Secretary, Mrs. A. McCreary. Roll was called. Roll Call next month to be answered with a verse of Scripture containing the word "King."

Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Hanna. The president read "The parable of the Selfish Man," followed by the offering and dedication.

Mrs. Bruce Sherman, second group leader, took charge, opening with a poem, "To a Radio." Hymn 347 was sung. Mrs. Hanna gave a reading, "The Message That was Sent." A reading was also given by Mrs. Sills, "Ungrateful Gratitude." An interesting reading was given by the group leader.

Meeting closed with Hymn 92 and the Benediction.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Graduation and First Love

It is estimated that 1,100,000 boys and girls will be graduated from high school this June.

What's going to become of them after they've been handed that wonderful diploma? Probably it will be succeeded by a sort of let-down feeling. The thought of a successful graduation has buoyed them up for the past four years—the diploma, the key with which to unlock the success door.

In the succeeding weeks they may begin to realize that graduating from high school is just the first step. No big business men have asked them to sign up as junior partners. Summer jobs are few and those offered don't pay very well. The let-down feeling is apt to continue and may give way to discouragement.

Families who've made sacrifices to send boys and girls through high school may not always understand why good jobs are not forthcoming now that the youngsters have actually landed their diplomas. A good many parents have little or no realization of how hard it is for a boy or girl—even with a diploma—to break in.

At this time of life, the easiest thing in the world is to fall in love and that complicates the situation tenfold. No money to spend on the adored one. No decent job in sight.

In spite of these things, life has taken on a new radiance. The world is filled with rainbow glory. The boy and girl confide in each other that the job they regarded as automatic is slow in overtaking them. Strange how much alike has been their experience. Probably the boy and girl will agree to wait for each other, and no matter how old they grow to be, or what fate has in store for them in the way of success or failure, they will always remember this first dawning of love as the most beautiful of experiences.

A recent review of high school and college statistics shows that these first love affairs seldom end in marriage. They are apt to be just one of the lovely experiences that a grim old world hands out. More girls than boys have written to this column that they have the opportunity of going to college after high school but they turned it down because they did not want to be separated from Bill or Joe as the case may be.

A greater mistake in regard to one's future could not be made. A week or two ago, the United States Office of Education with the help of the W.P.A., made a comprehensive study of how men and women fare after graduation. Last week this column pointed out, through the same source, that among college men and women there were fewer divorces than among any other class of individuals in this country.

That of the men and women graduates, who wanted jobs, some ninety-five per cent were temporarily or permanently employed. Some three-fifths had never been idle. Only two per cent of the men and one per cent of the women had ever been on relief.

That the best paid careers for men were dentistry, medicine, law, public office, architecture, insurance, research, forestry, business and telephone work. That the poorest paid professions for men were journalism the ministry and clerical work.

That the best paid occupations for women were nursing and teaching. This column feels free to advice all young people who have an opportunity of going to college, or working their way through college, to take it without hesitation. The outlook is for happier marriages, better paid jobs, and greater all-around success. Besides if this love affair is the real thing, and not just a flare-up of youthful emotions, youngsters will learn to be patient and wait for each other.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Girl Thanks Man For Hospitality

"A says that it is proper for a girl to thanks a man for a pleasant time that she has had with him. B says that it is not. What do you say?" . . . . Shouldn't the gentleman thank the lady and not the lady the gentleman after a movie or theatre?" . . . "Isn't it considered enough that the girl gives her company to the gentleman for an evening's entertainment?"

These and similar questions arrive often in my mail, implying a proud and haughty attitude.

The queen has bestowed her royal favor and need not condescend to say "Thank you". She is so used to being served, to being begged for attentions, that she cannot be bothered with acknowledging them. It's absurd.

Let's look at this question from the point of view of common sense. The girl takes the attitude that, since her companion is a man, she need not thank him for his kind thought. But anyone who shows us courtesy, who makes a plan for our happiness, who offers us any kind of hospitality, should be thanked, in words and manner.

Since some girls do not look at hospitality or courtesy from the point of view of the man, let's consider him. He plans a pleasant party, wishes to make the girl happy, and do everything as generously as his income will allow. He enjoys being a good host to 'The Girl.' They have a wonderful time . . . . at least he thinks they did . . . and when he says good-night, he thanks her. Quite naturally he expects some indication that she, too has had a happy time. If it isn't forthcoming the evening ends on a sour note.

If you have been tight about saying thanks to your beau-of-the-evening, loosen up your heart and your tongue and try saying, "Thank you so much for asking me tonight. It's been fun." Or, "I enjoyed every minute of the evening, Tom. You always plan such nice things". And sound enthusiastic.

A pleasant note on which to end the evening's theme-song!

I hope the men readers of my column agree with me. Do you?

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Infected Milk Possible Source of Tubercle Baccilli

As we pointed out at the beginning of this discussion, the tuberculosis germ can be eaten by children as well as breathed, and it can be just as vicious when it attacks through the stomach as it is when it works through the lungs.

I have encountered many cases of children who contracted tuberculosis when no person with the disease had been within miles of them. But they had eaten food that contained the tubercle baccilli. One of the most common foods in which we find these germs is, unfortunately, one of our most important articles of diet——milk.

The reason for this is that cows are one of the few groups of animals infected by this disease. When the animal does become infected, she readily transmits the baccilli to her milk. As milk is the principal article of diet for babies and young children, I don't need to point to have you see what a dangerous situation it is.

Until a few years ago this form of contagion flourished uncurbed. No steps were taken to stop the spread of the disease in this way. But when public health departments began to deal with the whole problem of the spread of tuberculosis, this angle came in for a good deal of attention.

The first move made was to have cows inspected at regular intervals. In this way we were able to determine whether or not they were showing signs of tubercular infection. It was a real step forward, but it certainly didn't cut out the spread of the disease by this means. The interval between inspections was at least six months, often longer. So, while the inspections eliminated the animals with the disease at the time, it didn't do anything about those that might develop it a few days after inspection. These animals continued to pour out infected milk for six months or more. . . until they had their next inspection. And the milk from this infected cow was dumped in with all the other milk. Just imagine how many babies could be infected from just one such cow.

The next move we took was to produce a certified milk. This milk was guaranteed to come from carefully inspected herds. Also it was guaranteed not to contain above a certain number of thousands of bacteria to the drop. All this helped, of course, but the trouble was that we couldn't tell but perhaps some of the five or ten thousand bacteria might be tubercular baccilli. This step was valuable, however, since it led to milk companies choosing better herds and insisting on cleanliness in every stage of the handling of the milk. Only in this way could the bacteria count be kept so low.

The latest and most successful move to purify milk and destroy tubercular baccilli or other harmful bacteria has been pasteurization. Recently here in Ontario pasteurization of milk became compulsory. Of course cities have for some years insisted that milk sold in its limits should be pasteurized, but this is the first province to take the step. I know that other provinces and states will soon be taking the same measure of safety.

MOIRA W. A.

The May meeting of the Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Clayton Vanderwater on Thursday, May 18th with an attendance of 17 members and visitors. A delicious dinner was served by the hostess, after which the meeting was opened by the President, Mrs. Wallace McIlroy. The opening hymn was followed by the Lord's Prayer in unison. The scripture reading was given by Miss Betty Foster. During the business part of the meeting a committee of three ladies, Mrs. W. McIlroy, Mrs. L. Vanderwater, and Mrs. F. Herity were appointed to represent the W. A. at the next board meeting of the church.

A splendid reading entitled "The Best Memory System" was given by Mrs. Frank Emerson. Mr. Nelson Welsh and Miss Betty Foster sang a very pleasing duet "Those Songs My Mother Used to Sing." Mrs. Frank Herity gave a very appropriate talk on the visit of Their Majesties the King and Queen to Canada. A reading on "The Larger Service" was ably given by Mrs. Arthur Mumby. A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostess, Mrs. Clayton Vanderwater. The closing hymn was followed with prayer by Mrs. Frank Herity. Proceeds of dinner amounted to $3.50.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

The Tyendinaga East Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Robert Tucker for the May meeting. The meeting was opened in the usual manner.

The president spoke a few words of regret in losing one of the members, Mrs. G. McRae. Letters of appreciation were read. A very satisfactory auditors report was then given.

Plans for the district annual were made. Mrs. D. Waddingham was appointed District Director and the delegates were also appointed. The co-operative programme was then discussed and it was decided we take Speaker Service this year.

It was moved and seconded that the Institute buy roots for the flower bed on the church lawn. The programme in charge of Mrs. F. Kimmerly was opened by singing the National Anthem. Geraldine Mowers gave a Mother's Day reading and Doris Kimmerly sang "Everybody's Been Some Mother's Darling." Mrs. Percy Kimmerly gave a reading about the Royal visit to Canada. Another selection was given by Doris Kimmerly and Mrs. G. Toppings gave a paper on the control of household insects. The meeting was closed by singing "The Maple Leaf Forever" and lunch was served by the hostess and committee.

John Howard in "Arrest Bulldog Drummond," next at the McCarthy Theatre on the program with Charlie Ruggles in "Sudden Money."

BASEBALL MADE EARLIER YEARS IN HARD GOING

Marking Centenary This Year Historians Recall Game Had Caustic Reception from Sport Critics

(By Gardner Soule Associated Press Staff Writer).

Cooperstown, N.Y., May 24 (AP)—Accredited national game in the United States and fairly universal as a summer pastime in Canada, baseball is officially celebrating its centenary in this Ostega county town, "birthplace" of the game in 1839.

(Sports historians have proved the Indians did not invent baseball as the legend has it. It is admitted probably the first "ball games" were played by Mexican redskins as far back as 1583. They threw rubber spheres in the air and shot at them with arrows. It was the progenitor of trap-shooting rather than baseball).

Abner Doubleday invented baseball, right here in Cooperstown when just 100 years ago he laid out a diamond in a cow pasture. It was probably due to a mere flight of fancy, or to a spur-of-the-moment idea, on the part of the Cooperstown youth. He was merely trying to figure out some game that the village boys could play on the greensward.

But from his fight of fancy there came baseball—the national game of 125,000,000 people.

Cooperstown will get the crowds, of course. The events on the program will draw thousands of persons. There's Christy Mathewson Day, May 27, when Matty's bust in the Hall of Fame will be unveiled. There's the Cavalcade of Baseball, June 12, with the dedication of Doubleday Field, where the first game was played. There's an all-star game of minor leaguers, July D. Connie Mack Day July 24, when Mack and his Philadelphia Athletics will play at Cooperstown. And so on and on. Both major leagues are back of Cooperstown in the celebrations.

Humanity is slow to embrace new ideas. This quotation from De Witt's "Base-ball Guide for 1868" shows that baseball, in its early days, had rough going indeed: "The prejudice which existed against the game could now scarcely be imagined. The favor with which it was regarded may be judged from the observation used by an accidental witness of the game, who after looking on a while with unfeigned astonishment, exclaimed, 'I can't see what fun such great big men can find in hitting a little ball with a big stick and then running mad, and kicking at a sand bag.'"

Early Weapons

The first ball was home-made, a rubber, leather-covered ball wound with yarn. It was lopsided and about as lively as a hunk of putty. The first bats were improvised from rake handles, broom sticks and wagon tongues.

Doubleday experimented with teams of nine men and of 11 men. The first teams played any number of hands (innings) until one side scored 21 races (runs), thereby winning the game. The batter was out if a fielder caught his batted ball on a "fair bound."

The first uniforms, adopted April 24, 1849, consisted of blue woollen pants, white flannel shirts, and straw hats.

Baseball was strictly a "gentleman's pastime" at the start. Professionalism was not to appear until 1869. Up to then rules of the national association prohibited the employment of any paid player in a club nine.

However, rivalry between clubs of different cities became so lively that employment of expert players was a matter of common knowledge.

Professionalism didn't come in without a fight. Some observers believed that baseball was rightfully amateur and would be irrevocably damaged by the establishment of a gold standard.

Harry Wright's famous Cincinnati Red Stockings of 1869 were the first professional team. Annual salaries ranged from $800 to $1,400. A professional of today wouldn't raise his eyebrows for such chicken feed. Yet the Red Stockings marched all over the U.S. played all comers, and won 81 games without a defeat. That record has never been equalled.

Baseball went overseas the first time when Boston and Philadelphia sent their clubs to England in 1874. A. G. Spalding arranged the trip. The two teams played a series of exhibitions.

Yanks Win Twelfth Straight In Defeating Cleveland 7-3; Cards Hold Edge in National McCarthy's Men Gain Victory When Four Wham Homers Out of Park

REDS MOVING UP

Cincinnati Wins Eight in Row With Vander Meer Gaining Third Victory

(By Bill White Associated Press Sports Writer).

They'll have to enlarge baseball's "doghouse" to make room for all the candidates who clamored for admission today.

Chief among newcomers who won non-popularity contests either from their bosses or the opposition were New York Yankees, the Giants' Walter Brown, and the Dodgers' Cletus Poffenberger.

The Yanks are in for the simple reason they are too good. Cleveland Indians were the party of the second part yesterday in watching the world champions win again—spectacularly and with lots of homers. This was the 12th straight victory, 7-3.

Henrich, Gordon, Dickey and Rolfe all whammed balls out of the park.

It looks as though Brown, the Giant pitcher, had carved a big niche for himself in the doghouse, the way Bill Terry made him stand out there and take it in that eighth inning uprising the Pirates put on. Terry waved his bullpen pitchers to quit warming up, and so Walter dodged a hail of basehits, good for eight runs, that enabled the Pirates to win 13-4.

Poffenberger Fined $400

Poffenberger the other doghouse nominee, seems to have moved permanently to the kennels. Manager Leo Durocher slapped a pair of $200 fines on him for keeping late hours and insubordination and the only thing the eccentric righthander could say offhand was: "I know I'm stubborn but I'm not going to the game."

Apparently Cincinnati Reds were just as stubborn, only they all attended the fray and won from the Dodgers 3-2. Johnny Vander Meer was in rare form for his third—and the club's eighth straight victory.

Meanwhile the Cardinals kept the National League lead with a well carved 6-1 win over the Phillies. Bill McGee pitched and was good enough to make it five wins in a row for the Cards.

Chicago Cubs and Boston Bees slugged it out, the Cubs having the biggest bats, and winning 15-8. Buck Newsom, ex-Brownie gave his new Tiger bosses a victory today by scattering 11 Red Sox hits for a 7-2 triumph, the Athletics took the Browns by 7-3 and two runs in the ninth were enough to give the White Sox a 5-4 decision over Washington.

When the continent's best golfers start shooting for the U.S. open title in Philadelphia on June 8, Canada will have but one chance to capture the trophy, that represented in the person of Kasmir Zabowski, ABOVE, of Winnipeg, only one of six Canadians who tried to get past the qualifying round to succeed. Zabowski made the grade at Minneapolis.

KI-Y LEAGUE

The St. Mikes "Irish" moved up a notch in the midget standing of the KI-Y loop by virtue of a 9 to 3 victory over the Personality Kids at Queen Alexandra grounds last evening, while the Flying Arrows were forced to default their scheduled game to the West End midgets at Queen Mary grounds when the former club could not field nine players at game time.

At the Ann Street grounds the "Irish" piled up four runs in the second inning to romp home to a 9 to 3 win over the Personality Kids.

The lineups:

St. Michael's: Whalen, Schrieder, Fitzgibbon, B. Meagher, A. Meagher, McQuaid, Eaves, Sheperd and Shortt.

Personality Kids: J. Adams, Wardhaugh, Blaind, Goyer, Arnott, A. Adams, Sarrett and Rushlow.

Umpire: Ross Clare.

Score by innings:

Pers. Kids	000 111 0—3	runs
St. Mikes	042 021 x—9	runs

NEWARK BEARS MOVE INTO TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Jersey City Loses Pitchers' Battle to Syracuse, While Bears Win Slugfest

PADDEN BELTS HOMER

Main Reliance of Rochester and Newark Has Been Heavy Hitting

(By The Associated Press)

It looks as if the argument as to the relative values of good pitching and good hitting—as old as baseball itself—is about to be revived in the current three-day scrap for the International League lead. And, so far, the results in the pennant race are about as conclusive as those of the 100-year-old dispute.

Jersey City lost a pitchers' battle to Syracuse 2-1 in 12 innings and Newark won a slugfest from Baltimore 10-6 yesterday. As a result the Bears moved back into a tie for the lead, from third place. Meanwhile Rochester Red Wings took a day off to square up for the previous afternoon's doubleheader at Toronto, and wound up just one percentage point behind the leaders.

Jersey Giants, sole leaders from early in the season up to last Saturday, have come to depend more and more upon pitching strength lately. Only once in their last dozen games have they made more than five runs, and in the last eight they have used just 10 pitchers, seven of whom went the route.

Loses on Wild Pitch

Rollie Stiles, who had trouble lasting in previous starts, went the full 12 innings yesterday only to lose out to Jake Mooty's superb flinging. But he tossed away his own game with a wild pitch that left the odd run score. Mooty granted only six hits and no walks. He didn't get a run to support that until the 10th, and then Tommy Padden belted a homer in the Jersey half to tie the game again.

Newark has been getting occasional fine performances on the mound especially in the series with the Giants, and so has Rochester. But the main reliance of both has been heavy and timely hitting. The Bears banged out 13 blows under the floodlights at Baltimore last night, belting Pete Naktenis out with six runs in the second. Jim Levy, who belted three homers in four games last week, was the only Newark player to go hitless while Schulte took over the job of providing the daily homer. Gus Dugas smacked one for the Orioles.

Buffalo and Montreal were rained out for the second straight day.

New York, May 24 (AP)—Joe Louis has bet a $10 hat Baer stops Nova in five heats....Strange as it may seem, Bill M'Kechnie is hearing the wolves out in Cincinnati.... Some of the knockers think the Reds should be over the .700 mark ....Recent survey showed Johnny Mize only three games behind Babe Ruth's mark of a homer every 2.57 games made the year the great man slammed 60 round trippers for an all-time high.

Majoring in the minor ball leagues: Manager Dick Porter isn't playing regularly for Syracuse these days because he's lost his punch and found his paunch....Kiki Cuyler, the old outfielder, has rooted his Chattanooga Lookouts from seventh to first place in the Southern Association....Scouts say either of two guys now shortstopping for Kansas City will be ready to step into Frankie Crosetti's shoes when and if.... The Yankees are thinking of putting the lights in several of their farm club plants....First 1939 manager to feel the axe was Charlie Clancy of the Winston-Salem, Piedmont League Club.

Pro football reporters in Chicago say Charles Bidwell of the Cardinals and George Halas of the Bears either are inseparable pals or don't dare let each other out of sight.... Now they're coming each together ostensibly to see Baer and Nova... It ought to be fun when Halas tries to do business with Sid Luckman of Columbia and Bidwill with Marshall Goldeberg of Pitt which, confidentially, is what they're coming for.

Latest fight dope: Nova has a cold and Baer is wearing a mask to protect a sore beak..... First prices make Baer a 5 to 7 shot.... Patrick Edward Comiskey is developing a short left to support his sleep producing right....Looks like Fred Apostoli is out of luck here this summer unless they throw him against Ceferino Garcia.... Solly Krieger didn't add to his box office value when he lost to Conn and furthermore, he's liable to lose to Al Hostak in Seattle next month ....Tony Galento is due to pitch camp at Asbury Park tomorrow if they can get the arena done in time.

LOU NOVA READY FOR MAXIE BAER NEXT WEDNESDAY

Troublesome Cold Shaken Off by Nova, While Baer Is in the Pink

NOVA CONFIDENT

Baer is Odds-on Favorite but Price Has Dropped in Last Few Days

(By Gayle Talbot Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, May 24 (AP)—Lou Nova, most promising of the young heavyweights, had about shaken off a troublesome cold as he and Max Baer, the former playboy champion, settled down today to their final week of training for next Wednesday night's 15-round elimination bout at Yankee stadium.

Lou contracted his cold while riding elephants and chinning the bar with a family of monkeys at his Nyack, N.Y., camp one cold afternoon for the benefit of photographers.

Promoter Mike Jacobs got his worst scare, though, the time Lou boxed with a trained elephant. They had strapped a glove on the end of the animal's trunk and the two of them were fooling around and having a big time until the prizefighter slipped and partially fell. Whereupon Jumbo let loose a swing that, fortunately, swished an inch past Lou's chin.

But nothing more serious has happened, and it looks as though the two husky Californians will reach the ring in prime condition.

Baer, no longer in the first flush of youth and without a fight in over a year, has put in a month's hard work up at Ferndale, N.Y., and looks good. Nobody knows exactly, though, how much the careless years have taken from his once magnificent constitution.

There isn't the same doubt about Nova. He's young, powerful and saturated with confidence. Jim Braddock, the former champion, has raved so steadily about Lou lately that the odds in favor of Baer have begun to drop.

Most popular opinion now seems to be that Max will have to win by a knockout in the early rounds. Nova figures to out-wrestle him over the long haul.

Perhaps the oldest hockey club in existence, the Victoria Hockey Club of Montreal, who for the past 65 consecutive years have participated in Canada's national game, have ceased to exist. Recently the 'Vics' transferred all of their liabilities and assets to the Westmount Club of the Quebec Hockey League. Sixty-five years of uninterrupted operation is a formidable one and one well to be proud of, taking into consideration the Victoria Hockey Club has won the Stanley Cup during that period. Old timers tell us the old 'Vics' stimulated the game with their continued efforts towards the betterment of hockey in the previous century and kept the game of hockey alive when it needed support. "Realizing that times and conditions change, the Victoria Hockey Club has decided that rather than compromise with what they regard to be true principles of amateur sport, they would withdraw from active hockey," were the reasons given by President Paul Smith.

Times and conditions do change, but then we have seen the cycle or pendulum of sport swing backward and forward also and maybe President Smith's remarks will sooner or later strike home. As early as 1895 the old 'Vics' won the Stanley Cup, but strangely they were never successful in lifting the Allan Cup, despite the fact the name Victorias has been synonymous with the word amateur for so many generations. However, back in 1927 the 'Vics' were the first Canadian hockey team to tour Europe, other than previous Olympic clubs, and left such a fine impression that annually Canadian hockey teams tour Europe in this day and age. They were also the first Canadian team to play hockey in the U.S.A. It was just 46 years ago the Victorias journeyed to Providence, where a shinny style type game was played. The passing of the old 'Vics' from Canada's amateur hockey picture leaves one of the cleanest memories of sportsmanship, one cannot fail to admire. It is too bad this type of sponsorship is being eliminated by the present-day commercialism of "shamateurism."

Although it won't prove of any great interest in Belleville, Miss T. Mantle, secretary of the Ontario Branch of the Women's Athletic Federation of Canada today announced the Dominion's track and field championships will be held in Olympic Stadium at Hamilton on Aug. 12th which reminds us the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. track and field day will be held at the O.S.D. grounds on June 3rd.

Do you remember when Bill Stewart, chief referee of the National Hockey League in 1936 and umpire in the National Baseball League, signed to manage Chicago Black Hawks two years ago. Hawks won the Stanley Cup in their first season under his guidance, after a hard last-month fight to win playoff status. He was deposed last season?

Here's something: Walter Shine, Wellsville, N.Y., is organizing a team of one-armed players for a tour of the country in 1940. Says there are many good players with only one arm who are denied a chance to play because of physical defect. Applicants must be under 35. Anyone interested can reach Shine at 128 E Dyke street, Wellsville, N.Y.

Considerable progress is being made towards the erection of the new motorcycle dirt racing track out in Stoney Lonesome by the enthusiastic members of the Quinte Motorcycle Club. The boys have received information and instructions from George Pepper, from England, regarding the construction of the base of the speedway and already a fine cinder foundation has been laid. Dirt track racing attracts thousands in Europe, Australia and even California and is said to be one of the most daring and thrilling sports on the sports calendar. If the sponsors meet with as much success with the pastime as they did with the 200 mile Canadian title race, the popularity of the game will be established.

Reading an English newspaper recently we observed where our own George Pepper broke the track record for standing start racing at Birmingham the other night. Riding against first division riders, George won two firsts at West Ham and later returned to Newcastle, where he is captain of the team, and took 15 out of a possible 16 points in another meet.

ADD SPORTEYS .. ..hi.fix ..

Employing Czechs, Slovaks and others from their "protectorates", Germany defeated Poland in the first round Davis cup tennis matches recently. In Warsaw, where the matches were played, the crowd took up the cry—"We want to play Germans, not international teams from all over Europe." Germany now meets Sweden in the second round and maybe after defeating Poland at tennis Hitler's henchmen will count it another major bloodless victory.

The U.S.A. isn't the only place where screwy sports angles develop. Over in England they are advertising the Len Harvey-Jack McAvoy bout of June 22nd, for the "world light heavyweight championship," simply because John Henry Lewis, the recognized crown holder is said to have failed to pass some medical test.

We're Telling You—Babe Ruth recently turned down $25,000 a year to referee wrestling bouts.... Al Simmons says he'll quit baseball when he has $200,000.00, he's got something like $175,000 under the old umbrella now...."Boots" Poffenberger, of the Dodgers, was fined $400.00 for breaking training rules by Manager Leo Durocher yesterday and was indefinitely suspended in the bargain.... With Ted Reeve having left Queen's for his post coaching the newly organized Montreal Royals, it does begin to look as though the proposed 'big six' football loop is in the bag....Red Townsend's rejuvenated juniors get their first taste of league competition versus the Oilers tonight.

DEFINITE indications for stabilizing the fortunes and the affairs generally are found among this day's planetary configurations. It appears as though a static condition or a long frustrating matter might be swept away to make way for substantial advancement or increased possessions, real as well as personal. [illegible] might be an inheritance, trust, insurance, or increased value of a stagnant investment. All this should have very happy reactions on the personal life.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a decided change in the fortunes during the coming year. Either rich reward for steadfastness and industry an inheritance or a substantial increase in property or an investment may give stability to the affairs increasing domestic and social prestige and happiness.

A child born on this day may have many sound and enduring qualities for making a successful, useful and happy life. Its substantial talents and sterling qualities may attract an inheritance or some other token of appreciation.

INDIANS, TRAPPERS

members of what once was a powerful Indian tribe. And for once the strict police barrier was released momentarily to newspapermen.

The rest of the reception was along the usual formal lines of a civic welcome. The royal party detrained at the Port Arthur station while a band played "God Save the King," and a field battery fired a 21-gun salute.

From the station, the royal couple in their maroon-colored touring car, followed a short route through the city and into the twin city of Fort William. Through most of the 90 minutes their Majesties travelled through the cities, a fleet of lake boats that carry grain from the lakehead for distribution the world over, maintained a deafening row with their whistles.

Greeted by Mayors

At the Port Arthur station the royal couple were greeted by Mayor C. W. Cox and his wife, who drove in another car to the city boundary where their place in the procession was taken by Mayor C. M. Ross and Mrs. Ross of Fort William.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, accompanying their Majesties, introduced to them his Minister of Transport, Hon. C. D. Howe, who represents Port Arthur in the House of Commons.

The reception took on a strong international aspect as hundreds of United States school children — waving Canadian flags and Union Jacks—as well as hundreds of other visitors from across the border lined the parade route. One group from Minnesota came here in 50 cars, accompanied by several Canadian cars which had gone to the border to meet the 300 occupants.

Arrival at the Lakehead meant the official "handing over" of the royal train by H. J. Humphrey, vice-president and general manager of Eastern Lines, Canadian Pacific Railways, to W. M. Neal, vice-president and general manager of Western Lines, who will accompany the party to the Pacific coast.

AT THE McCARTHY

"SUDDEN MONEY"

"ARREST BULLDOG DRUMMOND"

He's in the money!

This time it's "sudden money", and the winner (or should we say "victim"?) is Charlie Ruggles, in Paramount's hilarious new comedy, "Sudden Money", which will have its first local showing next, at the McCarthy Theatre. For Charlie — America's favorite screen husband-and-father—plays a sweepstakes millionaire on the loose in this story of the experiences of a madcap family when "papa strikes it rich."

Ruggles' lucky strike enables each member of his family, including himself, to go out on a terrific spree and satisfy his or her hitherto suppressed desire. Ruggles hunts up his old college pals and forms them into a swing band in a frantic bid for fame in the music world. Marjorie Rambeau, his flighty wife, becomes an ardent devotee of painting until she is royally fleeced by her own instructors. His brother-in-law goes out to beat the racetrack "bookies" at their own game with his "foolproof" betting system. His daughter, Evelyn Keyes, throws over her hard-working boy friend, enters an exclusive school and has a whirlwind love affair with a handsome playboy.

"Sudden Money" has its serious side in the half-comic, half-tragic disillusionment each member of the family meets. The cold reception Ruggles and his band gets makes his old cigar store job look much more attractive. Miss Rambeau sadly realizes that her well-appreciated cooking is her greatest "art." Broderick Crawford; the brother-in-law, goes back to making his winnings "on paper", while Miss Keyes gradually sees through the glamour surrounding the spoiled playboy and his fast set.

"Arrest Bulldog Drummond"

As a second feature offering on the program which opens next at the McCarthy Theatre, preceding "Sudden Money" patrons will have a chance to see their favorite screen sleuth "Bulldog Drummond" in his most thrilling mystery drama entitled "Arrest Bulldog Drummond", John Howard, Heather Angel, H. B. Warner, Reginald Denny and E. E. Clive, head the cast in this super-special, which promises to be even more exciting than the recent Alfred Hitchcock thriller, "The Lady Vanishes."

"Fisherman's Wharf"

"The Flying Irishman"

Presented for the last times today, you are urgently requested to see two of the finest motion picture productions of the year at the McCarthy Theatre, first Bobby Breen, Leo Carrillo and an all star cast in the musical comedy-drama "Fisherman's Wharf" and the outstanding second feature entitled "The Flying Irishman" which brings to the screen Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan in the story of his life.

AT THE BELLE

"Dark Victory"

As the heroine of "Dark Victory" the Warner Bros. picture now on the Belle screen, Bette Davis enacts what she herself considers the finest part she has ever portrayed in the course of the brilliant career that has established her indubitable as the greatest actress on the screen today.

The role is so unlike any that Bette has ever done before and the picture itself is so far from the beaten track of banal, trite theatrical formula that it is likely to create more comment and discussion than any production which has come from Hollywood in many a day.

It is a poignantly tender love story, one of the saddest and yet bravest tales ever told. On its face it is an up-to-the minute story about hard and brittle modern people, but under that bright surface it is a narrative of elemental emotions as old as the world itself.

The girl portrayed by Bette is the gay and popular leader of a hard-riding, hard-drinking social set. There is nothing of the spoiled heiress about her, however, for she is presented as a thoroughly likeable modern miss.

Into her life of heedless gayety, the shadow of tragedy creeps when she becomes the victim of a mysterious malady. Taken against her will to consult a brilliant young doctor, she falls in love with him and he with her. But theirs can be no ordinary, placid romance, for, unknown to the girl, the young doctor has diagnosed her illness as one from which she cannot recover.

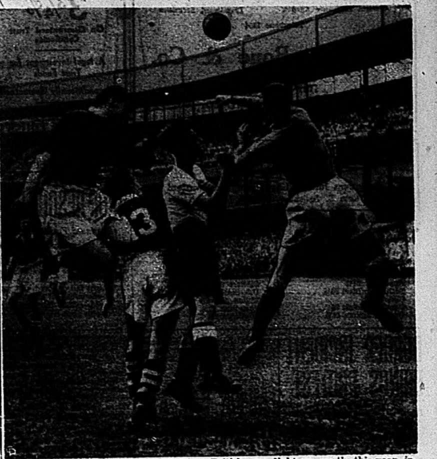
That is the premise from which the authors spun as moving a thread of narrative as has ever been transferred to the screen. The beautifully written screen play of Casey Robinson was based upon a stage play written by George Emerson Brewer, Jr., and Bertram Bloch.

The young doctor who shares the romance with Bette is played by George Brent, and other important characters in the story are portrayed by Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald (newcomer from the stages of Dublin and New York), Ronald Reagan, Henry Travers, Cora Witherspoon and Dorothy Peterson.

Pictures of Royal Visit

The first pictures of the Royal Visit are a special attraction at the Belle Theatre tonight only. One entire film is devoted to their tour and is noteworthy for the number of close-ups of Their Majesties while on parade and at state functions and the photography is unsurpassed. Artie Shaw and his Orchestra are another feature on the same program.

Touring Scottish Football Team in New York



Here's a scene that will make many a British eye light up, partly this year, in anticipation, because engaged in the football battle are the Scottish Football Association's team, currently touring United States and Canada, and an eastern United States all-star squad. Tommy MacKenzie, Scottish left halfback, goes 'way up in the air as he heads the ball near his opponents' goal, the goalkeeper coming out at the same time in an attempt to punch the ball away. The player wearing No. 13 is Tommy Garrett, Scottish centre. The touring team was held to a 1-1 tie by the American stars. Next Canadian stop is at Calgary on May 31.

Canada's Pedalling Pedens Win N. Y. Six-Day Grind

Two of Canada's outstanding athletes in the realm of international sport have been the Peden brothers, Torchy, the elder and Doug, who have been riding their racing bicycles to fame for some years now. Here they are seen after they had been paired as a team and come through to victory in the 65th international six-day bike race staged in New York's Madison Square Garden. The New York grind is generally considered tops among the many staged all over the continent, but this most recent one was something of a flop as far as attendance went. Doug Peden is on the LEFT ABOVE.

"Here's Wishing You Luck—But Not too Much"

They might be trying to pull it apart like the Thanksgiving wishbone or maybe they're trying to decide who should keep it for luck, but Paul Runyan and Ralph Guldahl appear to be enjoying themselves as they meet on the links while tuning up for the American open that takes place early next month. Runyan, a lightweight measured by boxing standards, won the P.G.A. crown last year by beating Sam Snead in the final, while Guldahl, one of the bigger men in the links game, will be out after his third consecutive triumph in the open, something only achieved once before in its history.

BORDER INCIDENT BRINGS PROTEST

Nazi - Dominated Government of Danzig Concerned About Man Being Hurt

Danzig, May 24 (AP)—A new border incident today brought a sharp protest to Poland from the Nazi-dominated government of Danzig.

A truck driver from Elbing, in East Prussia, was said by Danzig authorities to have been shot at by Polish customs officials at the bridge head near Tscew. The can was not hurt. He had been starting to cross Pomorze to Germany.

The Danzig government today handed Poland's diplomatic representative two notes categorically rejecting the Polish version and demands concerning the fatal shooting of a Nazi by a Pole at Kalthof Sunday. (Polish authorities said the Pole fired in self defence.)

DANCE HELD AFTER CHURCH SUPPER

Schrieber Folk Put in Full Night of Dancing After Seeing Their Majesties

Schreiber, Ont., May 24—(CP)—After the semi-annual church supper Schreiber turned last night to a full night of dancing, modern and old-fashioned, as the long celebration of the visit of the King and Queen continued.

The tables groaned with food in the church basement. Everyone talked, of course, about how charming Their Majesties had been in their 15-minute visit to Scheiber. Nobody ever misses the church suppers here and anyone who had brief audience with the King and Queen was literally besieged by questioners.

Today, being Victoria Day, will be another holiday. So there was no telling when the annual "calico dance" would break up. The girls, according to custom, came in gingham gowns and the boys lost little time in doffing their coats.

Folks agreed it was the first time in Schreiber's history that it hadn't rained for a big event. Schreiber's Sports Day is always a big event but it never is held— it always rains.

30 BLUEJACKETS ARE WITHDRAWN

Japanese Naval Command Protests Landing of British Tars

Shanghai, May 24 (AP)—Thirty British bluejackets, set ashore yesterday in Pootung to protect a British owned cotton mill, withdrew today after the landing of a Japanese marine detachment and a Japanese protest to the British consulate.

Pootung, on the east shore of the Shangpoo River, opposite Shanghai, is Japanese-occupied territory. The Japanese naval command protested that the British had no right to land troops in such territory and demanded withdrawal.

The controversy developed from a strike of Chinese workers at the Pootung Mill. British authorities requested the Japanese detail police to protect the property. The Japanese replied that police were under local Chinese government control. The Pootung government was established under Japanese auspices.

The four-power controversy over control of Kulangsu, International settlement at Amoy, continued in a deadlock today, according to Japanese press reports, as a result of the "self-centred opinions" of United States, Britain and French naval authorities.

Authorities of the western powers landed naval forces in a three-to-one ratio at Kulangsu last week after 42 Japanese marines came ashore in connection with demands for a share in administration of the settlement.

EMPIRE DAY AT KIWANIS CLUB

Professor Prince of Queen's Gives Address on King George VI

In keeping with the occasion of the visit of the King and Queen to Canada, the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon on Tuesday celebrated Empire Day and listened with a great deal of interest to the splendid address given by Professor Prince of Queen's University on the subject "Fear God and Honor the King." Harold Barrett, who is ever willing to help on all occasions delighted with two solos "Hail King George" and "Pal 'O Mine," with Ross Hunter at the piano. "Dick" Flynn, president of the club presided and Jack McIntosh led the community singing.

P. C. MacLaurin gave a detailed description of the visit of the school children to Kingston to see Their Majesties and in his short address stated that of all who assisted in looking after the children on the trip, Reg. Moncrieff should be given the major credit. "He would not admit defeat," said Mr. MacLaurin and to his enterprise and his able co-operation by those in sympathy with him, the children were given the treat of their lives." The speaker told the members there were no mishaps, there were no trouble with the children and they were given the preferred position in the Richardson Stadium and were congratulated by Colonel Hall of Peterboro. The Collegiate band and Cadet corps was also praised and in all the children made an excellent showing. The speaker also praised the nurses who gave of their time willingly and he thanked the club for the donation that allowed about 200 children to make the trip, who would have been otherwise disappointed. As was the case with all those who saw Their Majesties, Mr. MacLaurin added his words of praise, [illegible] that the Queen was magnificent and that the King was a King in every sense of the word.

Ted Hughes introduced the speaker of the day, stating that Professor Prince was History teacher in Queens and well liked by the student body and a man of great learning. Professor Prince in opening his remarks stated that the phrase, "Fear God and Honor the King" had dominated through the ages of English history and the present King was a noble example for all. "He is not a superman by any means," said the speaker, "but he is human and greatly like his beloved father, who stated after the jubilee parade, when such a wonderful reception was given him, 'I am just an ordinary sort of a fellow.' King George has a marvelous devotion to duty and he is living to the height of his great office,' said Professor Prince. "He has overcome many of his difficulties, especially stammering. He is not palace-minded and not much for ceremonial. The King was a naval cadet and is an engineer at heart, but when his health broke down in the navy he entered the Air Force. The present king has also been referred to as the Industrial Prince for he has always taken a keen interest in the working man's problems and he likes nothing better than to be in overalls."

Professor Prince stated that King George was a real sportsman but he was happiest when he was at a football final at Wimbledom Stadium "The King is also a good cricketer and a tennis player of note," said the speaker. His life was traced through University after the war and his marriage to Elizabeth, who was never carried away by flattery The King stresses the continuity of the British Crown, suggests the religious principles and recognizes the importance of Parliament. He is the symbol of the Commonwealth of Nations and he has a common belief in God, will protect the weak and do justice in supporting democracy.

The thanks of the club was expressed by Dr. Cronk.

DROP RESCUE BELL

ilies of the entrapped men, announced none of the names of those rescued would be given out until the rescue operations had been completed. Thus the blow that might fall on loved ones would fall at one swoop—if all aboard are not saved—rather than rising and falling with each trip of the rescue bell.

Hope for the imprisoned men soared as the diver reported at 11:14 a.m. EDT he had hooked a line on the crippled submarine on which a rescue chamber could be lowered.

"We should be ready to lower a chamber in half an hour," was the message sent from the rescue ship Falcon as soon as it received word from the diver. It added the sea was calming.

At the same time a new message came from the men trapped on the ocean floor, and the Falcon flashed "Squalus reports conditions comfortable and satisfactory."

Even as hurried preparations were made to lower a diving bell—to be used as an escape chamber—a high source at the rescue scene said unofficially it was believed 26 of the 59 men aboard already were dead.

Account for 33

Through code signals from the entrapped craft it was learned those in the forward compartments had been able to account for "only 33 of the men on board."

As the first diver landed on the Squalus, a message was flashed from the submarine rescue ship Falcon that he would attempt to "attach a down haul (line) for the use of a rescue chamber."

Weak messages were received throughout the post-daylight hours this morning from the entombed men, the last shortly before 9 a.m. E.D.T.

Simultaneously, actual rescue operations got underway. Shortly before 8 a.m. E.D.T. observers saw 35 of the navy's crack divers assemble on the deck of the rescue ship Falcon. One man, encased in a heavy diving suit, mounted a diving platform at the ship's side, preparatory to being lowered to the ocean floor, 240 feet below.

Just as the descent began, observers on non-navy vessels were ordered from the scene, but it was assumed other divers followed in swift succession in an effort to close the open induction valve that had trapped the men in the newest and most powerful of United States submarines.

Talk By Signals.

Through tapped-out signals on the hull of the ship the authorities learned the craft's torpedo room was flooded and naval officials said it was reasonable to assume many of the crew were inside.

Captain H. R. Greenlee reported rescue boats had been unable to make any contact with the torpedo room although communication had been established with other sections of the submarine.

While the rescue ship Falcon was anchored over the spot where the Squalus rested in 240 feet of water—trapped by an induction valve that remained open during a dive yesterday morning—new signals were picked up early today from the forward part of the submarine.

In Morse Code the entombed men reported they were 'reasonably warm' and had plenty of food and clothing. They were entirely without power, however, and the only means of communication remained the hammering of signals on the steel hull.

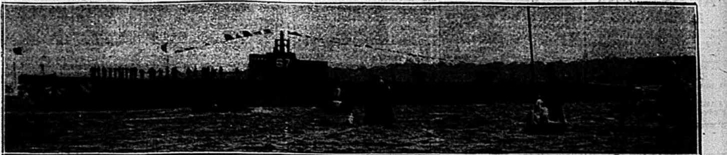
Gives Position

Apparently confirming reports the rescue boats temporarily had lost direct contact by buoy and other lines with the sunken craft, the Squalus sent up a red signal bomb at 7.10 a.m. E.D.T. to give her position. The bomb came up directly off the port side of the submarine rescue ship Falcon, which was riding a choppy sea on four-point anchors.

All messages with the stricken vessel were through the navy tug Wandank which stood a short distance from the Falcon. Admiral C. W. Cole, in charge of rescue operations, boarded the Falcon this morning after spending the night aboard the Sculpin, sister ship of the Squalus.

There were approximately 13 navy and coastguard boats at the scene and the cruiser Brooklyn was expected from New York by noon.

Type of U. S. Submarine in Which 59 Are Imprisoned 240 Ft. Below Surface



Shown above is the United States submarine Saury S7, sister ship of the Squalas S11, in which 59 men were trapped yesterday below the surface, of the Isle of Shoals, after setting out on a routine test assignment. The submerged craft was in touch with the crew of the submarine Sculpin by means of a new telephone device carried to the surface by a buoy. A rescue chamber capable of carrying 8 men to freedom was lowered today to the sunken submarine.

which they had brought along even the first meal of the day.

Canopy Over Red Carpet

An emergency crew of workmen was sent to the city hall to erect a canopy over the red carpet that led to the office of Mayor John Queen where the official civic greetings awaited their Majesties.

The railway stations and bus terminals were crowded, mostly with visitors taking advantage of special train fares for the royal spectacle. Many of them came from the United States, including a large delegation of the American Legion from the mid-Western States.

The Stars and Stripes were prominent in impromptu morning parades from the stations and from lodges whose members joined in international homage to their Majesties.

Ordinarily, the city would not have been awake so early after a night of revelry in the downtown district that made even the usual New Years' Eve celebrations appear small.

Crowds Linger

Far into the early morning hours crowds lingered in the downtown area after watching a colorful parade depicting the historical progress of the city once known as Upper Fort Garry, a fort and trading post.

Most of the route, however, was abandoned, long tiers of specially-constructed seats unoccupied. Traffic had been prohibited since seven o'clock, making the streets appear all the more deserted. Little groups that previously took up the best positions in the hope the rain would lessen, finally gave up their long wait and sought shelter on small verandahs in the residential districts.

Groups in Good Humor

Only cheering note along the grey, wet route was the good humor of the little groups and the occasional blaring of a band marching to parade positions. Many of them were from across the international border, here to join in the fun-making of Winnipeg's "Welcome Week," climaxed by the royal visit. Some represented high or public schools in Aberdeen, South Dakota, Moorhead, Warren, Steven, Halock, Norwood, St. Cloud, Detroit Lakes, St. Paul and other points in Minnesota.

But if the rain made it difficult for spectators it made an easy time of it for police and volunteer guardsmen who stood back in the shelter of storefronts and on house balconies. Among the first on duty were the St. Johns Ambulance Men and members of other similar organizations who established a score of stations for the aged and infirm.

Areas For 'New Canadians'

Other areas were reserved for "new Canadians", represented by Polish, Scandinavian, Icelandic, Ukrainian men, women and children, dressed mostly in national costumes.

Around the Canadian Pacific Station, the crowd began thickening. Umbrellas multiplied. The rainbow of colored slickers and raincoats enlarged. Along the curbs the crowds were six and seven deep for more than a mile and a half.

Prepared to follow the Royal Parade was a motorized spectacle of "Manitoba Marches On' with a half-hundred floats. The gala display depicted the strides in the Province's agricultural and industrial development. A company of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, four mounted trumpeters in brilliant uniform, Indians in all their regalia, "Couriers De Bois" led groups of Chinese, Icelanders, French, Italians, Ukrainians, Hungarian, Czecho-Slovaks, Norwegians, Swedes, Poles, all in colorful dress of their homelands.

Parade of Civil Guards

Along Portage Avenue hawkers and vendors pulled their wagons to the curbs and stood in doorways beside piles of cardboard periscopes, stools, camp chairs, cases of cold drinks and even boxes of cones for ice cream that was in no demand.

Only activity along the street was caused by the parade of civil guards marching to their unenvied posts. Along Main Street, for as far as one could see from the station, khaki-clad guards stood along the curbs, almost resembling a heavy picket fence.

As the rain gave no indication of letting up, merchants in the main shopping areas began clearing out their windows and selling standing space to only too ready spectators who had been wandering along the avenues, hoping to find such a spot.

Every upper window was jammed. Doorways too, were crowded. Even the sidewalks began to find favor in spite of the steady downpour. Along the curbs, little groups began to gather but about the only solid line in most sections away from key spots was formed by the veterans and guards.

Premier Bracken's Speech of Welcome

Winnipeg, may 24.—(CP)—Following is the text of the address by Premier John Bracken in welcoming King George and Queen Elizabeth to Manitoba during their Winnipeg visit today.

To The King's Most Excellent Majesty.

Most Gracious Sovereign.

May it please Your Majesty—on this happy occasion it is the desire of the people of Manitoba that I extend to you and to Her Majesty, on their behalf, on this, your first visit to our province, the assurance of their deepest loyalty and respect. On other occasions it has been our privilege to welcome on these Legislative grounds, other members of the royal family; and there are many present in this gathering who still cherish the memory of a previous welcome in honour of your beloved father. The memories of that visit have increased, if that were possible, the anticipation with which our people have looked forward to the visit, at this time, of his son, Your Majesty, and Your Gracious Consort.

Pioneers in Westward Extension

On this occasion we would have Your Majesty sense the deep spirit of loyalty and gratitude on the part of every section of our people, to the crown, for all those virtues in our institutional life, which you so well represent, and so greatly ennoble in our sight. We would call to your mind the long line of courageous pioneers in this new land, who have helped make possible the westward extension of our democratic institutions of government, and with them, the spirit of toleration, and of justice, for which the British Crown so steadfastly stands. Those venturesome spirits, who, in an earlier day, made their way to the vast Prairie regions upon which you have this morning entered—those sons and daughters, chiefly of French and British origin who earlier wrought with unremitting toil and faith, to wrest this land from the wilderness—those pioneers, through acquisitions from many other lands, still speak the language of freedom not only in the words of their welcome, but in the pride of their achievements under British rule.

Many Races United

Our people now are of many racial origins—English, Scottish, Irish, Welsh, French, German, Scandinavian, Hungarian, Slav and others—but all are united in an effort to evolve on this Central Canadian soil a common citizenship of which they may all be proud; and in their welcome to Their King and Queen, while they do not forget the best traditions of their ancestral lands, they all meet their Sovereign today as citizens of Canada, proud to be members of the commonwealth of British nations, and prouder still of the traditions of the British crown and of British parliamentary institutions.

A Young People

As your Majesty well knows, we are still a young people. Although our northern coast line was discovered by an Englishman in the days of James the First, and the site of what is now Winnipeg was chosen by bold French explorers in the reign of George the Second, the era of rapid settlement did not begin until after Manitoba entered the Canadian Confederation as a Province of Canada, sixty-nine years ago. Then it was that the fur trade of the wilderness commenced to give way in relative importance to the cultivation of the soil; and upon this newer development has since been laid in large part, the foundations for our industrial and municipal life, in a wide expanse of territory. In agriculture, in secondary industry, and more recently in mining, we have made notable contributions to the economic prosperity of Canada. Thus, on these broad steppes of the central prairies, and in the vastness of our northern heritage, the people of Manitoba are endeavouring to do their part, in the upbuilding of a great nation, within the confines of the Common- of British Nations.

A Different Civilization

The civilization that is now being built, on these western plains, will necessarily be different from the civilization of the British Isles. Heredity and environment alike decree a new blending of elements, both human and material, in our corporate existence. The diversity of our ancestral strains will alter and at the same time enrich the fabric of our national life. From the blending of these strains will emerge, in due course, a new type, with its own virtues and its own individuality. And I am happy to add that it is the firm determination of every part, that there shall be preserved in this country, the legacy of all that is best in British institutions.

We are basing our political foundations on the expectation that under the sheltering influence of British traditions, the diverse elements of our national life will achieve the most fruitful development for their common good. We cherish free democracy in the high tradition of the ancient land of Britain; we uphold British justice as the safeguard of all our rights; and to the British Crown, as the symbol and personification of this sacred heritage, we affirm once more, with a united voice, our devoted loyalty. In an age, when clouds of passion and intolerance darken the horizon and threaten free institutions throughout the world, we speak again "the tongue our fathers spoke," pronounce again our faith in the democracy for which they stood; and because of the lengthening shadows of those clouds and because of that inherited faith, we are the more deeply conscious of the ties that bind us to the British Throne.

Expression of Affection

Hence it is, that to the persons of your Majesties, we desire humbly to express our steadfast affection, and to the Crown and what it stands for our abiding good-will. We trust your reign may be long and fruitful, and that it will add still further lustre to the long line of British parliamentary traditions —traditions which have made the name of Britain great, wherever men love liberty and pursue their happiness and political well-being in democratic ways. Our hope is that your stay in Canada will be a memorable one both to you and and to her Majesty the Queen, who, as mother in her home, as well as consort by your side, has already won the hearts of all Canadians. Our prayer is that it may be granted to you both, to be the means of further cementing the intimate relations that now exist, and which we trust will always exist, between the Crown and the people in our Commonwealth, and between the mother nation and Canada, the first-born of her Dominions.

Your Majesty—the people of Monitoba with one accord extend to you and to Queen Elizabeth a most cordial welcome; we trust that your brief stay in our midst will be an enjoyable one; and we hope that it may long be given to you both to serve as Sovereigns—King and Queen—the sisterhood of British nations, to which we in Manitoba are proud to give allegiance.

EARL ROSEBERY'S

Fairly Good Start

All were off to a good start except Bellman and Fairchance. Heliopolis sprinted away to gain lead from Rogerstone Castle, Dhoti, Major Brackey, Fairfac and Wheatland.

Larchfield took the lead from Wheatland, Heliopolis, Buxton and Hastings after three furlongs. He was still in front at the top of the hill, with Blue Peter making up ground rapidly from eighth place.

Blue Peter was coming up steadily approaching Tattenham Corner and at the turn for home had taken second place behind Larchfield.

Fights For Lead

A few hundred yards after the turn Heliopolis and Blue Peter were fighting for the lead from Hypnotist and Atout Maitge with Fox Cub coming up on the outside.

Two and a half furlongs from home Blue Peter was sent to the front with Casanova, Fox Cub and Heliopolis following in that order.

Fox Cub passed Heliopolis and was pressing Blue Peter until Smith used his whip. Blue Peter shot ahead and won comfortably.

Blue Peter, favorite since he won the guineas, justified his 7 to 2 price fully. Fox Cub was 100 to 6 and Heliopolis 100 to 9.

Going into Tattenham Corner it was anyone's race. As the field made the turn there was a jam and for a moment the Colts seemed hardly to move. Then emerged Blue Peter, in full stride and gradually pulling away.

Torrent of Cheers

A torrent of cheers greeted the familiar rose cap of the Rosebery colors and Blue Peter responded. Down the stretch he came with Smith hand-riding him.

Fox Cub made his move on the outside, tried gamely to catch the leader and managed to stave off Heliopolis in a closing rush for second place.

Millionaire and coster alike gave Lord Rosebery a tremendous cheer as he led his first Derby winner into the ring.

Lord Rosebery, whose father won the great race three times, lifted his grey topper and said, "I am a happy man to be able to carry on the traditions of my house."

It likewise was the initial Derby win for Blue Peter's trainer, Jack Jarvis.

Jockey Smith never had won the classic before. It was he, who brought Blue Peter home first in the guineas.

Proves Staying Qualities

Blue Peter gave the lie to those who had said he was not a stayer. But his time was three seconds behind the record of 2.33 4-5, established in 1936 by the Aga Khan's Mahmoud.

Heavy betting on the winner was said to have cost the bookmakers close to $5,000,000.

Jockey Ed Smith, grinning, said: "It was just another job. I'm very pleased but no more excited than if it were any other race."

Buxton was fifth, Admiral's Walk sixth, Hypnotist seventh, Pointis eighth, Ortiz ninth, Fairstone tenth, and Fairchance eleventh. Salford was last.

QUEEN MARY IS

Children Visit Mother

All Queen Mary's children now in London called at Marlborough House—the Dukes of Gloucester and Kent, with the Duchesses and the Princess Royal, Countess of Harewood, and the Earl.

The six left soon after noon for Epsom Downs and to see the Derby. Queen Mary was to have gone also but all routine engagements for the next few days have been cancelled.

Princess Elizabeth wrote her grandmother a letter of sympathy. An orderly brought it from Derby Buckingham Palace and it was put ahead of thousands of notes and telephoned messages for the Queen to see.

Lord Dawson went to Buckingham Palace, after seeing Queen Mary, to draft an official cable of the doctors' bulletin for King George and Queen Elizabeth on tour in Canada.

The Queen Mother, who will be 72 years old next Friday, cancelled all engagements for the next few days and rested at her residence. She was to have gone today to the Derby at Epsom Downs.

Queen Mary Walking About

Callers at Marlborough House last night were amazed to find the Queen walking about a few hours after she had been helped out of her wrecked sedan in suburban Putney.

Attendants at Marlborough House said the Queen spent a "moderately quiet night." Physicians expressed general satisfaction with her condition despite the jolting she got when her car was rolled over on its side.

The front of a two-ton truck loaded with steel bars for air raid precautions signs caught a rear wheel of the Queen's sedan.

Lady Constance Milnes-Gaskell, lady-in-waiting, suffered a grazed arm but Lord Claud Hamilton, comptroller of the Queen's household, escaped injury when the car turned over. The chauffeur, Oscar Humphrey, and a footman were shaken but uninjured.

Driver Not Arrested

The footman was credited with preventing a fire after the accident by switching off the motor. No one on the truck was injured. The truck driver was not arrested.

The crash occurred as the Queen was returning from the Royal Horticultural Society's gardens at Wisley, Surrey.

Shortly after the accident in which the Queen Mother was injured, another member of the Royal Family was reported ill.

The aged Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll and widow of a former Governor-General of Canada, is resting in Kensington Palace — where her mother, Queen Victoria, was born—and cancelled an appearance at Brighton yesterday.

On official statement said the 91-year-old Princess—who was Marchioness of Lorne when she was chatelaine of Rideau Hall, Ottawa, from 1878 to 1883—"is not seriously indisposed. She has not been well for some time and she remains in her room resting."

Her lady-in-waiting, who went to Brighton in her place, told an audience, however, that the indisposition was "serious."

The Princess, whose husband the Marquess of Lorne, subsequently became the Duke of Argyll and died in 1914, is one of three surviving children of Queen Victoria, the others being the Duke of Connaught, wartime Governor-General of Canada, and Princess Beatrice.

Injuries Not Serious

Intense relief spread throughout the United Kingdom and the Empire when official word was issued, that Queen Mary's injuries were not serious. Immediately messages were sent to her absent sons, the King, who at the time was travelling through Northern Ontario toward Port Arthur, and the Duke of Windsor at his Paris home.

Workmen and the chauffeur aided Queen Mary from the overturned car by means of a small ladder inserted through a window. The Queen Mother was taken to the nearby home of Dr. H. S. Revell who died last week. Fred Revell, son of the doctor, said the Queen took a cup of tea "which she said she enjoyed very much."

Nothing to Worry About

"She told us she did not think there was anything to worry about and indeed showed a wonderful spirit, because she was almost joking about it," he said.

Mr. Revell applied some iodine to a cut on Lady Constance's right arm and bandaged it. Lord Claud Hamilton suffered minor bruises and the chauffeur from shock but the footman escaped unhurt. The truck driver, although shaken, was not injured. The truck belonged to H. W. R. Winter, a transport contractor.

A royal car quickly reached the Revell house while arrangements were made for the Queen to be cared for at Marlborough House. A crowd gathered outside burst into cheers as Queen Mary appeared smiling to drive to her home.

GOV'T NOT TO BE

but he was not certain yet whether they were speaking in their personal or official capacities at the time the threats were made.

The question came up as the House adopted the last few items in estimates of the Pensions and Health Department. Today the House will continue debate in committee on the government's $750,000,000 loan authorization bill, which is providing the Social Credit members with their major opportunity of the session.

Amendment Defeated.

That bill got second reading yesterday after a Social Credit amendment proposing the creation of $200,000,000 interest-free money was voted down 127-13, with the whole House opposing the Social Credit group. A sub-amendment by the C.C.F., proposing creation of $100,000,000 credit for public works this year, was defeated earlier on division.

Finance Minister Dunning's mortgage discount bank scheme ran into heavy weather early yesterday when both Conservative and Social Credit critics urged that it be held up until next session, to allow adequate time to be given to the bill by the banking committee.

Opposes Bill.

Democratic liberties are more effectively preserved in Canada by the visit of the King and Queen than by all the censorship of subversive propaganda that could possibly be imposed, Malcolm McLean, Liberal-Melfort, asserted.

He joined with Angus MacInnis, C.C.F.-Vancouver East and Paul Martin, Liberal-Essex East in opposing a bill sponsored by Wilfrid Lacroix, Liberal Quebec-Montmorency which would prevent Communist literature being carried in the mails. The bill did not reach a vote.

All three declared their opposition to both Communism and Fascism but agreed that ideas could not be killed by use of force.

KING, QUEEN ENTER

Streets were just as jammed the night before the Royal arrival as were St. James and other Montreal downtown streets on the day of Their Majesties' visit. But nowhere was a window to be seen boarded up, nor window sills boarded off so that spectators would not fall through glass panes.

U. S. Visitors Pour In

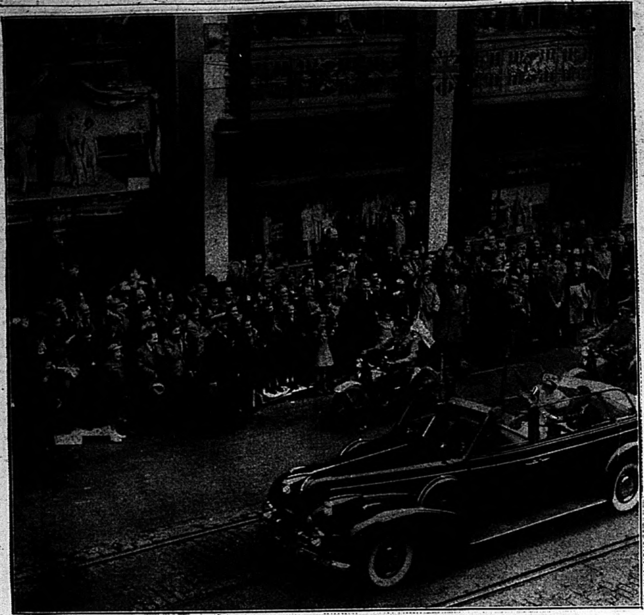
The city was given a good taste of crowded thoroughfares last night when practically all Winnipeg and environs, reinforced by thousands of tourists from across the United States border, lined the main streets to watch a parade picturing historically the development of the city that leads to the Prairie Provinces.

All shops remained open downtown. But they did little business. Every window, even those of restaurants, were lined with customers and help alike. They looked into avenues, decorated with great, colored panels hanging from every lamp post. Across the wide thoroughfares hung rows and rows of uncolored bulbs that gave the entire downtown section the appearance of a circus midway.

Scene Unequalled

Even for Winnipeg, "The gateway to the west", which boasts of its open hospitality and easy-going manners, it was a scene unequalled. Not since war days had there been such crowds downtown. Not since the Armistice had there been such gay, carefree abandon.

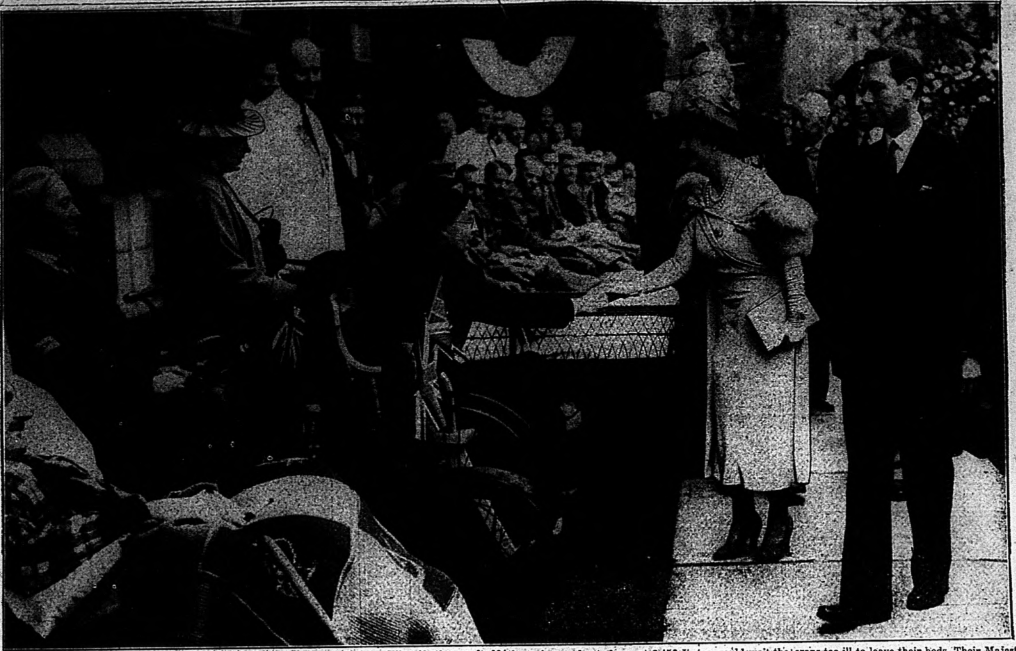
Twenty-four hours before the Royal arrival an influx of United States visitors had blocked all ports of entry. At Emerson, into which main roads of North Dakota converge, Royal Canadian Mounted Police were rushed to the scene to direct traffic. Cars of United States visitors were lined in two rows for more than a mile and a half.



When the King and Queen drove past The Star Building Her Majesty's eye was caught by Gerald Richardson's photograph of the royal family over the main door. She called the King's attention to it and they both looked up and smiled. The photograph is a 12 foot by 6 foot enlargement of a study made by Richardson at Windsor Castle in April.

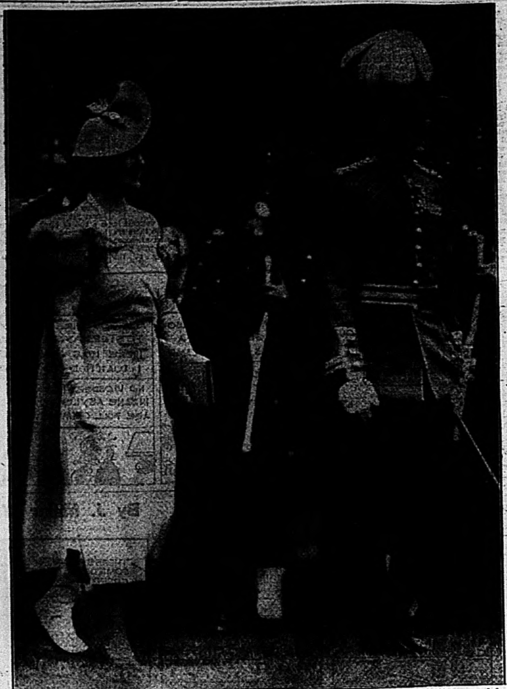
For the first time in history, the Woodbine King's Plate was run before the King and Queen. The King himself presented the gold-plated King's Plate trophy and the traditional 50 golden guineas.

The King's Plate, oldest continuously run horse race in North America, is about to begin. The entries are ready at the barrier, and the judges set in their stands. The King and Queen are seated in the royal box, left, where Her Majesty has had an attendant remove two large baskets of flowers which obstructed her view. The box still remains banked with gay floral decorations, however. The crowd is just beginning to settle down to watching the great race, though a great many eyes are turned on the royal box instead of the track. Toppers of black and of pearl gray dot the gathering.

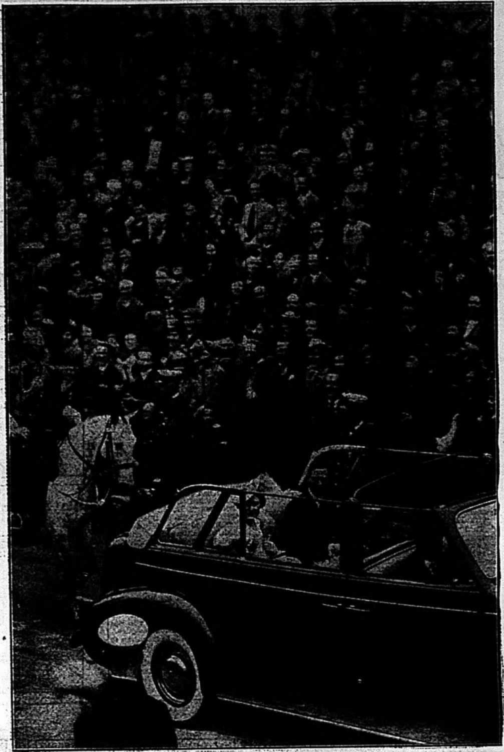


The King and Queen were away behind schedule in the latter part of their tour of Toronto ...... and here's the reason why, Christie Street Hospital was allotted just seven minutes of the royal time, but Their Majesties took matters into their own hands. What if others waited? Surely they would not grudge these men, who gave their eyes, their limbs, their health in the Empire's time of need, a few extra minutes of the royal presence. What if the train was due to leave at 6.45? It, too, could wait the royal pleasure. The King and Queen stepped right out of their minutely-gauged program to shake hands, to chat, to smile, to enchant the 250 men able to walk or be wheeled on to the lawn of the hospital. Then, to the veterans too ill to leave their beds, Their Majesties spoke, in turn, words of cheer and hope over the hospital's loudspeaker system. They lingered, not seven minutes, but nearly an hour. To those looking on, it was the most moving hour of a crowded day.

Woodbine Park stole the glory of Royal Ascot or Epsom Downs on Derby Day and became "Royal Woodbine" as the King and Queen witnessed the 80th running of the King's Plate, oldest continuously-run horse race on the continent. A great throng of 50,000 spectators were on hand to welcome Their Majesties, and the photograph above shows the fashionably-dressed spectators in the members' enclosure pressing forward to get a glimpse of the Royal Couple as they walked to their box. His Majesty owner of a racing stable, took a keen interest in the race, and he and the Queen warmly congratulated the winning owner, George McCullagh, when he came to the royal box to receive the coveted trophy and 50 golden guineas from the hand of the King. Their Majesties drove nearly all the way around the track in an open landau, so that they might be seen by all those present.



Military bearing is stiff, stern-faced. The men of the ranks and Brigadier R. O. Alexander, officer commanding military district No. 2, were impressed with the regal seriousness of the occasion. But the Queen, feeling quite at ease midst glittering brass buttons and bayonets, flashed her most engaging smile during the presentation of the colors to the Toronto Scottish.



Riverdale Park provided a huge campus big enough for all school children east of Bathurst St., and many from out-of-town. On the hills surrounding the flats adult spectators brought the park's total to 250,000, and the steep slopes of Winchester Drive, through which the royal car is seen returning to Danforth Ave., were packed with cheering crowds.

Eighty years ago Queen Victoria established Canada's most colorful racing fixture, which has become the oldest continuously run horse-race in North America. At Woodbine Park the King personally presented the King's Plate and the King's golden guineas to George McCullagh, owner of Archworth, this year's winner, while the Queen and Palmer Wright, club secretary, smile approval.

Pageantry of Ascot and Epsom, most fashionable of English track events, was equalled at Woodbine Park where horse racing truly became the sport of kings as Canada's Monarch and his Queen arrived in an open landau with a cavalry escort. Stepping from the carriage they entered the royal box to watch the running of the King's Plate.

MISS NAPOLEON

By Violet M. Methley

"Yes, he spoke, monsieur. He said, and his voice was not loud, but very clear, 'Courage, comrades! All is not lost. I will lead you to Victory!' Imagine it, monsieur! Those words—at that moment! Not a sound came from any of us, but our hearts were speaking. And then—then—he leaped upon the parapet. Hundreds saw him just as they—the others—saw him at Arcoli—at Austerlitz—at Jena! And suddenly we were shouting together—who began it, I cannot say. 'Vive l'Empereur!—Vive Napoleon!' Then . . . we were over the parapet, we were following him, we were amongst the grey devils as they swarmed up the slope. Among them—upon them, I tell you—driving them back, fighting them with our bayonets, with our fists—ah! if you had seen them turn and run—if you had heard them scream. For they could do nothing against us—against him. The Emperor was there; it was enough."

The young soldier leaned back, panting, wiping his forehead. He went on more quietly.

"They did not attack there again for some hours; when they did we were ready for them. And now, as I say, they will not pass!"

"And did you see—him again?" Hall asked.

"Once—far in front, in the thickest of the fighting; he had gone—but he had done what he came for. He returned to earth to save France, to put himself once again at the head of the army. You may remember, monsieur, that those were his last words at Saint Helena, a hundred years ago."

Hall nodded without speaking.

Into the silence which followed the voice of the French soldier broke again, this time almost imploringly.

"Monsieur, you believe me? You do not doubt that it was indeed the spirit of the Emperor which returned?"

Hall forced himself to speak though his voice seemed strangled in his throat.

"I believe . . . that it was indeed the spirit of the Emperor which was there."

"And it moves you, Monsieur, as it moves me . . .? Ah! One can see that. You will be glad, too, to think that your friend was perhaps there, fighting for France, with us, with him, the Emperor."

Hall sprang to his feet; stood in the tent door with his face turned away, raised to the sky, struggling to regain control before he attempted to speak again, trying to remember that it was what she would have wished, this end.

And there in the dark blue of the frost-clear heavens shone a single great star, like a silver lamp before the Altar.

Hall found his voice.

"Vive l'Empereur," he said softly, and in his heart added: "And her too . . . Mademoiselle Napoleon."

"Pink Cheeks"

By SARAH E. McCAHEY

When John Barton returned from lunch and saw the unusually large number of neatly-typed letters lying on his desk slide to be signed, he realized that they included his partner's who had left for the day after dictating the morning mail. He opened his pen with impatience and began hurriedly to affix his signature.

"Who is 'B. B.'?" he suddenly asked of no one in particular. Tom Norton, the expert accountant, who came in once a month to go over the books since the illness of their regular accountant, answered.

"The one with the pink cheeks," he murmured, adding up a column lickity-split with the tip of his fountain pen.

John Barton arose. He seldom entered the office reserved for the form's women typists, but he felt that a very palpable error he had just discovered warranted, and not knowing "B. B.'s" ring call, he pushed upon the glass door and entered their domain.

He scanned the line of six busy stenographers in a helpless attempt to discover "B. B." and then, nonplussed, crossed the room to his own special one.

"Correct that phrase," he said tersely. She inserted the letter, erased the offending phrase, and substituted a single word.

"That was a bad break, Barbara," she laughed to the girl at the end of the line, when their employer had left them. Your mind must have been wandering."

"Pardon?" murmured Barbara Beirne, indolently.

"You really have to consider your context, my dear, if you wish to avoid trouble. You wrote, 'she grinned,' for chagrined."

"I know it," laughed the girl, "and my little ruse failed after all. He hasn't noticed me yet!"

Back in his office John Barton wondered why the girl at the end of the row had raised half-frightened eyes as he had entered their room.

"But she's 'B. B.,' all right," he thought. "Looks as if she knew better than to make such a break, though." Then the spirit of criticism started, he began to find fault with the whole office force.

"Don't we pay our girls enough?" he asked his partner the next morning.

"Who says we don't."

"I never saw such a bunch of skinny girls in all my life. They look half-fed!"

"That's the way they want to look," rasped the partner, who was pater to a near-skeleton daughter.

"Some body ought to take them to lunch occasionally and give them a good feed, or they'll fall dead on our hands if they get much worse."

"Why don't you take turns asking them? You're a bachelor. I can't!"

"Tommy," said John Barton next day, "whom do you consider the prettiest typist we have here."

"Why," said Tommy without hesitation, "Barbara Beirne, No. 6, with the pinkest cheeks," he added dreamily.

John Barton contrived to dictate some letters to Barbara when his own typist was late and shortly after asked her to take dinner with him at the Sea Pavilion.

As they sat on the lovely pavilion overlooking the sea, eating delicious food and listening to entrancing music, John Barton decided that Tommy Norton's taste was unquestionably good. He appreciatively observed Barbara's pink cheeks grow pinker as the cool air from the water blew upon them.

It was with surprise that John Barton realized he was beginning to look forward with considerable pleasure to his occasional meetings with Barbara Beirne, and it gave him no little amusement to notice a growing reluctance on Barbara's part to accept his attentions. Obviously she hesitated because she must feel the difference in their social status, he thought, and she showed a girl would have openly encouraged him. He appreciated her modesty.

He began to dream of the time he would finally propose to her. Wouldn't she be surprised!

And then one night it rained. It came down in torrents just as he was about to enter his roadster on his way home for the day, and he jumped back to the office for his raincoat.

When he entered he heard voices in the typists' room, and the loudest one was Tommy Norton's, which didn't belong there; and the other, a tearful one, belonging to Barbara Beirne and she was talking.

"But Tommy, you were always saying how nice he was, and how much you liked him, and I wanted him to like me, too. I only wanted him to like me well enough to make him wish to give you Carr's place when he resigned, and when he heard we were only waiting for you to get a steady position before getting married."

John Barton proved himself a good scout when, later, he gave Tommy Norton Carr's position.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows were standing around the letter box talking and arguing about diffrent subjects such as the birthday party Sam Cross was suppose to have next week, and Sam said, Oh G, fellows I must of forgot to tell you, I'm not aloud to have that party any more, I been pretty bad and my mother just couldn't stand it any longer, so now that's absalutely definite.

Being bad news, and us fellows said, Aw heck, and Gosh shang the luck, and That's a heck of a note, and diffrent things, and Glasses Magee said, Well hay, how about us making a surprise party out of it as if we hadn't even heard about Sam not beiing aloud to have a party?

Sounding like a swell idea, and I said, Sure, when Sam's mother sees us all on the front steps with bags of lemmins and sugar and cake and diffrent things why good night what can she do?

Sure, she'll just have to leave us in and start a party, Skinny Martin said, and Sam Cross said, Like fun she will, that shows how much you know my mother, that'll just make her still madder and she'll leave you standing out there holding your bags and things like a lot of dopes.

Well all right, we'll just give him the surprise party in one of our houses, I said, and Sam said, I wouldn't be aloud to come.

Well then let's just give a party in his honor and drink lemminade toasts to him in his absence, Glasses said, and Sam said, Go ahead if you want, but I'd call that a dirty trick.

Still seeming like an all right of an idea to us fellows, the only trouble being whose house to have it in, and everybody made diffrent excuses for not having it in theirs, so it still looks like no party.

A sensation is always welcome in the world of fashion. So there are plenty of glances for an afternoon frock of black silk moire with white cotton eyelet embroidery at the cuffs and the hem.

HOCKEY IN MAY

Winnipeg, May 23 (CP)—Hockey in May was introduced to Winnipeg Forum last night as junior teams started a series of exhibition games on the Amphitheatre Rink's artificial ice as part of the Royal welcome week program. A crowd of less than 1,000 saw Kenora Thistles beat Brandon Elks, Western finalists 4-3.

There's a crowd in the blouse departments these days, and a popular choice is the dressy blouse of white chiffon and lace. A beauty has wide bands of lace across the bodice with a band forming the closing down the front of the bodice. The square neck is outlined by lace.

Busy days call for clothes that are smart yet simple. In this category is a suit of black novelty crepe, its high, curved bolero with white shirred crepe revers. The bodice has white and red polka dots in lines. White leather belt, white shirred cuffs on short sleeves of jacket.

33 Survivors of Submarine Brought to Surface

Sub Crew Rescue Most Dramatic in Annals of the Sea

Thirty - Three Survivors in Sunken Submarine Brought to Surface in New Rescue Bell

TO BRING UP DEAD

Commander of Squalus, O.F. Naquin, Last Man to Leave His Ship After Seeing Everything is in Ship Shape

Portsmouth, N.H., May 25 (AP)—The task of reclaiming the bodies of 26 men from the submarine Squalus at the bottom of the sea faced the United States Navy today.

As families of 33 rescued men rejoiced, divers were ordered to descend 240 feet to the muddy floor of the ocean to enter water-filled sections of the $4,000,000 submersible and make preparations for bringing the bodies to the surface.

But for that sad job and the raising of the disabled vessel, the Navy had completed, with the first use of the new nine-ton escape bell, one of the most dramatic underwater rescues in the annals of the sea.

Four times the grotesque apparatus was lowered over the side of the submarine rescue ship Falcon. Three times it came up smoothly and promptly, carrying men from the gloom in which they had spent more than 30 hours.

Why the Weather!

Latitude and climate! Many factors combine, and the influence of all determines the climate of a place. If all the factors were constant in their effect the climate of any place would vary monotonously from winter to summer and back to winter again, with no changes intervening. Some factors, such as latitude, are constant in their effect. Latitude determines the number of possible hours of sunshine which in summer increases from the tropics to the pole, while in winter the number of hours decreases from the tropics to the pole. Latitude determines also the intensity of sunshine which, of course, is greatest when the sun is most directly overhead. Both of these the number of hours and the slant of the rays, fix the amount of heat received on clear days.

NEWS ODDITIES AND BRIEFS

ONE MAN KILLED IN UNUSUAL TRAIN ACCIDENT

Newington, Conn., May 25 (AP)—One man was killed and at least 13 persons injured today when three coaches on the Washingtonian, New Haven railroad's Montreal-to-Washington express struck equipment projection from a car on a work train as the two trains passed each other. David Butters of East Providence, R.I., was killed.

INQUEST ORDERED IN DEATH OF YOUNG GIRL

Niagara Falls, Ont., May 25 — (CP)—Chief Coroner Dr. E. T. Kellam has ordered an inquest into the death of Miss Florence Vanluven, 16, Chippawa. She died in the hospital early today from a fractured skull suffered when she jumped from a car driven by Arthur Weaver, Sodom Road, as he slowed down in the village to let her out of the vehicle.

. . . .

A GOOD OMEN

Marmora, Ont., May 25 (CP)—The wedding party came up to the main street in an automobile and proceeded to turn down an intersection. A motor truck containing a horse became jammed in between the first and second cars of the wedding procession and the vehicles went down the street in that order. The incident brought laughs but was also regarded as a good omen in view of the four horseshoes in the parade.

BLACK PEPPER STOPPED BLOODHOUNDS SAYS PRISONER

Miami, Fla., May 25 (AP)—After two years, city Judge James Dunn has satisfied his curiosity about the way a prisoner who fled the city prison farm managed to elude bloodhounds that were placed quickly on his trail. Yesterday, again in the toils of the law, the same man appeared before Judge Dunn.

"Well, Judge, I'll tell you," he replied. "Before I escaped I got a lot of black pepper. Every so often I'd stop and sprinkle some on my tracks. I figured that would stop the dogs."

ROYAL NAMES UPON REGISTER OF OLD HOSTELRY

Old Hotel is Silent, and Looks at New Hotel Where King is to Stay

BUILT IN 1887

New 16 - Storey Hotel Was Built at Cost of $12,000,000

By STUART UNDERHILL

Vancouver, May 25 (CP) — The brown stone walls of a 14-storey building today shut in 500 empty rooms where princes slept and three generations of Vancouver citizens dined, danced and met in conferences.

Cradle of a city's social life for 52 years, the old Hotel Vancouver is silent, its vacant windows staring across a city block to where its namesake, opened today, will soon play host to Canada's King and Queen.

That honor the old hotel never knew, but Royalty often walked in its high-vaulted lobbies: the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent, the late Queen Marie of Rumania and Prince Chichibu of Japan.

Meeting Place That Was.

These are a few of the distinguished names its registers bear. Less easily recorded are the thousands of ordinary Vancouver citizens who used the hotel as a meeting place. It took the place of the

GERMAN PRESS RIDICULES MOVE

New Proposals to Russia from Britain and France Bring Gibes

Berlin, May 25 (AP)—Nazi commentators have switched from acclaim of the Rome-Berlin military pact to ridicule of Anglo-French efforts to bring Russia into a cooperative bloc.

A Foreign Office commentator called the moves "an open confession of faith in the encirclement policy," precluding "further cooperation of the big powers for peaceful solution of existing problems".

Great Britain's new proposals to Russia drew the gibes of the press, which at the same time told of "new provocations" by Poles along the Danzig border. Boersen Zeitung, commenting on Prime Minister Chamberlain's statement yesterday, declared Britain was bringing "the remains of her pride as a sacrifice to win a helper." This Boersen Zeitung called "both laughable and offensive.

Chancellor Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter published a cartoon showing a little soldier with a gun climbing a mountain toward a giant figure of Premier Mussolini. The caption was "Warsaw Threatens Rome."

Britain's Far-Flung Commonwealth Joined Canada in Paying Homage

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON

London, May 25 (CP)—The voice of Britain's far-flung commonwealth joined Canada's thunderous cheers yesterday in paying devoted homage to the King and Queen and the abiding solidarity of the empire.

While their Majesties were being acclaimed in far-off Winnipeg, 1,200 guests assembled at the combined Empire Societies dinner where the King's Empire Day broadcast reached them clearly.

Throughout the speech the audience stood in silent attention and at its conclusion joined in the resounding ovation which poured from the thousands of Canadian throats.

As one speaker remarked, it was an unique experience in the Empire's history and a lesson exemplifying the unity of the British peoples.

In reply to a message of loyalty and devotion from members of the societies represented, His Majesty expressed his thanks and added that he and the Queen are greatly enjoying their visit to the Dominion.

Touched Family Deeply.

The Duke of Kent who was the principal guest of honor declared the significance of the King's broadcast had touched his family deeply.

"One of the last things the King said to me before leaving for the Dominion was how much he and the Queen looked forward to making personal contact with so many Canadians," the Duke said. "I know it is the King's ambition to make the Empire even a happier and more prosperous family than it now is."

During the anxious times which the world had recently experienced, it had become necessary to re-examine one's attitude toward neighbors, the Duke of Kent said.

"If we in England have lived through anxious moments, I know they have been no less anxious for the self-governing dominions and the colonies," he declared.

"I feel very strongly this has made even more clear than ever the unalterable will of the peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations to live in harmony with their fellow

Freedom, Justice, Peace In Equal Measure to All True Greatness of Empire Says King in Empire Speech

By A. E. FULFORD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Winnipeg, May 25—(CP)—Off to a conquest of the West, as they have conquered the East, King George and Queen Elizabeth moved on to the wheat plains of Canada today, seeing the flat, fertile grain belt for the first time.

The Royal couple left here last night, 11 minutes behind schedule, on the silver and blue train, their "official residence" while they tour the Dominion for a month.

Something of the fervent reception they were to meet was demonstrated to Their Majesties immediately last night in a 24-minute stop at Brandon, Man. There the city's normal population of 17,000 was swelled to 50,000 by wheat farmers, villagers and their wives and children who shouted a welcome more spontaneous than anything the King and Queen had heard until that time.

Newspapermen travelling on the pilot train, running ahead of the Royal train, stopped off to see the demonstration when their eyes were opened by the size of the crowd at the Brandon station. In the warm prairie air, Their Majesties walked among crowds that delayed the official reception with their cheering.

Then Their Majesties returned to their sleeper to enjoy a rest well-earned by the tiring routine ceremonies in the pouring rain of Winnipeg.

Royal Car Kept Open

But behind them they left the never-to-be forgotten memories of a gracious King and Queen braving the steady rain in an open car so that Their subjects might get a clear view.

The crowd was not as large as expected but it was just as enthusiastic as any met across the Dominion. From early morning Winnipeggers, augmented by numerous visitors from across the international border and from rural sections of the province, stood in line to await a glimpse of Their Majesties as they drove by in the open car—kept open by order of Their Majesties.

They made the usual round of formal welcomes—from the city, from the province—and enjoyed a private lunch at the residence of Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper. But they passed up a rest period and a tea on the Royal

Boat Handled Heavily 50 Ft. Below Surface

Chicago, May 25 (AP)—The Chicago Tribune published today a copyrighted interview with Lieut. John C. Nichols, rescued from the United States submarine Squalus off Portsmouth, N.H. Lieut. Nichols' account of the disaster, obtained by telephone from the Naval Base Hospital at Portsmouth, N.H., follows:

"We left the Naval Base at 6.30 a.m. Tuesday. We had orders to practise fast dives. Everything seemed to be in order. The ship dropped down perfectly. She levelled off at 50 feet. A few minutes later we in the forward compartments had the first word that anything was wrong. The control-room was informed the after-engine room was flooded.

Handled Heavily

"The Squalus began to handle heavily. An order was given to blow the tanks and ascend to the surface. The crew worked fast, but the ship failed to respond. Communication with the rear compartments was cut off. We couldn't communicate with the engine room nor with the men in the rear torpedo room.

"Then the motors went out. With them went the lights. The Squalus began to sink. Whatever was wrong was aft. Apparently the ship was taking water by the air vent valves. The forward compartments were shut off by water-tight doors, from the flooded after parts.

"With no power the Squalus continued to sink. The descent seemed to be slow. We settled on the bottom. There was no great jar.

No Panic Among Men

"There was no panic among the men. All stayed at their stations. Orders were obeyed instantly. Pretty soon the forward marker buoy was sent up. We knew this would give our location and bring help. Then we sat down to wait—and listen—for the rescue ships.

"At 12.40 we heard the beat of the engines of the Sculpin, a sister ship. It was a great relief to all of us when she communicated with us on the phone. After that it was a question of holding out. We had great faith in the diving bell.

"The main thing was to conserve air—to use as little as possible and keep the supply pure. We purified it, when it got bad, with soda lime. When we had to, we released some of our oxygen.

"The men didn't talk much, nor move around a lot. Talking and moving both burn up oxygen.

Not Uncomfortable

"It was cold there on the bottom. In the forward torpedo room, where I was stationed, the temperature ranged between 34 and 36 degrees. Aside from the cold we were not very uncomfortable. Although the ship's power was gone, we still had lights—hanging lamps that worked on storage batteries.

"For food we had our emergency rations, but we didn't eat much. We just sat most of the time conserving strength, saving oxygen, and wondering. Most of the men stood up well physically. Two in each forward compartment—four in all—became a little sick, or perhaps just weak.

"When the bell finally was attached to the escape hatch, the men in the torpedo room were commanded to ascend first. The order included me specifically. With me went the men who seemed most nearly exhausted."

Rural Mail Delivery Contract Should be on Different Basis is Suggestion

PATRONAGE ANGLE

Ottawa, May 25 (CP)—The tender system of awarding rural mail delivery contracts today had the unqualified condemnation of a dozen members of Parliament opposed to the "vicious" effects of such cut-throat competition.

The long-disputed method of appointing rural mail carriers, with a reputed tinge of politics in some areas, confronted Postmaster-General Norman McLarty last night as he introduced his first departmental estimates since his appointment to that Cabinet post.

Calls from Public Phone to Enquire after Condition of Queen Mary

LETTER IS SENT

London, May 25 (AP) — Queen Mary, recovering from bruises and a minor injury to one eye, today dispatched a letter of thanks for flowers brought by Albert Cooper, driver of the truck involved in the collision in which she was injured.

The driver took the small bouquet to her residence, Marlborough House yesterday.

The letter was written by Lady Constance Milnes-Gaskell, lady-in-waiting to the Queen, who was in her car at the time of the accident. It expressed hope that Cooper was none the worse for his experience of

CAB OF CRANE ON WORK TRAIN CAUSES WRECK

One Passenger Killed and Twelve Others Are Taken to Hospital for Treatment

NO DERAILMENT

Express Went Nearly a Mile Beyond Scene Before it Could be Halted

Newington, Conn., May 25 (AP) — Equipment projecting from the side of a work train car raked the side of a passing Montreal-to-Washington express here today, killing one passenger and sending twelve others to hospital at Hartford.

The passenger killed was David Butters of East Providence, R.I., an employee of the railroad. Four of the injured, including one Canadian, were reported to be in serious condition and the eight others suffered mainly briuses and lacerations.

Scores of other passengers and trainmen were treated at the accident scene for minor cuts and continued on to New York on a later train.

The express was the Washingtonian, bound for Washington from Montreal and speeding along on a straightaway track when it met the work train headed toward Hartford.

Crane Swings Over

Railroad officials said the crane of a ditch-digger mounted on one of the work train cars had swung to one side so that the rear of the digger's cab projected out over the tracks on which the express was travelling.

The cab struck the Washingtonian's locomotive, missed the baggage car, virtually ripped the side off a day coach, tore open the front end of a following sleeper and stove in the roof of a second sleeper.

Those whose conditions were listed as serious were Murray Rudman, 20, of Montreal, arm and shoulder injuries and face lacerations; Herbert Collier of West Hartford, severed blood vessel in arm, shoulder injury and body abrasions, and Stephen Kinczyk, 48 of Willimantic, possible fractured skull and face lacerations.

Neither train was derailed and the express went nearly a mile beyond the scene of the accident before it could be halted.

SQUALL CAPSIZES SAILING BOAT

Three Residents of Point Anne Narrowly Escape Being Drowned

Point Anne, —(Special)— What might have resulted in a serious accident took place on Tuesday evening when Mr. Elwood Haines, Miss Margaret Storms, and Mr. Stirling Hill had a narrow escape from drowning. They were sailing in a boat owned by Austin Brant, on the Bay of Quinte and in a squall of wind capsized. Mr. Allan Cameron, who is stopping at the Club House, went to their rescue and brought them safely to shore.

Men Trapped in the Submarine "Took it Easy" Awaiting Rescue

Portsmouth, N.H., May 25—(AP)—The men trapped in the submarine Squalus "took it easy" while awaiting rescue they never doubted would come.

"Not one of the men became excited," said electrician's mate Judson Bland of Norfolk, Va., one of the 33 men who lived to tell of the long hours in the stricken craft.

Showing the least signs of exhaustion among the men who rode to safety in the rescue bell "elevator" Bland told how "we knew something had gone aft" when water started coming into ventilation valves during the "sub's" practice dive. And then:

"Men worked fast to shut off the water. The diving officer gave the order to blow the tanks. The order was carried out well....one man closed the door. It took super strength."

After that, reported Bland, "we lost all power and communication."

Just before the rescue began Bland said the pungent odors of chlorine gas began to reach the men, but still they kept their chins up.

"We passed the time by thinking of various ways they would rescue us," he said. "Everyone was listening in hope we would be found. Every word from the other men was a cheerful one. We fired some smoke bombs. We knew it was only a matter of waiting.'

Towards the end: "the air got a little bad due to the fact we were trying to conserve it. When the first rescue party arrived we couldn't have been happier. We sent up the weakest men first...."

British Formula In Military Pact To Be Forwarded

Details Will be Worked Out With Soviet Ambassador after His Return to London from Geneva

CABINET DECISION

Formal Soviet Acceptance of Detail is Counted Upon in London, Today's Reports State

By J. F. Sanderson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 25.—(CP Cable)—The proposed mutual defence pact linking Great Britain, France and Russia may be used eventually to breathe some life into the League of Nations, it was stated authoritatively here today.

London, May 25.—(CP Cable) — Great Britain today sent to Moscow her acceptance in principle of the Russian proposal for a mutual defence pact linking the Soviet Union, Britain and France.

Sir William Seeds, the Ambassador on the Soviet capital, has been instructed to inform the Russian government of Britain's acceptance of the Russian terms for participation in the Anglo-French anti-aggression bloc.

Informed sources said the note included a statement of yesterday's cabinet decision and Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration in the House of Commons that he hoped it would be possible to "reach full agreement" on terms of an Anglo-Russian pact at an early date.

British Formula to be Sent

It will be several days before the British formula on details of the military pact will be sent to Moscow. This formula will be worked out after Ivan Maisky, the Soviet Ambassador to Britain, returns to London from Geneva, where he has presided over the League of Nations Council meeting.

DOUBTS HITLER DARE CHALLENGE

Sir Samuel Scott Says Trade Does Not Follow but Deserts Swastika

By Guy Rhoades

London, May 25—(CP)—Sir Samuel Scott told the International Association for the promotion and protection of trade today he did not believe "even that mad dog Hitler will dare challenge the forces now arrayed against him to stop aggression and preserve peace."

Sir Samuel, a member of the Council of National Trust, recalled the old saying that "trade follows the flag", but said that was not true in the case of Germany.

"Wherever the swastika has gone, trade invariably has not followed but has left the flag. Trade in Central Europe now is practically dead."

He complained that one party in South Africa did not appreciate the meaning of the Union's Association with Great Britain, even though South Africa was perhaps the most defenceless part of the Empire. (Apparently he referred to the Nationalist Party.)

Sidelights on Royal Visit

Winnipeg, May 25 (CP)—King GGeorge had an Indian peace-pipe today, the gift of Chief Harry Hotain, 85, of Griswold, Man. It was an unofficial presentation but it broughts thanks from His Majesty. "Thank you very much," he said.

Windsor, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Loyalty cost a Windsor woman $11 last night. Watching pictures of the King and Queen in a theatre, she ignored a youth who snatched her purse and fled. Later she told the manager she was too absorbed in Their Majesties to do anything about it.

Spithead, May 25 (CP Cable)—Steamship officials today started work on alterations aboard the liner Empress of Britain which will bring the King and Queen home from Halifax at the end of their Canadian tour. The vessel docked here yesterday. Already a "skeleton" table seating 16 persons, similar to one installed in the Empress of Australia for the voyage to Canada, has been set up in the Salle Jacques Cartier, the first-class dining salon.

Winnipeg, May 25 (CP)—Thousands lined the royal procession route here yesterday but only 75 required care of the St. John's Ambulance Brigade. Seventy persons fainted.

Winnipeg, May 25 (CP)—Four's a crowd. Three persons were standing on a wicker basket to see the King and Queen here yesterday, but when the fourth attempted to clamber aboard it collapsed. No one was injured but the fine vantage point was destroyed.

Winnipeg, May 25 (CP)—"A happy day," said Queen Elizabeth to Mrs. John Bracken, wife of Manitoba's Premier, as farewells were said last night at the station after seven crowded hours in Winnipeg.

PAIR ARRESTED DRIVING IN CAR

Wm. Rodgers and Harvey Luffman, Hastings County residents, were arrested yesterday by Chief J. C. Hayes of Tweed and subsequently charged with being found in possession of goods alleged to have been stolen. The pair were brought to Belleville and remanded in custody.

Chief Hayes noticed the men driving a car on Highway 37, yesterday in a peculiar manner. Upon stopping the car he found a complete steam engine alleged to have been stolen from a contracting company. Both men were remanded in custody and will appear before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Tweed today.

TWO STRAY DOGS ARE PICKED UP

Two stray dogs were picked up by Thos. Thorne, city dog catcher, yesterday and were placed in the city dog pound. One of the canines was described as part spaniel while the other was a toy fox terrier with four white paws, female. Neither carried dog tags and will be destroyed unless otherwise claimed.

MARMORA MAY BE SELECTED AS SITE FOR LANDING FIELD

It is reported that representatives of the Federal Department of Transport and Trans-Canada Airways have been in Marmora district making a survey in connection with a possible landing site for airplanes. Marmora is about half-way on the line between Ottawa and Toronto, and it is believed that a central landing location may be established in case of need.

CATERPILLAR NESTS SHOULD BE DESTROYED

Gossamer nests of tent caterpillars which have been noted with increasing frequency on trees growing within city properties will be destroyed by workers of the Department of Public Works armed with fiery torches this week, and a request is made by the department for all residents to follow this lead in this caterpillar extermination on their own grounds.

The best way is to burn the nests either in the early morning or after sundown when the insects are in them. During the heat of the day they are empty," stated City Engineer Chas. Mott whose survey shows a heavy infestation of the city this year.

Wild cherry trees on country lanes and roads are also well burdened with the nests this year, it is observed.

GAS STATIONS ASKED TO PROVIDE WATER FOR THIRSTY HORSES

Since the heat of early summer has arrived, more care and attention is needed for the city's dumb animals, it was pointed out today by officers of the Belleville and District Humane Society.

A request for all gasoline service stations, and wayside refreshment stands to provide a pail of cool water for tired and thirsty horses and dogs is made by the local society. In past summers the work of the various gasoline companies in this respect has been highly commended by animal lovers. The majority of the larger stations have made a habit of providing pails of water free of charge for the city's work horses. Dogs also find it difficult to obtain sufficient water in the city to make up for the loss occasioned by perspiration from lolling tongues.

BLACK FLIES NOW READY FOR FISHERMEN

Black flies have made their first appearance on the northern lakes, though as yet this spring nuisance has not become noticeable enough to add too much discomfort to weeken dirips, it was reported by residents this morning who journeyed back to summer camps over the holidays. The flies were noticed thickest in the woods, and had not yet made their presence known on the water to any extent. For some unexplained reason the mosquito crop this year is reported unusually light, few being so far noticed.

WARM WEATHER, MOIST GROUND EXCELLENT FOR TOMATO PLANTING

Brilliant warm spring weather of the last few days, aided materially by the rains of last week has been a great boon to tomato growers of the district. Some of the first tomato plants of the season were placed in the ground yesterday on the farm of Roy Anderson, Rednersville. Other farmers of the district are rapidly preparing fields for the plants and it is expected that the process will be in full swing by the first of next week.

Notice is contained in the current issue of the Ontario Gazette of the appointment of James W. Casement of Frankford to the office of Bailiff of the Eighth Division Court of the County of Hastings.

CAMPBELLFORD BOARD CHOOSES OFFICERS

At the annual meeting of the Campbellford Cheese Board, Roy Walker of Menie Cheese Company was named president of the Board for the ensuing year. He succeeds H. B. Wood of the Trent Bridge factory.

Other officers: First vice-president, Elmer Cooper, Warsaw; second vice-president, Earl McAdam, Hoard's; secretary-treasurer, S. A. McGuire, Campbellford. J. A. Murray and M. H. West were appointed auditors.

The board fee was set at $2.00 per annum, and it was decided that the weekly meetings would be held on Thursday evening at nine o'clock.

CARBON BISULPHIDE GOOD FOR ANT HILLS

A resident who has applied for information to the Dominion Department of Agriculture regarding the best manner in which to exterminate ants on the lawn has been informed that this insect pest may be controlled by the use of carbon bisulphide. Small quantities of which may be poured in the holes which are then sealed. This creates a poisonous gas which works downward in the ant hill.

ED. ROACH APPOINTED DESERONTO REEVE

Edward M. Roach, prominent Deseronto business man was elected the reeve of that town the other day to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of former Reeve G. M. Campbell, forced to vacate the position through ill-health. Mr. Roach was given an acclamation being the only one of four nominees to qualify for the position.

The nomination caused no great excitement in the town. Other nominees included Dr. W. C. Blackwell, A. J. Rendell and M. Detlor.

The new reeve is a former mayor of Deseronto and is said to be well qualified for his new position, having had plenty of municipal government experience. He is a prominent Liberal and has held a prominent position in various executive offices in the past few years.

Drillers Open up Pocket of Gas While Sinking Hole for Water

Trustees of S.S. No. 4 Sophiasburg Seeking for Water for Use of School—Gas Discoveries in County Recalled

Pupils of the "Jericho" school house, S.S. No. 4 Sophiasburg Township, Prince Edward County, will continue to carry drinking water for the school from a farmhouse a quarter-mile distant.

For efforts on the part of the trustees to sink a well in the school yard during the past few days are represented in a six-feet length of pipe that protrudes from a wooden plug in the cement covering of the newly-drilled well, and from which the steady roar of burning escaping natural gas can be plainly heard.

For a week the blue flame at the top of the pipe has been steadily burning. The well, situated a few feet from the school yard fence that separates the yard from the Belleville-Picton highway has been sunk approximately forty-five feet. A large quantity of oily silt encountered when the drill reached the forty foot level lies near the top of the well.

Sudden Fumes of Gas.

No rock was encountered by the drillers, a nearby farmer stated yesterday, in their efforts to locate water. Forty feet below the surface, the heavy hard-steel bit suddenly drove downward at a fast rate of speed as it bit into the soft sand-like silt. A minute later, the familiar fumes of natural gas broke through, forcing its way in the van of heavy underground pressure to the surface through the narrow aperture of the drill hole.

The well-top was speedily covered with a heavy cement top. In the large hole originally intended to house the pump and its accompanying pipe a large heavy wooden plug was placed. A six-feet half-inch pipe was inserted through which the gas roared in a steady blast. The gas was ignited. A small bluish flame shot in the air. The "well" has been burning steadily ever since. That was over a week ago.

Possibilities Foreseen.

A neighboring farmer told The Ontario Intelligencer yesterday that if sufficient pressure is maintained, there is a possibility of the gas being piped and placed in use.

"There may be enough gas there to provide heat for neighboring farms," he suggested, "and failing that, there may be enough to heat the schoolhouse, thus saving the trustees the cost of winter fuel. However, popular opinion is that the gas will burn itself out in the near future, as have other wells in the county where gas has been encountered."

Trustees of the school are now pessimistic of locating water in the immediate vicinity of the school, he said.

For a number of years, in winter and summer, pupils have trudged some distance through snowdrifts in winter and hot suns in summer to secure drinking water for the school. Results of the latest efforts to remedy this situation gave the trustees and pupils little hope of a change.

Other Gas Discoveries.

The discovery of gas at the school is not the first in the county. Some time ago residents of Picton and its environs were agog with excitement at the possibilities of locating large natural gas deposits, when heavy pockets were struck during a concerted drilling for oil.

In Wellington large pockets of gas were discovered on the property of Robert Trendall, when drillers sank wells. This particular "hole" emitted a high-pressured flow of gas that burned in a ten-foot flame for nearly two weeks before it died out.

Similar instances were encountered on the Greer farm on the Lake Shore road.

More Contributions Are Needed to Reach Building Fund Quota

"We have no cause to complain, the response has been generous thus far," Major B. Bourne, Salvation Army executive of Toronto, commenting on the progress of the Army campaign to raise funds for the erection of a new citadel here.

"We are still some distance from our objective, however, and further contributions to the general fund will be gratefully received by Major Alderman," he added.

The Army tag-day takes place here on Saturday, the last day of the drive for funds, Major Bourne said, adding an appeal to the public that has already generously contributed to the worthy cause.

"Any assistance that can be given the tag-day workers will be greatly appreciated by myself and members of the Army," he added.

BENSON SISTERS AN AGED TRIO

Average Age of Three Sisters at Wellington is 84 Years

An interesting and unusual event took place in Wellington, May 22nd, when two of the three Benson sisters observed their respective birthdays, Miss Alwilda Benson being eighty-four and her sister, Mrs. C. E. Bowerman, eighty-one. Mrs. A. Hesslitt, the oldest of the trio, observed the eighty-seventh anniversary of her birth on March 28th. The average age of the three Benson sisters, who have resided together for many years, is eighty-four and this probably constitutes a record for longevity in Prince Edward County. They are the daughters of the late Wm. H. Benson and his wife, Abigal Van Blaricom, pioneer residents of Prince Edward County, both of whom passed away many years ago, after attaining a ripe old age. Besides the three Benson daughters living in Wellington there are surviving a brother, William. E. Benson, of Toronto, and another sister, Mrs. John Bowerman of Bloomfield. The Benson sisters are enjoying fairly good health and, in their happy and comfortable home in Wellington, have the esteem of a wide circle of friends They can recall many interesting incidents of the early days of Picton, Bloomfield and Wellington.

OBITUARY

ARCHIE B. McGEE
(Stirling)

Stirling—On Tuesday morning there passed away at his home in Stirling one of the district's oldest and most respected citizens in the person of Archie B. McGee, life-long resident of Stirling village. Deceased who had been in poor health for three months and was in his eighty-fifth year and death was not unexpected. Born on the McGee farm on the Ridge Road east of the village he was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McGee. Residing within the village for many years he is mourned by a large circle of friends. He was a veteran member of the Stirling Orange Lodge and a faithful member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. His wife, formerly Mary Lannigan, predeceased him several years ago.

Surviving are two brothers, Mr. John E. McGee and Mr. Andrew McGee, both of Rawdon Township and one sister, Mrs. Thos. Montgomery Jr., of Stirling. Four sons also predeceased him, one having given his life in France during the Great War.

The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. W.H.V. Walker in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church under the auspices of the Stirling Orange Lodge with date and time to be announced later. Interment will be made in Stirling cemetery.

THOMAS G. LEWIS

Thomas Graham Lewis passed away early this Thursday morning at the family residence, 199 Bridge Street east. He had been in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Lewis, who was of Welsh descent, was born in Hamilton, Ont., his parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. William Lewis. For many years he was an active member of the wholesale hardware firm of Lewis Bros., Montreal, and retired from the business thirty-five years ago. At that time he came to reside in Belleville and during his residence here he was held in high regard by many friends, to whom his passing has brought sincere feelings of regret. In religion he was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Lena Lingham; two daughters, Mrs. John H. Northway, Toronto; Miss Elizabeth Graham Lewis, at home; one son, Mr. Howard L. Lewis, at home; four sisters, Miss Agnes Lewis, Miss Adelaide Lewis, and Miss Mabel Lewis, all of Montreal, and Mrs. John J. Zealand of Houghton, Mich.; two brothers, Mr. James Graham Lewis and Mr. C. Howard Lewis, both of Montreal.

The announcement of the funeral, which will be private, is made elsewhere in this paper.

4 Blooms on Stem

Marmora, May 25 (Special)—In a bed of tulips at Marmora High School, Miss A. P. Wilson, teacher, has discovered one stem with four blooms on it which is believed to be a record, at least, in this district. The bulbs were planted last year by first form students, who are very proud of their achievement, and the tulip is attracting considerable attention.

Prince Edward Farmer Recalls Trip on Destroyer With Present King

Jas. Smith States Duke of York Greatly Admired by Crew of Ship

PROVERB BORNE OUT

"Wherever goes a British sovereign, there goes prosperity," a simple philosophy, but one that has been amply borne out, according to James Smith, sturdy Britisher, who operates a prosperous farm in Sophiasburg Township in Prince Edward County.

"It is true," he said yesterday, as he stood behind a seed-drill in a field on his well-tilled acres that borders the Belleville-Picton highway, about ten miles south of the city. "King George came to Kingston a few days ago. Immediately we got a rain that will benefit the farmers of the district immensely. Yesterday he was in Winnipeg, and farmers of the west experienced a downpour that will result in untold thousands of dollars. The rain and its benefits were mentioned in a radio broadcast," Smith added.

"See the King? Not me. I saw him years ago, when I was a gunner in the 5th. Heavy Battery, Royal Artillery, stationed along the south coast of Ireland. The present King was then a sub-lieutenant on the destroyer "Sesame," which carried part of our battery to Bear Island, a place just off the south coast within five miles of where the Lusitania was sunk.

"The Duke of York, as he was then, was a grand fellow. There was nothing of the snob about him. He used to come and chat with the common sailors, and with us, just as though he were one of us. He is a prince, and no pun intended. The crew of the destroyer worshipped him, and so did we before we landed," Mr. Smith said, a glow of honest admiration flashing in his eyes.

Finds Farming Satisfactory

"That satisfied me," he continued. "Besides," waving a hand to where a sleek herd of eleven cattle grazed in a nearby green pasture, and new alfalfa well over six inches in height, "as thick as hair on a dog" waved in the afternoon sunlight, "I have plenty of work to do."

"How about these terribly lean years that farmers in general are said to be experiencing?" he was asked.

"Some are and some aren't," came the reply spoken in a strong English accent. "The trouble in the most cases is that people won't work. There is money to be made if they will bend their backs."

"My wife and I run this 140-acre farm alone. Last year we cleared fourteen hundred dollars, above all expenses off this place, but we stayed at home and worked. My wife, in haytime, stars atop a hay wagon and loads while I pitch it on. The same in grain-harvest time. We milk eleven head of cattle and raise four young cattle every year, selling the older ones as the young ones come into milk-production.

"I grow enough canning factory produce to keep us busy. We don't overdo the harvest. We work hard and see that everything is done. That has proven the right procedure for the past four years, for in that length of time I have been on this place and each year I have come well ahead financially."

Thirty-Year-Old Horse

Two fat horses hitched to the drill nodded lazily in the warm sun. A gray mare that belied her thirty years of age, switched her tail at the first flies of the season. "She's a grand horse, and to look at her you would not think she had seen thirty summers," Mr. Smith smiled, "but I wouldn't part with her for the world. She has no grinding teeth and so I feed her bran mash and moisten her hay. She is good for a few years yet."

Smith is highly optimistic for the future of new Canadians in this country. "This is the best land in the world," he said, sincerity sounding in his voice, "for people who want to work."

"England, after all, is a pretty nice country, isn't it?"

"Yes, England is a fine land, but there are too many people living in it. It is too crowded. Out here you can stretch your arms."

Police Blotter

Sneak thieves of the lowest type were reported to city police yesterday when Earl Fry, local news dealer, 253 1-2 Front St., informed the authorities that 20 morning papers had been stolen from his allotted bundle after delivery. In an effort to cope with the demand for newspapers during the Royal visit, Mr. Fry had increased his order, but yesterday morning found his bundle opened, strewn about the street and 20 missing unaccounted for. These morning papers are delivered about 4.00 a.m., while Mr. Fry's place of business does not open until around 7.30 a.m., giving sneak thieves ample time to obtain their ill-gotten gains.

Constable Jerome of the C. N. R. Police informed Belleville authorities today he had found a lawn mower abandoned on railway property last night. Later Belleville authorities traced the ownership of the mower and it was returned.

While driving away from last night's softball game at Coleman Flats, a lad named Bush ran in front of an automobile driven by Sidney Robinson 257 Bleecker Ave. The lad was knocked down, but later assured Robinson he was uninjured and he hastened away apparently none the worse for his experience. Mr. Robinson notified the police of the incident, however.

A large truck driven by Fred Dew, 20 Bleecker St., Toronto, tore a large hole in the awning in front of Bargman's grocery store on Front St., yesterday. Mr. Dew was backing his truck into the curb, where he was about to unload goods. The rack of the truck caught into the awning, tearing it. The matter was amicably settled between the parties concerned.

Villages Enthusiastic About Coming Tour of Good-Will Cavalcade

Genuine enthusiasm has been shown by the village and towns of the northern section of Hastings County over the Belleville-North Hastings Good-Will Cavalcade and Better Acquaintance Tour which is being arranged by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, it was reported by Chamber officials this morning.

Four special visits have been scheduled from this city, with all members of the Chamber taking part. The first date is Tuesday, May 30th, at Madoc; Bancroft, on Wednesday, June 7th; Marmora, Wednesday, June 14th, and Tweed, Wednesday, June 21st. The tour will be open to all citizens of Belleville and County of Hastings. It is essential, however, that dinner reservation be made by those wishing to take part. These may be made at the Chamber of Commerce. The dinners are being confined to men only.

President of the Chamber of Commerce is Alderman McLean Haig and chairman of the Cavalcade Committee is Past President John A. McIntosh. J. Owen Herity is manager of the Chamber.

Each tour will include visits to industrial plants, points of scenic interest and outdoor picnics. Fishing parties may also be arranged.

Mr. John Geen acted as chairman for the occasion and Wallace and Vera were given prominent seats and Mr. J. Hart read the following address.

Thomasburg, Ont.
May 22nd, 1939.

To Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McTaggart.

Dear Vera and Wallace:—

We have gathered here this evening to do honor to an occasion which we felt we just could not let pass without expressing ourselves in some tangible way.

To you both we can say that a good many of your interests, associations and memories have been with the Fuller neighbourhood.

Now you are launching out into the sea of "Life" and like unto every one God has given you some talent which will enable you to make your life a blessing to all you may associate with.

To each is given possibilities with which we build character, the supreme treasure which alone we can carry beyond this life.

We offer you our congratulations and best wishes for a long and a happy wedded life and we hope we can still have you both to help us in our community gatherings and especially in the work of the church.

We trust you will receive this gift in the spirit in which it is given —as a token of our esteem and may it always remind you of your Fuller friends.

Signed on behalf of the community — Leonard Collins, John Mitts, Jim Wilson.

Wallace and Vera were presented with a dinner set for which they both expressed their thanks inviting all to visit them in their home.

Lunch was served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

Mr. Lorne Badgley spent the week-end in Ottawa.

Some of the people on this line spent Sunday evening in Belleville to get a look at the King and Queen.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Manley Lidster were Mrs. G. H. Chard, Harry and Jennette, also Mrs. B. Webb of Trenton and Mr. and Mrs. Taylor of Belleville.

Cannifton

Cannifton — Young People's Society held their usual meeting on Friday night with a good attendance.

Church was closed on Sunday evening on account of so many going to see the King and Queen.

Rev. and Mrs. A. Armstrong attended the funeral of a friend of his former circuit on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Shorey were recent guests of the latter's mother at Roslin.

Mr. and Mrs. Slinker of Rochester, is visiting the latter's sister here for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Smith were Sunday guests of Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Savage.

Miss Eveline Lemon of Toronto, is visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Shorey.

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Boyce spent Sunday in Kingston.

Mr. Jay Collins motored to Toronto on Monday.

Mrs. Leaverten and Mrs. Cole of Point Anne, were recent visitors in the village.

Mrs. Clarence Hearns spent the tea hour on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Cairns.

Mrs. George Shorey spent Monday in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Mason of Belleville, were Monday evening callers of Mrs. D. Mason.

Mrs. Luffman of Sulphide, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Clarence Hearns.

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Pepless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did—even look healthy and strong, yet—you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

THE Secret OF SPARTON ECONOMY IS Clock Control

THE CLOCK IS BOSS

The electric clock built into Sparton refrigerators is there for one important reason—to boss the freezing job. By automatic control, it keeps the coils always free from frost.

WHAT THAT MEANS TO YOU

The best answer is found in an article in McCalls Magazine (Feb. 1938) which says as point No. 1 in "Care of Your Refrigerator": "Defrost when frost on the unit is ¼" thick. A heavier coating than this keeps the cold inside the unit and increases the cost of operation."

There you have an independent authority's testimony that frost-free coils give you two vital advantages:

1. Better refrigeration—the coils are not walled off by a frost coating from the food chamber.
2. Lowers the cost of operation—meter and motor run less time, unhandicapped by frost.

HOW THE CLOCK WORKS

Besides being a convenient kitchen timepiece, the clock defrosts the coils every morning by automatically shutting off the motor for two hours—long enough to allow the light one-day frosting to melt off the coils—but not long enough to raise box temperature above safe levels. At the end of this two hour period, the clock automatically re-starts the motor. You have nothing to set—no switches to turn—no remembering to do—the clock bosses the job, saving you money and giving you better refrigeration.

WHY FROST-FREE COILS GIVE YOU BETTER REFRIGERATION

A layer of frost can separate heat from cold—think of the Eskimo's igloo home! On refrigerator coils, a layer of frost "keeps the cold inside the unit" and partially cuts it off from the stored food you are trying to preserve. A clock-controlled Sparton prevents this.

WHY FROST-FREE COILS SAVE YOU MONEY

Fighting against an enveloping blanket of frost makes the motor work harder and longer. Sparton clock control saves money because frost-free coils allow motor and meter to work less time. The life of the unit is increased. The monthly bills are kept low.

Insist on the economy of Clock Control when you buy your electric refrigerator. It is exclusive with Sparton—a 39 year old company.

men and women."

Hopeful of Journey.

In a few months when he would be taking up office as Governor-General of Australia, the Duke hoped he would be able to see from a different angle how solid were the ties binding the Commonwealth.

Answering an expression of sympathy by Stanley Bruce, Australian High Commissioner, in the injury Queen Mary suffered yesterday, and of hope that her recovery would be rapid, the Duke assured the gathering he had just received a report his mother's condition was not serious and that she was doing very well.

Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Prime Minister of Canada, paying tribute to the unifying influence of the British Crown, declared that while the Dominions today enjoy equality of status with the mother country they must be willing to accept the responsibilities that were implied in equality.

"Bound by ties of tradition, freedom and liberty, we are free to pursue our own course which should be associated with common hopes and aspirations," Mr. Bennett said. "Let us take heed of these great responsibilities which rest on justice and the reign of law, and in that find the secret of our greatness."

The British Empire, he added, stood as a bulwark of democracy about the permanence of which peoples of other lands were equally concerned.

Malcolm MacDonald, Colonial Secretary, observed that it sometimes has been said Britain's chief purpose in clinging to her overseas possessions was to exploit them.

"If that ever was our motive it has long since ceased to be so," he said. "Our main purpose is to enable our fellow subjects throughout the Empire to partake in a larger measure of the benefits of civilization, of economic well being, health, education and full and fearless enjoyment of life.

"We are creating love and practice of freedom which is so deep and wide that no power on earth will ever be able to blot it out."

Deseronto

Deseronto—One of Deseronto's aged residents passed away on Thursday, May 18th, in the person of Mrs. Mary A. Wagar, in her 84th year. The funeral service was conducted from the Gospel Hall on Sunday afternoon with interment in Deseronto cemetery.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Will Schell in the death of her mother.

Jack Therrien of Toronto spent the week-end at his home here.

TENDER SYSTEM

When critics and two supporters of the current system had aired their views, the genial new Postmaster-General stated frankly he had given that particular question more consideration than any other since assuming administration of the Department. He agreed unsatisfactory conditions had arisen and regretted he could not offer a definite solution at the moment. However, he assured the House he was "endeavoring in every possible way to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the problem."

National Disgrace

The pay of some rural carriers under the tender system was a "national disgrace," Gordon Graydon (Con. Peel) said. Several members urged that these was as much reason for rural carriers being made civil servants on a long-term basis as there was for city letter carriers being civil servants.

The political patronage angle also came up. Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor Grey-Bruce) hoped to see the day when the elected member was the people's representative in every way. For nearly 18 years she had been a member of the House, but in all that time a defeated candidate had been "in absolute control of the running of the business of that constituency."

"If that is democracy, I am mistaken. I do not think it is. It is a misuse of the term. It is such things as that that bring democracy into ill repute and make even its friends wonder whether it is worth struggling to preserve," she said.

Endorsed System.

J. P. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata) endorsed the present system for, he contended, the member knew more about conditions and people in his constituency than any official of the Post Office Department could. S. J. Furniss (Lib. Muskoka-Ontario) suggested some routes were so unremunerative to the government they would have to be discontinued if a rate of $40 a mile were set.

T. L. Church (Con. Toronto-Broadview) urged that the Post Office be operated as a commercial utility on a business basis. As such, it should seek revenue wherever it could, such as by re-classifying newspapers for mailing purposes.

Discrimination against small towns was claimed by George Tustin (Con. Prince Edward Lennox). City folks had mail delivered two or three times a day, farmers had it delivered once a day, but small town folk had to go to the Post Office for their mail—and pay rent for a box.

Encourage Aviation.

Encouragement of aviation through mail subsidies should be factor in determining air mail contracts, Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South) submitted. He suggested the Board of Transport Commissioners might set the rates.

Mr. McLarty informed him he had already asked that board what would be a fair airmail rate as compared to air express rates, to be applied to the first air mail contract to fall due.

Earlier the House gave third reading to bills implementing provisions of the budget. The bill amending the Income Tax Act stood over for third reading, after going through the committee stage, and is being considered today after the House deals with the Salt Fish Board Bill and Finance Minister Dunning's mortgage discount bank disposal.

A RESULT OF THE ROYAL VISIT

Recent days have been a fine corrective. Wholesome thoughts have been in the minds of the people of Canada. They have been thinking of their King and Queen, they have seen them, many have conversed with the democratic Sovereigns. It is in large measure the human in the people which excites the interests even of rulers and the human in the beloved rulers which makes Canadians forget that such a thing as war talk was on everyone's lips a few weeks ago.

Canadians are thankful that the King and Queen are to be with them for weeks yet, though they have left the east and are now in the granary-of-the-Empire fields and cities. What they are seeing and hearing and doing in any part of Canada and as they will be doing in the United States in four of the busiest days of feting in American history is of interest to Canadians from coast to coast.

We have almost forgotten dictators. No one has been paying attention to comment on world affairs. Canadians have not had much time for other thoughts than those associated with the royal progress of the King and Queen across Canada.

Canadians, a few weeks ago, were jittery and naturally for news from Europe absorbed attention of everyone. But a greater, more absorbing topic has taken hold, has driven such words as 'Naziism,' 'Fascism' and 'Bolshevism' out of our minds. There have been the color of pageantry, the fine appearance of the citizen soldiers of Canada, the sight of children who have been given the first place along the routes of the royal processions. The King and Queen have ridden through streets where scarcely a guard can be seen or found, they have walked into groups of citizens, have paced railway platforms mingling with the men and the women and the children upon whom they confer a blessing by their very appearance, they have passed through hospitals of veterans and have mingled with the heroes of Flanders and veterans of many other fields. In all not a thought of expansion or hatred of other peoples, but the sane outlook of rulers of the British race.

We can hope that these better thoughts which the King and Queen have inspired in us will always linger for balance and sane thinking.

Canadians will realize that when the King and Queen have gone back to London they will be still what they have shown themselves to be in Canada, forces of great blessing, because of what they represent and what they are in their own personalities.

Such is the inspiration we now feel. It will endure to make for greater peace of mind, it will encourage business relations and it will help our own nation and the British Commonwealth of Nations to have the benign influence of Their Majesties remain with us in Canada and in all other parts of the Empire.

PUBLIC - SPIRITED CITIZEN DESERVING OF CITY'S THANKS

If the one thousand scholars of Belleville whose lives have been brightened and in whose minds noble patriotic thoughts have been inspired by seeing their King and Queen in the royal procession at Kingston were given the ballot to pick the man to whom they owe the chief debt for organizing the trip and whose interest in their behalf they will never forget, they would all write the name of Mr. Reg. Moncrieff. He is the citizen who from the beginning of this year has on all occasions remained firm in his conviction that the rising generation of Belleville should see their Sovereigns during the tour of Canada and so be inspired for the rest of their lives.

If parents of Belleville had the privilege of naming the person to whom they feel most obligated for what has been done for their children on the occasion of the royal visit, they would select Mr. Moncrieff.

Without Mr. Moncrieff it is doubtful if anyone would have carried through the plan to transport the scholars to Kingston for the royal ceremonies or would have persisted in his effort as Mr. Moncrieff has done. Such interest gathered support naturally and after tireless efforts in this cause he saw his labors not lost, but achieved.

Such an undertaking as he brought to success should be an encouragement for others to take on big projects of any kind which will redound to the lasting benefit of thousands of children and young people in this city and district. Those, who helped Mr. Moncrieff by coming to his aid in the plans he envisioned months ago, join in any tribute made to Mr. Moncrieff for his thoughtfulness and energy.

Had it not been for him, few of the thousand who went to Kingston to see and who did see and acclaim their King and Queen, would have been able to acclaim them, because even with the best arrangements possible at Belleville it is very doubtful if more than a very few could have had a glimpse of the King and Queen on the observation platform of the coach of the royal train. But they did see, and they did acclaim the King and Queen at Kingston. Mr. Moncrieff and his assistants undertook a responsibility, but they accomplished what they set out to do and they brought back one thousand happy if tired scholars.

THE HARNESS SHOP

There was deep gloom inside, dark as the leather
Hung from the front-room walls, black as the bridles
Over the pegs that nestled there together.
Then I learned once again how sunlight sidles
Across a plank floor in late afternoon.
In the back room the windows were wide flung
To catch the Summer. My heart sang a tune.
It used to sing when I was very young;
And on a stool the harness-maker sat,
Plying his awl; pausing sometimes to chuckle.
I thought: life still can be as good as that—
Joy stitched in with the setting of a buckle—
And zinnias outside, drinking yellow light,
And people walking home with thoughts of night.

WITHOUT DAILY NEWSPAPERS OF ITS OWN FOR SIX MONTHS, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, businessmen and citizens generally realized what it means to be deprived of the local newspaper. The cessation of publication was caused by a Guild strike caused by the editorial staffs. Recently the trouble was settled and the three newspapers resumed publication. (Wilkes-Barre population 100,000). The city suffered from its lack of newspapers, the citizens suffered, the businessmen suffered, the workers suffered, Wilkes-Barrie became a city without a voice. A hearty welcome greeted the reappearance of the newspapers, and twenty-eight prominent Wilkes-Barrie merchants united in a paid advertisement published in each newspaper, announcing the abandonment of an advertising sheet, called the "Buyers Guide," published by the merchants during the hiatus. "WE ARE KEENLY ALIVE TO THE FACT," read the announcement, "THAT NO PRIVATE ORGAN OF PUBLICITY HAS ANY RIGHT TO EXIST IN THE COMMUNITY WHERE IT CONFLICTS WITH THE WELFARE OF THE COMMUNITY'S NEWSPAPERS SUCH AS WE HAVE HAD AND MUST CONTINUE TO HAVE IN WILKES-BARRE."......"WE KNOW THAT NO NORMAL HEALTHY CIVIC LIFE CAN LONG BE MAINTAINED WITHOUT STRONG INDEPENDENT LOCAL NEWSPAPERS......WE MERCHANTS, HERE GATHERED TOGETHER, THEREFORE, WISH THE DAILY NEWSPAPERS OF WILKES-BARRE EVERY SUCCESS IN RESUMPTION OF THEIR LONG SUSPENDED SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY. WE TRUST THAT NEVER AGAIN WILL ANY CIRCUMSTANCES ARISE TO INTERRUPT THEIR STEADY. DAILY. FULFILLMENT. OF THE VITAL MISSIONS THEY PERFORM FOR THE COMMUNITY." This advertisement was signed by 28 of the leading merchants of Wilkes-Barre. It was almost worth the loss involved to develop such welcome appreciation.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 25th., 1919.

A close and interesting game of baseball was played on St. Michael's School grounds between two Midget League teams, the Lions and the Tigers. The game ended in favor of the former, the score being 13 to 5. The following composed the teams: Lions—Maraskas, R. Storks, B. Scott, Hickey, R. Scott, L. Storks, O'Brien, Jackson and Lafay. Tigers—F. Powell, Hoedgar, Leamark, Barrage, Baker, Barnett, Kennedy, Weeks and Welch.

Mr. C. J. Martin was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Minns have returned to Toronto after visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Lowery of Toronto are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thompson, Sinclair Street.

30 YEARS AGO

May 25th., 1909.

The 15th. Regiment had a jolly time at Picton yesterday and the boys were royally treated by the residents of that pretty town. It was about 6.30 o'clock a.m. when the steamer Aletha left the dock here with the regiment aboard and Picton was reached about ten o'clock. The street parade then took place and the good old Fifteenth certainly did itself proud, as the men stepped out jauntily behind the fine marching music of both bands. After the parade the men had the rest of the day to themselves to enjoy the other attractions in connection with the celebration. The return trip was started about nine o'clock and the Regiment reached the Armouries here about one o'clock a.m.

In a baseball match here yesterday the Kingston Three Link team defeated the Belleville team, the score being 5 to 2. The following composed the Belleville team: Thomas, Gerow, Smith, Brennan, Brown, Connell, Watkin, Ramsay and Harold.

Miss Bella Crothers of Toronto formerly of Belleville, spent the holiday here.

40 YEARS AGO

Ald. W. A. Hungerford is spending some time in the northern mining district.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brigden of Toronto are visiting friends in the city.

Mr. Arthur Dulmage, who is at present taking a course in the Training School for Male Nurses, New York, is home on a brief holiday.

Mr. Will Taylor has accepted a position with a firm in Toronto, and has left to reside in that city.

Everything is looking spick and span now at Massassaga Park. Under the experienced direction of Mr. J. F. Baird the buildings have been put in good order and nothing has been left undone which will tend to the pleasure and comfort of those who visit this beautiful spot.

Mr. George E. Fax of this city took part in an entertainment at Madoc last evening.

50 YEARS AGO

May 25th., 1889.

The chief attraction in the observance of the 24th. of May was the excursion to Massassaga Park under the auspices of the Oddfellows' and Military Band. The commodious steamer Quinte was chartered for the day and made several trips between the city and the park, and it is estimated that the steamer carried about 1600 passengers. The steamer Annie Gilbert also made trips to the park every half hour. It is estimated that 2000 people were at the park during the day.

The steamer Hero ran an excursion to Kingston yesterday and many from the city took advantage of the opportunity to spend a pleasant day on the water.

The business section of the village of Bridgewater, four miles north of Tweed, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire is said to have started from a defective chimney on the hotel. Twenty dwellings, three stores, post office and the fine Methodist Church were consumed.

NEW CONTAINERS

Wooden boxes and barrels are not so common around the home as they used to be. That is the impression the man of the house gets when he is looking for kindling. Now a person is confronted with an amazing array of paper boxes, most of them corrugated.

Some of the bigger ones may be of wood, but here again there is a new technique. They are bound with wire rivetted to the thin planking. They are quite difficult to detach. Before the wire binding came into being plain wood with short nails were the vogue. Today even the fruit boxes and baskets have become less easy to crush underfoot and throw into the furnace.

The paper containers are everywhere. We use them as drinking cups, and have almost overcome the good old dipper habit. It may not have been hygienic enough to satisfy the doctors, but there was something friendly about it. There was plenty of romance in going to the well, when just the right maid was ready to accompany the carrier of the wooden pail.

We are getting away from these old things at a fast clip. Somehow it almost makes one pine for the good old wooden era.—Kitchener Record.

ENGLISH 'RED BIDDY'

At Newington Licensing Sessions recently Mr. Sidney Lamb, appearing for the Metropolitan Council of Off Licenses Associations and the National Federation of British Wine Producers, referred to a statement made by the chairman, Mr. Thomas Cox, in February. Mr. Lamb said that the chairman then spoke of the injurious effects of drinking "red biddy," saying that this was composed of what was called British wine made from imported grape juice to which the purchaser by some means added methylated spirit.

Mr. Lamb said there was no question that British wine was made from imported grape juice. British wine was a perfectly wholesome beverage and had no relation whatever to the stuff called "red biddy," which seemed to be a name which a certain class of liquid had acquired when mixed with methylated spirit. — London Times.

CAMERA FAN

As a birthday greeting how your pal Dick will roar at a series of candids kidnapped of him when he was not aware you were shooting. No doubt you go out together on jaunts in the car, or see each other at home. Well, let him become so accustomed to seeing the minicam glued to your eye that he pays no attention.

Then get some gems, Dick with his cheek swelled up with sandwich, trying to fry flapjacks in camp, holding young Richard up to the bubbly fountain, teaching his pup to sit up and beg, wrestling out of a wet bathing suit, arguing with the Missus over a road map, or that old classic, sleeping in a chair with his mouth open.

The fact that you took the trouble to make this collection will be to him a real proof of friendship.—Everyday Photography.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Backache Causes Much Disability and Irritability

Backache is not a disease but a symptom—often an outstanding solitary symptom. The patient seeks advice not alone for the pain but on account of his inability to work. It accounts therefore not only for much irritability but also for much disability, frequently in the most muscular and robust laborers as well as in many office workers. I believe there is no one condition, which produces more disability and economic loss.

I am quoting Dr. Edgar Lorrington Gilcreest, San Francisco, in Annals of Surgery. Most of us are of the opinion that the common cold causes most disability — absence from work—but as a cause of irritability and disability together, I am inclined to agree with Dr. Gilcreest as I spent nearly a year off my feet with a low back and hip pain—due to strain. I could not get on my feet without pain and I was so irritable that I didn't even like the way my small youngster played on the floor; I wanted to get out of bed and show her the proper way to play.

While many physicians, including myself, believe that most cases of pain and disability in lower back, hip and down the leg are due to infection—teeth or tonsils mostly—Dr. Gilcreest believes that acute and chronic sprain are responsible for the greatest number of low back aches, with infection next, and sometimes a combination of injury and infection present in the same individual.

When the pain is due to injury, the patient can usually lie down, adopt a certain position, and be practically free of pain. When the pain is due to infection, the patient becomes worse on lying down and often gets same relief from the pain by walking or other exercise.

When you have a low back pain extending into hip, try to remember if pain came on suddenly when you were lifting an object, or turning your body suddenly or had made a misstep. If so, you may require manipulation to bring bones of joint or joints back into place with application of a supporting belt. Often the belt is all that is necessary.

If pain came on slowly, gets worse at night but is better when you are on your feet, you should see your physician and dentist.

Remember you may have both a strain and infection at the same time.

SUB CREW RESCUE

Then, on the fourth trip, something went wrong. A cable fouled and held the last eight survivors suspended midway between the muddy bottom and the surface. Divers labored frantically. Finally, four hours later, the giant apparatus was freed and the last men, including Lieut. O. P. Naquin, Commander of the Squalus, stepped to the deck of the Falcon.

Rescue Operations Suspended

As that trip was completed, shortly after midnight, rescue operations were suspended until daylight. Admiral C. W. Cole, Commandant of the Portsmouth Navy Yard, issued the following communique: "This completes rescue of all known survivors. Investigation of flooded compartments will proceed as expeditiously as possible Suspending operations for the night due to damage to rescue chamber, which must be repaired before further use."

As the rescued men—seven the first trip, nine the second and third trips and eight the last time—left the big bell, they stepped into a decompression chamber. The rescue was history-making since the successful use of the massive chamber was its first actual test under desperate conditions.

Disabled Tuesday Morning.

Disabled shortly after 8:40 a.m. Tuesday morning, when an air induction valve failed to close and poured tons of water into the after compartments, the Squalus lay on an even keel at the bottom and the men in the forward compartments "took it easy" throughout the long hours to conserve the oxygen. After telephone communication with the surface was broken the men settled down to a long wait. Finally at about noon yesterday the rescue bell dropped over the Falcon's side and touched the escape chamber of the Squalus.

The connection was made and blankets and hot soup handed into the sub to ease the biting cold. Seven men stepped inside with the man who came down from the surface and slowly the bell came up.

With their arrival on the deck of the Falcon came first definite news of the casualties in the flooded sections of the submarine. Swiftly word was flashed ashore and the heart-rending task of advising relatives was begun.

Bitterly Cold.

From the survivors came only laconic comments about the bitter cold. First man to breathe free air and see the sun after the long confinement was Lieut. J. C. Nichols. It was a dramatic scene. The sun broke through the clouds just as the bell broke through the ocean's surface. Airplanes circled overhead. A dozen ships, including the cruiser Brooklyn, floated nearby.

Slowly the bell swung onto the Falcon's deck. The hatch in the roof opened and Lieut. Nichols stepped out into the sunshine. Cheers broke out from the men on the deck and answering cheers and shouts echoed from the other vessels.

Then, persistently, the chamber continued its elevator-like trips which continued until shortly after midnight. There was not a hitch until the last ascent.

Unqualified Success.

Officers eagerly watching the bell in its acid test found it an unqualified success. It was developed after the S-4 disaster off Provincetown, Mass., in which 40 men lost their lives in 1927. Built to withstand tremendous pressure, the bell is filled with a helium-oxygen mixture for breathing so as to prevent "bends", a disease caused by pressure changes.

Spokesman for the rescued men was Pudson Bland of Norfolk, Va., an electrician's mate, who said: "There was no panic—none whatsoever". He told interviewers the air in the sub "got a little bad" just before the rescue, but that was due, he said, to efforts to conserve the oxygen.

A Paradise for Kibitzers

Ottawa today is a paradise for that great body of construction kibitzers known as sidewalk superintendents—men who, while leaning against the nearest wall or tree, can tell the ablest foreman how best to construct a building or lay a concrete road.

No finer vantage point could be found in all of Canada just now than the corner of Wellington and Elgin streets, for there the sidewalk superintendent can supervise three different jobs with the expenditure of no more effort than that required to turn his head. To the right and rising to completion is the post office sub-station. Directly in front the paving of Elgin street is progressing, while off to the left are the many activities connected with finishing off the base of the National Memorial.

And, sidewalk superintendent's dream of dreams, there isn't so much as a single board wall to hinder the view! There is one around the post office building but the work has risen far above it.

x x x

I paused for a few moments a few days ago to gaze upon the busy scene. Near me two men were leaning against the stone wall that fronts Parliament Hill. One was squat and paunchy with a cigarette trickling a thin line of blue smoke as it drooped from his mouth. The other, tall and thin, wore a grey Spring coat and a derby hat. Both were extremely interested in the proceedings going on around them.

Down on Elgin street two men carried a square mesh of reinforcing steel from in front of a truck and placed it on a pile nearby. There was the clank-clank-clank of a loader as it nudged into a pile of crushed rock, scooping it up with the endless bucket chain and shooting it into a waiting truck. The truck wheeled over to a pile of sand where waiting men shovelled the required amount in with the rock and heaved up bags of cement. The truck backed up to the cement mixer and dumped its load which was hoisted up and poured into the entrails of the great machine. The drum rotated and soon a bucket of concrete came out the other end and was deposited on the roadbed where thousands of cars would roll over it.

The paunchy man beside me removed his cigarette, exhaled a lungful of smoke and grunted: "That mix is too wet. The concrete will never stand up."

The other nodded agreement.

Down to the left, in front of the Chateau, a steam shovel snorted and I turned my eyes that way. A plume of steam shot out the exhaust as the teeth of the bucket bit through hard soil and debris. Up came the shovel, it swung around and deposited its load into a truck which roared away in super low. Nearer the monument men with shovels levelled a great pile of earth in preparation for sodding. Several men with picks labored in a ditch placing a tile drain. Everywhere was activity.

"I don't know why they didn't leave the monument like it was last Fall." It was the same man speaking. "It looked good to me then."

"I wouldn't have had the monument here in the first place," the other remarked.

Over to the right a quick movement caught my eye as the hoist at the post office building sped to the upper reaches with a load of stone and brick. Several men grabbed the loaded wheel-barrows and hauled them off, pushing empties on to the hoist in their places. The loads of stone and brick were trundled off into the building and the hoist shot downward.

Great slabs of stone rose into position, more bricks slid into place. A hand winch squealed protestingly. Two men with trowels and mortar were suspended on a scaffold part way down the stone wall. Sweating men worked steadily all over the building.

"Now take that building there," said kibitzer number one, who was quite evidently sidewalk superintendent-in-chief. "I don't know why they spoiled the look of it by putting that brick work up at the top."

A blast from the steam shovel drowned the reply of his companion. I decided that it was time to move on for it was all too apparent that there was an excellent supply of kibitzers without me.

"No, I don't like it at all," the corpulent individual said.

There seemed to be a derisive note in the steam shovel's snort as I moved away.—G. S. Anderson, in Ottawa Journal.

"Rube" Programs Not Amusing

Farquhar Oliver, the U.F.O. member for Grey South in the Ontario legislature, is to be commended for a timely protest in that assembly against the cartoonists who poke fun at the rural people, and against the "rube" programs heard on the radio, sometimes presented under the auspices of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. Mr. Oliver feels it would make for better feeling if those things were eliminated.

Without a big farming population and one that is reasonably prosperous, this country would be in a bad way. The more prosperous the farmer is, the better for business and everybody else. It is also desirable that there should be good relations between the rural and urban peoples. But it is all too true that the farmers and their folk are lampooned by pictures, stories and radio. They are made to look stupid and uncouth. There are some stupid and uncouth people among the farming communities, but proportionately there are probably more dull and tough-looking people in the cities. Farming needs a great deal more than a strong back and an indifference to getting one's boots dirty and hands begrimed. The man who succeeds at farming has to possess, either by special college training or experience, or both, a comprehensive knowledge of various subjects, such as soils, needs, live stock handling and dairying, whereas a city man may only have to know about one subject. And at that he may rely on mechanical devices that do things better and faster than his brain could.

The modern farmer is a scientist; perhaps a home-trained scientist. He has more time for instructive reading and is taking an intelligent interest in political and world affairs. Averaging the countryman and the city dweller, the level of intelligence probably is higher in the former than in the latter. The conditions of his work make the farmer also more of a fighter for his existence. — Stratford Beacon Herald.

Little Girl Forgot To Say 'Your Majesty'

Winnipeg, May 25—(CP)—Chubby little Margaret Ray Tupper, grand - daughter of Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper of Manitoba, shook her bobbed hair disconsolately yesterday because she forgot to say "Your Majesty" when she met the Queen.

But Margaret Ray was pretty happy anyway because her name is "almost the same" as that of Princess Margaret Rose and she is the same age—eight.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King presented Margaret Ray, daughter of Charles W. Tupper, to Their Majesties as they were about to enter the luncheon room at Government House.

"Oh, yes, I saw you when I was arriving", the Queen told her. "How old are you?"

Margaret Ray stumbled over that one. "I'm seven—no, eight," she said.

"Oh, my little girl is exactly the same age," smiled the Queen.

Margaret Ray rushed to daddy's arms as soon as Their Majesties entered the luncheon hall. "She was awfully polite to me," then, sorrowfully, "I'm so sorry I forgot to say 'Your Majesty.'"

U. S. HOLDERS WIN $2,031,573

Twelve Residents of United States Have Tickets on First Three Horses

New York, May 24 (AP)—Twelve United States holders of tickets on the first three horses in the Epsom Downs Derby today won $865,800 in prize money from the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes.

Two Americans held tickets on Blue Peter, the winner, for a total of $280,800; five ticket holders on Fox Cub, second place, get a total of $351,000, and five on Heliopolis, third, receive $234,000.

American winnings total $2,031,573, and American investment in the sweeps, on the basis of proportionate drawings, was estimated at about $4,047,000. The total realized from sale of sweepstake tickets in all countries was $7,813,807 and the total allotted for prizes $4,474,548.

The two holders of tickets on Blue Peter, winner of the Derby, were: "Donegal Girl", 3055 Decatur Ave., Bronx, N.Y., and "Come to Papa", 508 West 132nd Street, New York City.

POTATO RARE IN AUSTRALIA

Melbourne, May 24 —(CP)— If the scarcity of potatoes in Australia continues, the time will arrive when slices will be served as a delicacy, says the Australian News Letter. Most wholesale buyers lost interest in potatoes when prices soared to record heights, and, as a fact, the vegetable is now almost unprocurable at any price. This scarcity is Commonwealth-wide, and the nation is depending on expected supplies from New Zealand.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Dennis spent the week-end in Toronto, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Hatch.

Mr. and Mrs. Loney, Kincardine, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lindsay, Bancroft, and Mrs. E. Gunter, Queen's Hotel, Carleton Place, were among the guests at the Loney-Glenn wedding.

Miss Dorothy Hazel Mullett, Trenton, will be among the nurses, who will receive diplomas at Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, at the graduation exercises on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Houston and Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Airhart of this city were in Whitby yesterday attending the annual May Court Festival of the Ontario Ladies' College.

Last evening the choir of Holloway Street Church, was entertained by Mrs. M. B. Denton at her home, West Bridge Street, when presentations to three members featured an unusually interesting meeting of the choir. After practice a series of games was enjoyed following which Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cordes who were observing their twenty-eighth wedding anniversary were presented by Miss Cunningham with a bouquet of flowers. The congratulations of the members were expressed by Mr. S. M. Anglin. Mrs. S. P. Hagerman who leaves shortly on an extended trip to the West was presented by Mrs. Denton with a book, while Mr. Connor proffered the good wishes of the choir. Rev. R. E. Newman spoke in high terms of the faithful work of these choir members, for many years. A delicious supper was served. Mrs. J. Livesay poured tea, the table being beautifully arranged with streamers, tapers, and a handsome wedding cake topped by miniature bride and groom. The singing of "They are Jolly Good Fellows" concluded a very gala occasion.

Weddings

DOYLE—PELOW

On May 22, in St. Mary's Church, Marysville, Margaret Lillian Pelow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Pelow, of South Lake, was united in marriage to Daniel William Doyle of Lonsdale, Ontario. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Doyle, the former a brother of the groom, attended the couple and two nephews of the groom served the nuptial mass. Rev. Father O'Gorman officiated.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

THE SUN WILL SHINE or it may be dull, but if you wear a navy wool suit you are bound to be smart in any weather. A beauty is of very thin wool, the skirt accordion pleated, the fitted jacket bound with dark blue satin. The binding also appears at the high bustline on the curved pockets.

It is fun to mix colors, which is the reason that the first time black and blue, and brown and black, are teamed together. A useful hat is a tiny flower pot of black felt, its top filled in with red moss roses the whole set off by a draped veil of navy blue silk mesh.

Everywhere we met with stripes in frocks, coats, accessories. A swell hat and bag team is a small toque made entirely of gay taffeta ribbon, gray with a plaid of stripes of yellow, red, blue and shocking pink. The fabric twists into a huge chou in front. The bag is made of the same fabric, but is lined in plain red taffeta.

DOG RETRIEVES LIGHTED STICK OF DYNAMITE

Greenville, S.C., May 25 (AP)—State Representative A. M. Hawkins and several friends, while cleaning out their favorite fishing hole, threw a stick of dynamite into the water. A dog jumped in, retrieved the stick and started returning it to the fishermen. They ran. The dog followed—until it was blown to bits.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Dr. Dafoe Strongly Advises Use of Pasteurized Milk

Pasteurization of milk was one of the greatest steps taken in destroying tubercular baccilli contained therein. Unquestionably it has saved thousands of babies' lives, because, as I told you before, a baby doesn't seem to have any resistance whatever to tuberculosis.

Pasteurization once had a great many enemies—people who claimed that pasteurization destroyed the properties of the milk and changed its flavor. However these opponents are gradually dwindling in number.

The process of pasteurizing milk is very simple. The milk is heated rapidly to a high temperature, and kept at that temperature for a period sufficient to destroy the bacteria in it. Then it is put in a refrigerator and cooled rapidly, and is kept cool until it is placed on the doorstep of the consumer. As long as this milk is kept cool, any bacteria which might have escaped the heating process, will not be able to grow.

This appears to be a fool-proof method of preventing tubercular infection due to milk. The surprising thing to me is that there are still people who are opposed to it. I think that if these people would only take the trouble to acquaint themselves with the facts, they would find that milk which has been pasteurized is the same in every way as milk that has not been pasteurized—except that it isn't filled with thousands of harmful bacteria. In fact, the only criticism I have in connection with pasteurization is that it destroys some of the Vitamin C. Actually this is unimportant, for even unpasteurized milk contains so little of this vitamin that more must be added to the diet, either by irradiating the milk or by taking it in cod-liver oil or in some other form. So losing a little through the pasteurization is of very little consequences.

Sometimes when you live out in the country, you can't get pasteurized milk. That was the case after the Quintuplets were born. Of course they were given mother's milk for a long time, and then evaporated milk. But when we came to the place where cow's milk was indicated, we didn't have any facilities for obtaining the properly pasteurized food.

Until we could complete arrangements for this kind of milk to be supplied, we pasteurized —boiled — the milk which we got from nearby farmers.

When people write me now, as they often do, to ask me if the Quintuplets are given raw or pasteurized milk, I can tell them that not one drop of raw cow's milk has been given to our five youngsters. We have always been very careful, because we believe in practising what we preach, and milk is one article of food we don't believe in fooling with.

So, mothers, if you can't get pasteurized milk, just boil the milk yourselves, and then keep it cool. In this way you may destroy a little Vitamin C. But you have also destroyed tubercular baccilli which if left in the milk, might have threatened the life of your child.

MARSH HILL Y. P. U.

The regular meeting of Marsh Hill Y.P.U. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heaseman on Friday, May 5th, with thirty-five present. The hymn was followed by prayer and the Scripture lesson. Jack Dafoe and Miss Edythe Cooke gave readings on the theme 'Peace', after which the roll call was answered by a verse of Scripture containing the word 'peace.' After the singing of another hymn the meeting was turned over to Mr. Leslie Finkle, Devotional Convener. Mrs. Meale gave a fine reading which was followed by a hymn and readings by Grant Wright, Leslie Finkle and Gordon Saunders. A piano solo by Mrs. B. Mitts preceded the topic prayer "Life" by Mrs. W. Lough. The hymn "My Father Is Rich" and the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting after which the hostess served candy and all engaged in games.

On Thursday, May 11th, about fifty members of the Y.P.U. assembled in Marsh Hill United Church. Mrs. G. Frederick read "The Marsh Hill Young People's Spirit" which was followed by a hymn and prayer by Rev. Mr. Scott. Psalms I and C were read by Misses Eileen Tanner and Marjorie Parks. A reading by Miss Margaret Vanderwater, "Beautiful Life" and a hymn closed the devotional service after which the president, Ralph Campbell, turned the meeting over to Rev. Mr. Scott of Stirling who showed a splendid collection of pictures taken in Egypt. After this interesting part of the program, Farley Lindenfield, Missionary Convener, closed the meeting with the hymn, "O love that will not let me go" and the Mizpah benediction.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, May 26

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A RATHER routine state of affairs in business is the augury based on the lunar rulership. The social, romantic or subtler phases of living may take the interest from the workaday and sordid. The mind will experience a peculiar sort of uplift, with urges or aspirations to indulge in poetry, music or art, or in emotions of a mystical or idealistic character. Such yearnings seek intrigue or secrecy, although the desire for pleasure and social pastimes may be accentuated.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a rather commonplace year as far as business is concerned. The desires and emotions may have either an idealistic, Utopian, dreamy or artistic color, which may find inspiration in creative work. This may be in poetry, music, sculpture or in mystical experience. There may be gratifying social or romantic intrigues, having curious angles.

A child born on this day may have a romantic, mystical, or altruistic cast, with creative ability in inspirational lines. It may have a rather idealistic life, with much social activity or artistic expression of social incitements as in movie composition.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Romantic Heartbreak

Dear Miss Fairfax

For two years all my plans were readying for my marriage. The date was set, my trousseau ready. My fiance was called away on a business trip during which he met another woman and married her. There is the bitter humiliation of facing life, as one of the discarded.

My fiance is apparently not happy in his choice. He has tried to get in touch with me, but I have declined to see him. I've thought of the easiest way out, but don't want to leave the scene as a quitter. I have an excellent job and make a good salary.

Desolate

It would be so easy to say you've made a lucky escape from a man who proved to be utterly unworthy and now wants to come back to you. He's the weather-vane type. You'll realize this in time, and your good fortune.

Meanwhile, what you call the 'easiest way out' would be an absurd waste of a fine life for one not worth while. Every life has its dash of tragedy. But we can do much toward tipping the scales for happiness as energetically as you would for any other blessing—health, independence, attractive surroundings.

Gratify your little whims; if you like music, don't grudge the price of tickets. The same with plays or movies. If you like pretty clothes get them. Seek cheerful companionship, make new contracts, entertain. Any girl with a good salary can give delightful little parties. You're in luck, though you may not realize it now.

No Forwarding Address

Dear Miss Fairfax

Nearly a year ago I met a young man, and three months later we became engaged. We were both very much in love. Suddenly he stopped writing, and the last time I heard from him was three months ago, on a card, which had no address.

I've tried every way to find him, and can't imagine what has happened, as he said he would write later. Does he care? Is all this suspense and unhappiness on my part worth while? He aren't kids. He is 37 and I'm 34.

Puzzled

Lots of things might have happened to prevent this young man from writing. The possibilities are he may have discovered he was not sufficiently in love to go on with the engagement. If that's the reason, he should have written, and broken the engagement decently, which is permissible, these days.

He may be jobless and may have made up his mind that marriage is unfair to you, in which case also he should have let you know in a straightforward letter. Illness or accident is out of the question. He could have got someone to write for him. In case of death, the post-office returns mail marked "Deceased".

Men drop out of engagements for any of these reasons, and while it's hard for a girl to keep on sanely and sensibly, it's the only thing to do.

Clandestine Courtship

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've known each other a year and a half, but as he lives in a distant state, I seldom see him. My sister, through whom I met this man, told my parents things that were untrue, which caused serious trouble in the family. I promised never to write or see him again, but I broke that promise and receive his letters through my friends.

Recently he has asked me to marry him, and promises to come to see me but never appears and always has some sort of silly excuse. I can't say yes, as my parents don't know I still write to him. Is he really in love with me, as he says, or is he just having a good time? Should I try to forget him? I'm 18 years old.

Bobby

Your letter which is too long to print in the whole convinces me you are more in love with love than with this young man who lacks the courage to visit you—breaking promise after promise. At 18 it seems wiser to take your parents' advice and try to forget a boy who hasn't the courage to keep his word about seeing you in your home.

A good many young men get a great kick out of writing love letters to girls even though they're not in earnest. This young man strikes me as belonging to the class which booms the sale of postage stamps.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Man Writes About "Hats Off in Movies"

From my mail-bag: A letter from a man who has suffered, as we all are made to suffer, from the limitless number of selfish women who do not remove their hats in the movies.

Writes my good friend and ally:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

More power to you! And for your grand suggestion of a "Hats Off in the Movies" Week.

When do you think we can start this nation-wide appeal? Your strong-armed words show that you would be an excellent sponsor. I assure you I'm a vehement seconder-of-the-motion. And every man I know ——or see bobbing his head from side to side in the movies—will champion our cause.

It seems a shame (in deference to you, Mrs. Beeckman, I omitted the forceful adjective I was about to put before that word) that movies, which give so much relaxation to most of us, should be eclipsed, partially or totally, just because of the high, wide and not-so-handsome doo-funnies that women are pleased to call 'hats'.

Do you think that if we rebellious men should begin to wear our hats in the movies it might be an object lesson?

Or do you think that we might enlist the cooperation of the movie theatre managers and persuade them to flash on the screen before the movie-showing. LADIES WILL PLEASE REMOVE YOUR HATS? Do you think that word "LADIES" would register?

And three cheers more for you, Mrs. Beeckman, for your scathing (and I'm glad they were scathing) comments on the "snippy" (the word was yours) attitude of most women when requested to take off their hats. I've conjured up my politest words, and said them in what I thought was a most courtly manner. Almost always the look I get would put a buzz-saw to shame. Such a protracted fuss is usually made over taking off the offending hat, such ostentatious to-do about the rearranging of the hair-do! By the time this is all accomplished, a nice slice of the picture has gone by, the vision of the people behind me has been obscured, and I'm poisoned by my murderous thoughts.

Keep using your "punch" words about this thorn-in-the-eye bane of our movie theatres! You're an admirable crusader. As I said in the beginning of this letter . . .MORE POWER TO YOU!

Faithfully,

Your Friend and Champion

So, girls and women and hats . . . there you are. Going to the movies tonight? Be a good sport . . . take off your hat!

Courtesy Tip

If you receive a formal wedding announcement, you may be puzzled as to whether or not it should be acknowledged. Strictly speaking, a wedding announcement does not call for an acknowledgment. But it is certainly polite to write a gracious note of good wishes. If circumstances and our wishes prompt us to send a gift, this is, of course, also proper.

IN CASH PRIZES
Plan a Supper for Royalty
First Prize $200.00 and a Sterling Silver Cup!

What kind of supper would you serve the King and Queen?

By Evangeline

Supposing their Majesties, whose preference for simple meals is well known, were to drop in for supper at your home. What would you serve them? Draw up a simple, typically Canadian menu and send it to me. Robin Hood Flour Mills are offering 187 cash prizes totalling $1,000.00 for the best menus.

A GRAND LIST OF PRIZES
1st Prize - - - - - - - $200.00
and a Sterling Silver Cup
2nd Prize - - - - - - - 100.00
3rd Prize - - - - - - - - 50.00
9 PROVINCIAL PRIZES
(one to be awarded to the best entry in each province after the winners of 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes have been selected), $25.00 each
25 Prizes, each - - - - $5.00
150 Prizes, each - - - - $2.00

If you don't win 1st, 2nd or 3rd Prize, you have a chance for the $25.00 Provincial Prize which will be awarded for competition only in your province. And if you don't win one of these you can win one of the 25 prizes of $5.00 each or one of the 150 prizes of $2.00 each. No contestant can win more than one prize so that 187 Canadian women will share the prize money.

Just Plan a Simple, Home-Like Meal

Think of a meal which, in your opinion, would give our King and Queen a correct and favorable impression of Canadian foods. Choose what you like but be sure to have at least three items in each menu which contain Robin Hood Flour.

Follow These Simple Rules Which put Everything in a Nutshell:

1. 187 cash prizes and a handsome Sterling Silver Cup, suitably engraved with your name, will be awarded for the best supper menus to serve the King and Queen during May or June, using Canadian ingredients only (spices excepted) and with Robin Hood Flour used in three or more items on each menu.
2. Send in as many entries as you wish. Each menu entered must be written on a single sheet of paper, with your name and post office address written clearly at the top of the page.
3. Each menu shall have three courses: a soup, main course and dessert. Each course may include whatever dishes you would serve to make up a well-balanced meal in a typically Canadian home where the homemaker prepares the food for the family. (A sample menu is given on this page for a guide.)
4. Write on the back of your entry paper the recipe for the dish you consider the best in your menu.
5. Each entry will be judged on its merits as representing a simple, well-balanced, typically Canadian meal. In case of a tie the prize will be given to the menu with the best recipe.
6. To each menu entered, pin the guarantee certificate from your bag of Robin Hood Flour. No entry can be considered unless accompanied by the guarantee certificate.
7. The closing date is June 30th, 1939. All entries must be received by midnight of that date. Mail your entries to "Evangeline", Dept. O, Home Baking Service, Robin Hood Flour Mills Ltd., Toronto, Ont. No employee of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited or any member of their families may enter the contest.
8. I have appointed the following well-known dieticians as judges:—Miss Jessie Read of the Toronto "Evening Telegram", Mrs. Madeline Day, Chief Lecturer of the "School of Canadian Cookery", and Miss Marie Holmes of the Toronto "Daily Star".
9. If, for any reason, the Royal visit should be postponed, this contest will be held just the same.
10. All menus and recipes become the property of Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

Sample Type of Menu

Now, to give you some idea how to go about making your menu, I have put together a menu as a guide to help you. Of course, I haven't mentioned any actual dishes so as to leave your choice absolutely free:

SOUP
SALAD
MAIN COURSE
WITH TWO VEGETABLES
DESSERT
BEVERAGES
BREADS OR ROLLS, OR OTHER
BAKED GOODS

"In the above menu I consider my best recipe to be the ——————." The recipe for it and the method of making it is enclosed. (Name and Address of Sender.)

A Final and Important Word

Mail your entries now. The closing date for entries is June 30th. Send in as many menus as you please but pin a guarantee slip to each menu. Prize winners will be announced in this paper as soon as possible after judging has been completed.

DIVORCEE'S DAUGHTER

—By Vivian Radcliffe—

CHAPTER I

Janice Flagg went bravely into the shabby little furnished apartment she and her mother, for the last two years, had called home. The place no longer held any terror for her. She had mastered all that in these few stark days just past.

Helene Mills and Lawrence Worthington, close upon her heels, exchanged significant glances.

"Please, Jan, pack up and come with me until things are straightened out," Helene begged.

Mutely Janice shook her head. Things were very straight — very clear in her own mind.

"But my dear, that is just what you should do," Lawrence insisted gently. "You mustn't stay here. You'll become morbid."

Janice determinedly turned her eyes toward the living-room window through which her mother had plunged three days before. Pretty little mother had never seen life clearly. It had always been a tempestuous affair. Life must not repeat itself in that agonizing pattern for her.

"The rent is paid until the end of the month," she murmured.

"If it's money—" Lawrence began, but a movement of Jan's hand silenced him. She went on as if he had not spoken.

"By that time I'll have a job and know what I can afford to do. A lot can happen in two weeks."

Odd how even that window could not bring healing tears to her eyes. It had seemed for months that she had braced herself to meet some unforeseen disaster. Mother had been so restless, so hysterically gay, so desperately morose.

"A job!" Lawrence hurried to her side, put a tender arm about her shoulders. "My dear child, you don't have to work. Your mother hoped you'd return my love—marry me. Lois would want you to let me take care of you. In a few days we'll slip down to Yuma and be quietly married."

Janice flung aside her black coat and hat, facing him with wildly brilliant blue eyes. She laughed jerkily.

"My dear child," she mocked. "That's just it! My dear child, be my wife. I'm not a child any more. I'm twenty. But you're—you're at least forty."

"But my dear ch—Jan," he protested earnestly, his face red with embarrassment, "I love you. Age doesn't count and I can make you happy. I will make you happy."

Helene interposed quickly, as Janice shrugged away from the man's reaching hand and walked to the window that had been her mother's exit from the turmoil of an extra's life in Hollywood.

"A funeral and a proposal within a few hours are awfully bad taste, Mr. Worthington. Let Jan get her balance. Give her a chance at a job for a few months. She's got a lot of sense."

"A job—in the movies?"

"No!" Janice turned back from the window, her oval face drawn, its whiteness enhanced by the straight black hair lying flat against her soft cheeks. "I would not go into the movies to keep from starving. I hate that life! I haven't been going to the university, as mother thought, but taking a course at the secretarial school. By the end of the month they'll send me out on a job."

Helene, who had known her friend's secret all along, demanded of Mr. Worthington, "Didn't I tell you she had sense?"

"But — there's no need of all this!" he protested.

He knew, as did Janice, that Lois Flagg had expected her daughter to complete the university course, then marry a wealthy man who would give her all the things a daughter of Ogden Flagg was entitled to in this world.

"No? Well, Mother had a hard time between parts and there was need of one of us having a steady job."

"Your father's allowance for your care and education—"

"Should have stopped when I was eighteen, but mother asked him to extend it until after I finished the university." Bitterness seemed to drip from every word. "Now it will stop! I want nothing from him. I hate him!"

The silence that followed was filled with dissenting thoughts. Janice could feel them crowding in on her, trying to beat down her determination to be independent.

"I'd like to be alone," she almost begged at last. "There's so much to do here and—I want to go back to school tomorrow. I can't miss any more days."

Words of protest rose to Lawrence's lips but at a swift pleading glance from Janice, Helene hustled him off.

Coming home from secretarial school next afternoon, Janice found an elderly man waiting for her in the lobby. In one glance she realized he was a professional man. His conservative clothes, the complete competence of his manner and the searching directness of his eyes labelled him.

"Miss Janice Flagg?" he asked, in verification of the elevator boy's signal.

"Yes." Her voice was wary. She knew something unpleasant was coming. There was a queer tumultuous sensation in her diaphragm, always a barometer of impending trouble. Something more about her her mother?

She couldn't bear that. All she wanted was to forget everything that had happened since she had last seen her pretty mother alive. People must allow her to forget or she'd simply have to run away.

"I am Joseph P. Delcombe." He offered his engraved card. A member of a Chicago law firm. Chicago! That meant—father!

"Your father was unable to come himself. I am his emissary, authorized to present a plan I am sure you will find pleasing."

It gave her some confidence to realize that her direct blue eyes were disconcerting to him. Entering the apartment, he sat on the edge of his chair, his hands folded over his brief case that lay across his knees.

Deliberately Janice placed her books on the side table, took off her hat and coat, smoothed the straight black hair with a none too steady hand. She dreaded this interview, but she must not allow him to see that. As she faced him, standing beside the table, she managed a terse, "Well?"

"Won't you sit down?" His tone was kindly but it was apparent he did not relish his mission.

"I prefer to take my blows standing," Janice said curtly.

CHAPTER II

"Your father would have come himself but business demanded he be in New York today," Delcombe began. "I should have been here yesterday but my plane was grounded in Denver and I had to come on by rail."

He paused, and as Janice remained silently watching him, her only sign of emotion her restless fingers which flipped the pages of her books, he went on, hurriedly now.

"Mr. Flagg—er—your father—regrets this terrible experience through which you have just passed. He sent me to assume control of all matters and wishes me to bring you back to Chicago. He feels your place is with him—and your sister, Miss Ivonne."

"Oh!" The single word was scathing.

"He wants to know you, my dear, to give you the home you should have, the education and advantages his daughter deserves."

His gaze took in the room, a flicker of distaste showing for a moment. She smiled bitterly as she, too, looked momentarily about the cheaply furnished apartment.

But as her eyes came back to meet his they flashed dangerously. She spoke in a studied manner, forcing her voice to be calm, not to betray her inner emotions.

"There was an agreement made, when my mother divorced my father, that I should remain with her. My father was to pay for my support and education until I reached eighteen. That agreement had been fulfilled; more than fulfilled. I didn't know until six months ago that my mother had asked for a continuance of payments until I completed my course at the university."

"Your father was glad to do that," the lawyer interposed hastily.

"But I was not glad to have him—or my mother ask that additional money. When I learned about it, I left the university and went to a secretarial school. I'll be ready for a position by the end of this month."

"But my dear, there is no need for you to work. Your father's home is open to you. It's your home now."

The temptation to accept a sheltered life was great. She couldn't remember many years of abundance. She was entitled to the same things her sister Ivonne had—a car, a plane, trips abroad, all those lovely things she had read about in the rotogravure sections beneath pictures showing Ivonne's numerous activities. But a determination to be independent, that had been growing since childhood, asserted itself.

"This is my home — here or wherever I can afford to live on the money I earn."

A queer smile flickered at the corners of the lawyers mouth and his eyes seemed to look approvingly at her for a moment.

"Your father was afraid you might feel this way. He authorized me to say he wanted you with him very much—"

"Without choice I was given to my mother while father took Ivonne. We'll let it stand that way. I'm not afraid of life and I could not live where I knew I had not been welcome until mother's—death."

"I'm sure you were always welcome. It was your mother's stipulation that your father could not see you."

"But he agreed." Suddenly she confided in him. "You see, my loyalty is to my mother—the parent I knew."

"You — can't hate your father! Surely your mother didn't do that to you!"

Anger burned within her. The strong protecting the weak, the living hiding the faults of the dead.

"I don't love him. I have no reason to."

"Then you will not return to his home?"

"I couldn't, and be honest with myself and him."

The surprised expression on the lawyer's face as he exclaimed. "That sounds like your father speaking", made the first kindly feelings toward her absent parent come to life.

"Really?" She failed to be as flippant as she endeavored. "Then with that settled, you will excuse me? I have a lot of studying to do. I must make up the work I missed."

"But—but things are not settled!" He hastened on as her cold blue eyes studied him. "I must straighten out everything — arrange an adequate allowance, see you installed in proper living quarters with a suitable companion, if you will not go to your father's home."

Even as she fought the temptation to accept the life of wealth and ease offered she had to admit to herself her father was kind and generous.

"You may tell my father that I appreciate his kindness but that I am entirely capable of caring for myself. I have attended to everything. There is really nothing you can do."

The man drew a check from his wallet, offering it to her across the table. Her scornful gaze fell upon it, not failing to note the figures $1,000. She waved it aside but there was a queer little catch in her voice as she spoke. Turning down that check had not been easy. Inwardly she whipped herself to a feeling of outraged pride.

"I have money. I do not need more from my father. He cannot buy his way into my affections. Anyhow, I think he has enough of a problem on his hands with Ivonne."

The lawyer coughed with embarrassment. "I have to admit, between you and me, he has quite a problem there. But you are your father's daughter. He would find much comfort in you."

"I'm sorry," Janice spoke now with a gentleness she had not felt before, "but I must live my life as I see right. It will be difficult for you to explain to father how complete a failure this visit has been. But you must. And you must make him understand that my decision is final."

The check was returned to the wallet. The man picked up his hat and moved toward the door. "He will understand that quite thoroughly when I explain how like him you are. But remember there is your father's side to the story you have heard from your mother."

"Goo dafternoon, Mr. Delcombe." Her manner was reproving.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Delcombe." hope we meet again. I have great admiration for your father, and I regret your attitude will deprive him of much happiness."

For a long time after the door closed upon the departure of the lawyer, Janice stood at the table, her restless fingers playing with the pages of the books.

"You are your father's daughter," kept repeating itself in her consciousness.

CHAPTER III

During the next week everything seemed to combine to torment Janice, to disturb her studied calm. Lawrence took her to dinner each night. Though they went to quiet places, people turned to follow her with their eyes.

She could hear their whispered words. "That's Lois Flagg's daughter. What that poor child has gone through!"

At school the girls were kind, reserved but friendly. The teachers endeavored to give her courage to face the world. Everyone seemed to feel she must be stimulated. And she didn't need that. She had nerve. She could face the world, even the remarks of persons she passed on the street.

People thought mother had become tired of a world in which extras' work at the studios was scarce, thought she had been weak and spineless in jumping from that window to end a worrisome existence and leave her daughter to face the results.

Janice knew differently. She knew mother herself had loved Lawrence, though mother had never allowed a word of the truth to pass her lips. She knew mother had wanted her to marry Lawrence, to escape life and be beloved by a wealthy man who could give her her heart's desires.

She had argued with mother numerous times about the way she allowed every cent to slip through her fingers, never putting aside for a rainy day. Oh, she and mother had seen so many things in life so differently.

Once mother had exclaimed impatiently, "How like Ogden you are!" then bit her lips and never allowed such an admission to slip again.

There were times when Jan felt like the older person. She wanted to shake her mother until some senses entered the pretty head. But mother's sweet irresponsibilities had always softened her anger. In resignation she knew she would have to assume eventual responsibility for them both. But now that was over.

Jan missed the companionship, the responsibilities, of that pretty mother. Yet deep within her she hoped mother was at last happy. Therefore Jan could not cry, could not feel as those others did when they passed her on the street, when the name Lois Flagg was mentioned.

Each night at dinner Lawrence renewed his insistence that they slip down to Yuma and be quietly married. He offered a trip around the world, to the Orient, to Honolulu until her mother's suicide had been forgotten. It all sounded very enticing, but Janice could not say the simple word yes.

Honest with herself, she knew it would be easier to accept her father's offered home than to marry Lawrence. The fact that her mother had loved Lawrence did not stand in the way. It was true Lawrence offered security—and his love. But there was no romance to thrill her in the prospect of being his wife.

Jan did not want a marriage such as her mother's, one that went on the rocks within five or six years. She did not want second and third husbands, the sordid atmosphere of a divorce court to gain freedom to go on to—something else, or someone else.

Though she liked Lawrence immensely, was grateful for his long-standing friendship, his consideration, she did not love him. All his assertions that she would love him when she got over the shock of her mother's death did not ring true to her ears.

She knew deep within her that she could never love Lawrence as she could some man she dreamed would come into her life in the future. And until she loved—loved with her whole body and soul—she could not marry.

Lawrence's repeated "I'll make you love me, darling, just give me the chance," only made her want to run away from him, to go where she would not see him for a while, could muster up the courage to turn him away from her existence even as a friend. She knew, when she definitely told him she would not marry him, he would go out of her life—as suitor and friend.

That would leave only Helene of all the many who had come and gone in their lives while Mother had been alive. She hated to think of that aloneness.

"I'm tired, Lawrence," she protested to him over their demitasses. "Please take me home. Helene will be at the apartment at eight. She's spending the night."

"You hardly give me any of your time," he complained. "It isn't fair to treat me this way."

"I have dinner with you every night. Don't you realize that I'm working hard at school, and at night I'm getting ready to move? I'm going to share a room with Helene. It will be cosy and it will cut down expenses for both."

"You don't have to do any of this!"

"I know. Maybe that's part of the reason why I'm so determined to."

In the apartment with Helene she made her decision. She could not go on this way any longer. She must get away from everything she had known for the last fifteen years, get away from Hollywood and curious eyes, and Lawrence, most of all.

"I'm not going to live with you, Helene," she said quickly as though afraid she would change her mind.

"You're—what?"

"I'm going east to New York and get a job there."

"Are you crazy?"

"Probably, but anyway that's what I'm going to do. How'll I get there? I can't use the little money left to go by bus and I must have something to tide me over until I get a job."

Two heads are better than one. It was Helene, once she realized that Janice was in earnest, who hit upon the plan.

"Put an advertisement in the paper that you'll do anything for your carfare to New York," Helene suggested quickly.

"You've been to the movies!" laughed Janice. But as she considered the idea, realized that she had read many such advertisements, she warmed to it.

"I'll insert an advertisement tomorrow!" she exclaimed enthusiastically. "You are a friend, Helene!"

"Yeah! Swell friend, helping you to go away to a strange city. If I really were your friend I'd make you accept your father's offer and go home to him."

Janice shook her head thoughtfully. "No, I'm going to New York. I've got to prove to myself, Helene, that I can care for myself before I face my father—if I ever do."

(To Be Continued).

Hands out to slip into perfectly fascinating gloves. They are of soft suede in lovely color combinations such as soft blue, with insets between the fingers of strawberry rust or vice versa. Green with heather insets are lovely.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

ROYAL NAMES

old village pump as a rendezvous; was the scene of countless luncheons, banquets and dances; heard the thunder of political oratory and echoed with the uproarious aftermath of each election.

The new Hotel Vancouver was built originally by the Canadian National Railways, but will be operated jointly with the Canadian Pacific Railway. It was the C.P.R. which built the original Hotel Vancouver in 1887, one year after the city's incorporation and the same year the railway reached its steel lines to the Pacific coast.

New Hotel Massive Structure.

The new hotel is a massive grey stone edifice whose sixteen storeys were raised and furnished at a cost of some $12,000,000. Its grandfather was a simple frame structure literally built in the bush.

Early photographs show it standing on the outskirts of the boisterous little logging town amid fallen timbers. As the town expanded its site on the corner of Georgia and Granville streets became the centre of the bustling downtown shopping district.

Fire wiped out the original hotel and in 1905 it was replaced by a brick structure, part of which still nestles at the rear of the present building, erected in 1912.

The fate of the old hotel, with its 500 guest rooms, its mirrored ballroom, its reception rooms and banquet halls, remains uncertain. Some say it would make a civic centre, others cite its value as an apartment house or department store. The question must be decided in three years, the deadline before it is demolished.

FREEDOM, JUSTICE

train, in an effort to regain time lost on the tour that extended through 26 miles of Winnipeg and the adjacent town of St. Boniface where they received an enthusiastic welcome from Mayor George McLean in behalf of the French-speaking residents of Western Canada.

Visit Military Hospital

They also visited Deer Lodge Military Hospital, waved to gathered groups of school children, took part in an old English ritual of collecting traditional rent from the Hudson's Bay Company—and left on the train 11 minutes late.

In an Empire broadcast during the day, the King made the longest radio speech—800 words—he has ever made. He said spiritual dignity and material happiness of human life must be general before the Empire can claim to be of service to its own people and the world, and added that the Empire's wealth and power are but instruments and the end is "freedom, justice and peace in equal numbers for all, secure against attack from without and from within."

Spoke Slowly

His Majesty's speech was delivered in a rich, resonant voice. He spoke slowly as always and had difficulty on only two occasions, when he was pronouncing the words "society" and "inspiration."

The faith in reason and fair play shared by the United States and the British Empire "is one of the chief ideals that guides the British Empire in all its ways today," he said.

No man would ever again conceive the British and American peoples resorting to war to resolve their differences.

"The journey which the Queen and I are making in Canada has been a deeply moving experience and I welcome this opportunity of sharing with my subjects in all parts of the world some of the thoughts and feeling which it has inspired in me," the King said.

He spoke of the Christian civilization of Europe being "profoundly troubled and challenged" from within. "We are striving to restore its standards; though the task is long and hard. Asia too is changing fast, and its mind is deeply disturbed. Is not this a moment when the Old World in its turn might look for hope and guidance to the achievements of the New?"

Freedom, Justice, Peace

Later he said: "It is not in power or wealth alone, nor in Dominion over other peoples, that the true greatness of an Empire consists. Those things are but the instrument; they are not the end or the ideal.

"The end is freedom, justice and peace in equal measure for all, secure against attack from without and within. It is only by adding to the spiritual dignity and material happiness of human life in all its myriad homes that an Empire can claim to be of service to its own peoples and to the world."

The King's broadcast followed loyal and affectionate greetings brought over the air from representative subjects across Canada and from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Rhodesia, Jamaica, Newfoundland, England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

The King listened and spoke from Government House here with the Queen by his side. The first two fingers of his right hand were taped to protect an injury he suffered when they were jammed in the door of a coach on the Royal train. The injury was slight and he carried out his usual practice of shaking hands with all who were presented to him.

Receives Token Payment

At the historic gates of old Fort Garry, King George received a token payment of rent—tribute from the ancient Hudson's Bay Company.

A payment demanded under charter granted the great fur trade company by King Charles 11 in 1670, was made by P. Ashley Cooper, Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company who came from London, England, for the historical ceremony, most colorful of the day.

It was not a payment of gold or silver but the ancient fur trade token—two elk heads and two rare, black beaver pelts, the pick from the catch of northern trappers. In the Great North-West of a century ago beaver skins were used by the company as currency in its territories.

A fanfare of trumpets sounded for the arrival of Their Majesties at the entrance to the old fort, built in 1835 near the junction of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers, famed in the historical lore of the west.

6 YEAR PRISON TERM IMPOSED FOR ASSAULT

Brockville, Ont., May 25—(CP)— Lucien Melleau, alias Romeo Laroche, 33, of Quebec, was sentenced here today by Magistrate G. A. Wright to serve six years in Kingston penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to indecent assault of an eight-year-old girl near Newboyne, Leeds County, on May 8 last. Melleau was identified by the child as well as by farmers living in that district. He was arrested at Ottawa. Melleau was convicted at Cornwall in 1933 of a similar offence and then sentenced to two years in prison with 10 lashes.

LEGS ARE AMPUTATED AFTER LEAP FROM FREIGHT TRAIN

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Legs of Albert Lupiccini, 16, Toronto, were amputated in hospital early today after they were mangled in a leap from a freight train. The boy jumped to the edge of the platform and was thrown back beneath the wheels.

Albert and his brother William, 20, had travelled from Orillia, Ont., in a box car. William jumped first and landed safely. After the accident he ran for aid and found a milk driver who called police.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Arrest Bulldog Drummond" "Sudden Money"

"Sudden Money", Paramount's new comedy sensation has arrived in Belleville and now is one of the current feature attractions playing at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Sudden Money" is a hearty and swiftly-paced storey about the experiences of a sweepstakes-winning American family. Charlie Ruggles and Marjorie Rambeau head a well-chosen cast in a story that knits hilarious comic situations with a meaningful dramatic story.

The picture shows the colorful and exuberant members of the "Patterson" family before father "strikes it rich" in a sweepstakes, later in the process of spending frantically their sudden wealth, and finally in the cold dawn when their wealth is gone and they take stock of what it has brought them.

Of all possible sweepstakes winners, the "Pattersons" seem surely the most deserving as the story opens. The father, played by Ruggles, a former college bandleader, now a cigar store clerk, hopes against hope that someday he will be able to take up his youthful career where he left off.

Sweepstakes Spree

Miss Rambeau the flighty wife and mother, devotes her few spare hours to painting in the attic, believing that enough time and training would enable her to become a full-fledged painter. Her brother, Broderick Crawford, cleans up playing the horses "on paper" and hopes to try his "system" with real money some day. The family's pretty daughter, Evelyn Keyes, dissatisfied with her gas-station boy friend, dreams of marrying money and society.

When Ruggles unexpectedly hits the sweepstakes for $90,000, every member of the family gets the chance to turn his or her dreams into reality, and their experiences in doing this form the madcap plot of the picture. A real-life twist is provided in the climax, when they all learn that their long-cherished whims have put them on just the wrong track.

"Arrest Bulldog Drummond"

Thrills, suspense and good-natured comedy go hand-in-hand to make the new "Bulldog Drummond" picture "Arrest Bulldog Drummond", the second hit now showing at the McCarthy Theatre, one that surpasses the many other 'Drummond' productions and for mystery and story, plus excellent direction is just about as fine a film any patron will be privileged to see for a long time to come.

John Howard, as the head of the cast, plays the famed amateur sleuth with as much ease as if he had been born in the role, which is practically the case, as this picture marks the fifth time he has played it. He is capably assisted by a talented cast which includes Heather Angel, as the sweetheart who somehow never becomes a wife: H. B. Warner, as the long-suffering "Inspector Nielson" of Scotland Yard; in addition to Reginald Denny, E. E. Clive and Jean Fenwick, who also render excellent performances. Another exciting episode of "Flying G-Men" is also presented at each performance.

AT THE BELLE

"DARK VICTORY"

If there really was any doubt, after "Jezebel" and "The Sisters", as to just who is the greatest actress on the screen today, there can certainly be no more argument on the matter after everyone has seen—and they will—Bette Davis in her latest Warner Bros. picture "Dark Victory," which is now on the Belle screen.

The new film is fully worthy of the talents of its lustrous star. It tells a love story of transcendant beauty and deeply moving poignantly and it provides a central character upon whose portrayal Miss Davis can lavish every resource of her consummate art.

Of course, while every happening in the picture revolves about the girl played by Miss Davis, the production is by no means a monopoly for her. An exceptionally able supporting cast, numbering in it such luminaries as George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Henry Travers and Ronald Reagan, was provided by Warner Bros., and the superlative performance of the star seems to have inspired them all to attain a degree of ensemble excellence which has rarely before been achieved either on the stage or screen.

In the screen play based by Casey Robinson on a stage play by George Emerson Brewer Jr., and Bertram Bloch, Miss Davis is presented as a 1939 model of all that is best in American girls of good breeding and great wealth. She is the gay, popular belle of a hard-riding and hard-drinking set of "horsey" society folk, but she is decent, unselfish and altogether likeable. Her only fault is that her life has been an aimless pursuit of pleasure. Then love and accompanying tragedy come into her life and change her into a mature woman, whose courage conquers life itself.

The role, as can be seen from this brief summation, ranges across the whole field of human emotions. And Miss Davis is equally facile and convincing in the depiction of every emotion from the most light-hearted whimsically to the utterest and darkest despair. But, above and beyond this pyrotechinical display of sheer acting skill, she imbues her performance with a deep sincerity which makes it impossible to resist her, impossible to remain cold to her.

As the young surgeon, Brent has a role of rare sympathy and charm, and he plays it with an honesty and a restrained intensity that makes the romantic passage between him and Miss Davis, scenes long to be remembered.

Bogart has a role altogether unlike any he has ever done on the screen before and he fairly revels in it. He is the Irish horse trainer employed by the ill-fated heiress, and he is a vigorous, earthy fellow, crude, disturbingly frank and even insulting at times, but with a sentimental heart that makes him dare to love above his station.

One of the most interesting features of the production is that it marks the American screen debut of Geraldine Fitzgerald. This Irish lass, who obtained her training at the Gate Theatre in Dublin and then made a sensational New York stage debut in "Heartbreak House" last year, is obviously being prepared by Warner Bros. for stardom soon, and in a role that is second in importance only to that of Miss Davis in "Dark Victory", she demonstrates that the opinion of her employers is more than justified.

Travers is an appealing figure as the family physician of the stricken heiress, young Reagan is charming as an irresponsible society youth whose only important feeling about anything is his deep affection for the heroine. Lesser roles are expertly handled by Cora Witherspoon, Dorothy Peterson, Virginia Brissac, Charles Richman and Herbert Rawlinson.

At the directorial helm of this remarkable production was Edmund Goulding, and no other director in Hollywood could have been better for the job. He has added considerably to his repute for beautifully restrained handling of stories which are mainly concerned with sentiment and feeling.

PLANS APPROVED FOR NEW NIAGARA BRIDGE

Washington, May 25 (AP)—Louis Johnson, Assistant United States Secretary of War, approved today plans of the Niagara Falls Bridge Commission for a bridge across the Niagara River between Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Niagara Falls, Ont.

The House of Representatives yesterday approved and sent to the Senate a bill extending for one and three years respectively from June 16, 1939, the time for commencing and completing construction of an international span to replace the bridge destroyed by ice more than a year ago.
